The former residence of Max Fern corner of Pequot avenue and School street, which was damaged by fire Christmas eve, was sold at public auction Saturday afternoon, the purchaser being Contractor Michael L. O'Connell, who paid $5,600 for the place. There were six bidders and the sale opened with a bid of $5,000. Prior was increased by $25 and $50 bids until Mr. O'Connell had the price at which the place was sold. It is understood that the owner will cause the place to be repaired at once and made ready for occupancy as a residence.

Mabel Cooper, colored, admitted in the police court today when she was accepted, that she was the keeper of a house of very ill repute at 14 Federal street. Gertrude Scott, chocolate colored, made the admission that she resided in the house and that she was there for purposes not permitted under the laws of the land and of the state of Connecticut, in particular. The house was raided by the police last night. They had been advised by a woman who said her sweetheart to whom she is engaged to be married was in a habit of visiting the Cooper house. The complainant declined that he should be kept away and that he should be warned that he was making a mistake in going there. The complainant was a colored woman. The police were instructed to watch the house and to satisfy themselves as to the character of it. This they did with the result that they were satisfied that the place was a den. When they saw a couple of sailors from the sub base loitering about the Cooper house and then saw them go in, apparently at the suggestion of the Cooper woman, they made their visit. They found the sailors Bateman and Carmenita the former in a room with Gertrude and the latter in the parlor with the boss of the place. Bateman admitted that he had spent $3 in the house, but his comp nion declared that he was there only to be the companion of his shipmate. He would not admit that his motive in frequenting the house was anything but the best, but it was shown by the testimony that the contrary was true. Mrs. Cooper was fined $100 and ordered to spend a term in jail, but that part of the penalty was suspended and she was ordered to get out of town at her earliest convenience. The Scott woman was fined $25. She was also told that she was not a desirable citizen for New London. The sailors were fined $5 each.

Charles Pearl was charged with the theft of a gold watch and chain from Samuel Katz. Pearl secured a bond when he was arrested and accused, but the surety on it withdrew today when it became necessary to postpone the case till Wednesday and Pearl hustled and got another surety. It is understood that he denies that he stole the watch. His bail bond is $200.

Paul Gager was fined $25 for reck- less operation of an automobile on the Norwich road. Gager dodged the facts as well as he could, but he did not succeed in getting judgment of not guilty. When asked if he had been imbibing intoxicating liquor he was silent and would not answer at all, though State Policeman Morin declared that Gager's breath had a strong odor of liquor. Gager attempted to convince the court that he did not know his machine hit one that was alongside the road where repairs to a tire were in progress, but he made a mess of that attempt.

Ralph W. Tucker was fined $100 for operating an automobile while he was drunk. He had no defense to make and said he would take the penalty. He had to do that and it came to him as soon as he made his statement. Tucker will not operate another automobile in some time.

Leonidas Dousis was found to be operating an auto without having a license in his possession. That cost him $3 and the expense of his arrest and trial.

Terrence Couzens and Edward Carlson was fined $5 each for intoxication. They paid and pondered over the lesson their experience brought to them.

A quartette of parking ordinance violators were given a hearing, but the court was lenient with them. They were W. C. Pathie and Edward Crandall of New London, Mrs. J. C. Bridgeman of Old Lyme and Frank Bergman of Mystic. Their offenses were those of absent-mindedness rather than of defiance of the city's regulation of automobile driving.

JOSEPH MENGHI ADMITS ASSAULT ON GIRL OF FOUR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 20—Charged with criminal assault upon a four and a half year old girl, Joseph Menghi, 25, of 57 Walbach street, employed as a mason's helper, is under arrest and will be given a hearing before Judge S. Victor Prince in the police court tomorrow morning. Menghi's bond was placed at $10,000, but he managed to secure his release three hours after his arrest when his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Menghi, of Chelsea street, and Lorena Montali, of Shaw street, became sureties on the bond.

The child was at play near her home at Ocean Beach, when she wandered to a cottage under course of construction nearby, where the accused was at work. When Menghi observed the child at the cottage he is alleged to have enticed her into the building and then started in to take liberties with her. Menghi is then alleged to have committed the assault.

A short time after the alleged attack upon the girl, the latter returned to her home and her mother observing her nervousness, questioned her and it was then revealed what had occurred. The woman informed her husband and the latter complained to the police. Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray, going to the shore resort, obtained information that pointed to Menghi as the guilty person. Menghi, however, had left the cottage and had gone to a house on Morgan street. The officer went to the latter place and finding Menghi, the latter was placed under arrested. The accused was taken to Ocean Beach, where the child identified him as her assailant and the mother identified him as the man she had observed leaving the cottage where the alleged assault took place a few minutes before her daughter returned home and told of the attack upon her.

Menghi is married and has two children.

He made a confession late this afternoon in which he admitted everything charged against him.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

During the past week there were eight building permits issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton, bringing the total for the month to approximately 35 permits, a figure well in advance of the normal average. Included in this week's permits is one for a two-apartment house on Otis street for F. S. Armstrong. The total valuation of the new buildings described in the permits is approximately $36,000 as placed by the owners.

The work on several of the larger projects now in hand is progressing favorably and many of the new buildings in the outskirts of the city have been started. At the old Y. M. C. A. building on Broadway, now being remodeled for N. S. Gilbert and Son, the workmen are engaged in ripping out the partitions and second floor at the present time. At the Sellas block on Franklin square the tile floors in the stores on the ground floor are being laid and the stairway to the second story is being built.

The permits issued by Fire Marshal Stanton are as follows:

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

New York, April 20—Stock prices opened irregular and then turned reactionary in the market following a sharp break in some of the motor shares and specialties, and a renewal of selling pressure against the St. Paul and Chicago and Alton issues, which broke to new low prices. Trading was in moderate volume, the day's sales running over one million shares.

Maxwell Motors O broke from 86 1-2 to 81 when a large block of stock was pressed for sale soon after the opening, rallying later to 82 1-2, or 4 1-4 points below Saturday's close. Maxwell A reached a new peak price at 111 and then staged 6 to 109 5-8 for a net gain of 5-8 on the day. Mack truck closed 2 1-4 points lower at 148 1-2 after selling as high has 152.

Bullish operations were successfully conducted in the Pierce Arrow issues on the announcement that the company had paid off $550,000 in bank loans and that spring business was unusually good. The common touched a new high at 17 5-8.

The preferred at 40 3-4 and the prior preferred at 99, all closing 1 to 2 points. The Willys Overland issues showed fractional gains

United States Steel common, which had crossed 118 in the early trading, ranged to 116 7-8 following the publication of Chairman Gary's remarks at the annual meeting of stockholders which were generally construed as holding out little hope for an increase in the present rate of dividends. Baldwin dropped 3 points to 114 1-4 while American Can, American Locomotive, Dupont, General Electric, Internal Combustion Engineering, Marine Preferred, Radio Corporation and Utah securities were among the many popular issues to drop back 1 to 2 points. Heavy selling of American Sugar Refining which broke nearly 5 points at 67 3-4, was based on unconfirmed rumors that no dividend would be paid at the May meeting of the directors. Other sugar shares yielded in sympathy. Sugar cane preferred dropped more than two points to 35 3-4. New York Canners, which was bid up sharply last night in anticipation of an early increase in the present $2 dividend, slipped back 1 3-8 points to 33 7/8 profit-taking. Revival of activity in Consolidated Distributors, which touched a new high on the movement, was based on reports of business expansion.

United States Cast Iron Pipe broke nine points to 147, a new low for the year and more than 100 points below the year's high, in further reflection of selling inspired by French competition. Other outstanding weak spots were American Car and Foundry, the Commercial Solvents issues, Nash motors, Savage Arms and Texas Gulf Sulphur, off 2 to 6 points.

American Tobacco issues showed independent strength, closing nearly 3 points higher. Good buying also was noted in Fisher Body, United States Industrial Alcohol, United States Realty, Pressed Steel Car, U. S. Smelting and Corn Products, the last named crossing par to a new high for the year.

St. Paul common and preferred touched record lows at 3 1-4 and 7 1-8, respectively, on publication of reports that a federal investigation of the recent receivership was threatened. A break in the Chicago and Alton issues was attributed to the report that Senator Capper had demanded an investigation of the contemplated merger of Southwestern carriers. Frisco common was strong, advancing 2 3-4 points to 72 1-8.

Calling of about $15,000,000 in bank loans was a result of the decline in reserve shown in the weekly clearing house statement last Saturday failed to have any effect on the call money rates which ruled unchanged at 3 1-2 per cent., maturities up to ninety days being available at the lower figure.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet with the rates showing a slightly easier tendency. Demand sterling and French francs ruled practically unchanged at 84.78 1-2 and 5.21 1-2 cents respectively. The Scandinavian exchanges were heavy, Danish kroner breaking 18 points to 18.33 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 20—Reactionary tendencies were conspicuous in the bond trading, although they failed to check completely the upward movement of prices. Quiet accumulation of standard railroad and industrial issues gave the market a firm undertone although surface dealings were ruffled by selling of the western rail and some of the oil liens.

Selling pressure was concentrated mainly against the "receivership rails"—Chicago & Alton and St. Paul. Following breaks in the stocks of these companies, the bond issues also slumped badly, losing one to two points. Reports that a federal investigation of the St. Paul receivership was threatened and that a government inquiry into proposed southwestern rail mergers had been requested contributed to the weakness of these bonds.

Other heavy spots in the rail group were Pennsylvania General 4 1-2s and Norfolk & Western convertible 6s, both of which yielded more than a point. These losses were partially contracted by the moderate improvement of Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville and Nashville and Northern Pacific 4s and Reading 4 1-2s.

Pan-American and Sinclair oil bonds again turned reactionary, but motor, rubber and chemical company liens displayed a firm tone. United States and foreign government obligations were irregular, moving within narrow limits.

Negotiations have been virtually completed for the sale by New York bankers of a $3,000,000 bond issue for the Tyrol Hydro Electric Power company, guaranteed jointly by the state of Tyrol and the city of Innsbruck.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, April 20—Unfavorable reports about the condition of domestic winter wheat, together with 6,768,000 bushels falling off in world shipments and a decrease of 2,141,000 bushels in the United States visible supply total led to a sharp advance in wheat prices after an early downturn. The wheat market closed strong, 1 3-4 to 3 1-2c. Net higher, May $1.50 1-4 to 1.

STOECKEL SAYS DRIVERS SHOULD SHOW "MANNERS"

An appeal for good manners among motor vehicle operators as a factor in the safety movement as well as a contributor to pleasant driving conditions is made by the state motor vehicle department in its April bulletin, under the heading, "The Golden Rule on the Highways." Mud-splashers, horn-tooters, "road-hogs," headlight offenders, obstructionists, speed "experts" and the "dent-you-dare" type of pedestrians are dealt with at some length in an article written by Commissioner Stoeckel.

"To be a good driver, in the terms of applied ethics," says the bulletin, "is to be a person of good manners, truly an altruist, ready to see and appreciate the problems of others, to make proper allowances for them and to exercise even a little more patience, care and consideration than is actually called for by the letter of any law."

It is pointed out that "a code of ethics for the automobile driver is a code of guardianship over everybody and everything."

Many drivers are not intentionally discourteous, the bulletin says, citing the case of the man who in most relations shows the utmost consideration for his neighbors but is often found on the highway with glaring headlights "which are a nuisance and a discourtesy." The view is taken that this type of man is usually not aware of the discomfort his headlights give to others. The remedy suggested is that all drivers take pains periodically to see that the headlights of their cars are properly aimed and focused.

The driver who deliberately drives through mud puddles in such a way as to cause mud to splash on pedestrians will find little sympathy in the department. The bulletin asks that all such cases be reported for discipline by the commissioner.

"The man who shows his expertness by swiftly weaving in and out of a moderately moving stream of traffic ought to be suppressed," continues the bulletin. He is regarded as a menace not only to other cars on the highway but to the safety of the passengers in his car.

Attention is given in the bulletin to practically all kinds of discourtesy or bad manners on the part of drivers, not the least of which, are those of refusing to yield the right of way, failing to give reasonable warnings of approach, unnecessarily "honking" the automobile horn or permitting the brakes to squeak, "tearing the traffic officer," "hogging" the middle of the road, obstructing crosswalks and making unreasonable speed in traffic.

Unfair pedestrians also receive attention in the publication. One of the aggravating types mentioned is that of the person "who affects, if he really does not feel it, an attitude towards motor vehicles based on the idea that because he never has been hit by a car all motorists will look out for him and give him a wide berth." The bulletin concludes that there is something lacking in the make-up of such a person "and if is unfortunately the duty and perhaps the privilege of the motor vehicle operator not to yield to the natural temptation to be 'rough' with him.

"There was an instance in Connecticut within a short time," according to the bulletin, "where a person allowed himself to be hit by an automobile, fell down and set up a howl, and upon being taken for investigation before a competent authority, offered repeatedly on the way to settle for fifteen dollars. It was found that he made a practice of this kind of thing. This was the first instance of this sort which the department of motor vehicles has heard of in America, but the practice has been common in some foreign countries."

Reverting to the attitude of motor vehicle operators, the bulletin concludes: "The exercise of kindness to others, consideration and true courtesy will prevent any operator from getting a wrong attitude of mind for driving in traffic. Any operator who loses his temper, who becomes sulky or is abnormal from any one of many different causes is unfit to drive because his automobile provides a medium of expression for his personality and if that personality is upset, either temporarily or permanently, he is bound to make trouble either for himself or for others or generally for both."

COMPENSATION AWARD FOR WIDOW OF W. OGGA

A workmen's compensation award by stipulation has been made by Commissioner J. J. Donahue in the case of Mrs. Catherzina Ogga, dependent widow of the late Wicentym Ogga, of 17 Dime street, Jewett City, claimant, against the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., of New York city, employer, and the company carrying the compensation insurance for the life insurance company.

The commissioner awards to the claimant, compensation at the rate of $18 per week for a period of 312 weeks from March 16, 1925, accrued payments to be made at once in a lump sum to date of the award, April 15, and weekly hereafter during the remainder of the 312-week period, all of which is to be paid by the respondents who are also to assume payments of any reasonable medical, surgical or hospital bills incurred of said injuries, also that the respondents shall pay the sum of $100 toward funeral expenses.

It is found, the commissioner says, that on March 15, 1925, the employe in question met with an accident, arising out of and in the cause of his employment in or near Jewett City, when the automobile in which the employe was riding ran off the highway causing it to catch fire, severely burning the employe, so that he died as a result of said burns at the Backus hospital in Norwich on March 24, 1925.

The employe left surviving him his wife, who is the claimant, and the following nine minor children: Annie and Helen, aged 13 years; Josephine aged 11 years; Sofie, aged 10 years; Bridget, aged 8 years; Irene, aged 6 years; Mary, aged 4 years; Victoria, aged 3 years, and a baby, Madeline, aged nine months.

It is found that the wife and nine minor children are total dependents of the deceased, living with him and being supported by him at the time of his injury and subsequent death, and as such are entitled to the compensation provided by the workmen's compensation act in such cases.

It has been agreed that payments of the maximum amount of compensation shall be paid to the claimant, same to date from March 16, 1925, and to continue for not more than 312 weeks provided by the act in death cases.

LETENDRE BUYS MONTGOMERY'S CRESCENT BEACH PROPERTY

George Letender of this city on Monday closed a deal for the purchase of the Robert H. Montgomery property on the beach front at Crescent Beach. This property is one of the choicest on the beach and includes a modern three story frame building and is situated on the middle lot of three which Mr. Letendre also purchased, giving him a spacious lawn on both sides of his building. The property has a 150-foot frontage on the beach and a fine view is to be had from all parts of the spacious verandas.

Mr. Letendre intends to build a large addition on the rear of the building in which will be located a large dining room and kitchen. Several weeks ago his hotel property at the beach which is located near what is known as "The Tabernacle" was destroyed by fire and was practically a total loss. As it was impossible to build on the site where the fire occurred in time for this season's business, Mr. Letender immediately started negotiations for the Montgomery property with the result that the deal was consummated on Monday

SUES CITY FOR FALL A YEAR AGO ON SIDEWALK ON UNION STREET

In a suit filed in the superior court and returnable in June, Mrs. Alice V. Enos of 29 Union St., seeks damages of $1,500 from the city of Norwich for injuries she received in a fall on Union street on Sunday morning, April 20, 1924. It is alleged that there was a large hole or depression in the sidewalk in front of No. 35 Union St., with an old tree stump that projected above the surface of the sidewalk. This is where the plaintiff had her fall, through which she bruised and sprained the muscles and ligaments of her right arm, bursting a blood vessel and causing the arm to become partially paralyzed. It is alleged the arm is permanently injured and that the plaintiff spent much money for medical treatment and was obliged to hire an assistant to do her housework for a long period of time.

LEDYARD FARM LESSON SUES HIS LANDLORD

Damages of $2,000 and an injunction against Edmund B. Lewis of Ledyard are sought in a suit brought in the court by Charles N. Burdick of Ledyard. It is alleged that on Aug. 16, 1924, a verbal lease of a farm in Ledyard was entered into, the plaintiff taking possession on Sept. 15, 1924, but in March, 1925, Lewis demanded possession and attempted to take summary proceeding to obtain possession. It is further alleged that Lewis comes to the farm from time to time and forcibly carries off personal property needed to operate the farm, interferes with the operation of the farm by constant intimidation, making it impossible for Burdick to do anything but stand on guard. Up to the present time there has been practically no benefit to the plaintiff from the occupation of the property, and the conduct of Lewis, his interference, intimidation, charges of theft and negligence have caused and will cause Burdick inseparable injury and he has no adequate remedy at law.

The injunction is sought to restrain Lewis from interfering with Burdick's peaceful possession of the farm until April 1, 1926.

LETTUCE IN ROLE OF PROTECTIVE FOODS

Lettuce, as a medium for carrying food mixtures of various kinds has passed from its role in background into the forefront of importance says the weekly bulletin issued by the state department of health. Lettuce is one of those green leafy vegetables called by McCollum the "protective foods." Such foods are known to be rich in vitamins A, B and C, which recent scientific work has shown to be so essential to growth and health. Furthermore, lettuce has another point in its favor since it is one of the vegetables which is eaten raw. Nutrition research has shown that vitamin C is easily destroyed by cooking. This vitamin, while a specific cure for and preventive against scurvy, is also known to play a part in normal nutrition for adults as well as children.

To be assured of a sufficient supply of vitamin C it is wise to eat some raw food each day. This we do when we eat fresh fruit such as oranges, apples and berries, and certain vegetables such as celery, tomatoes, and lettuce in its various guises.

Lettuce is now considered a "food form" not in its decorative capacity, but as an essential part of the meal. At dinner served in its simplest form with a light salad dressing only, it helps to balance those more hearty foods such as meats, breads and rich pastries. Or, properly accompanied by other foods such as eggs, fish, vegetables or combinations of these, the salad may well become the main luncheon dish. Should one choose at lunch a vegetable salad containing carrots, celery, peas, potatoes, or raw cabbage, with a glass of milk and some bread instead of the meat, rich gravy and pastry luncheon, one would find oneself better equipped to take up the problems demanding attention immediately afterward.

"Had your salad today?" might well become a health slogan. As soon as families recognize the need of a salad a day the year round health will advance accordingly. Since salad greens add to the diet by virtue of the fact that they are a vitamin-rich, raw food, precaution should be taken to clean the salad leaves thoroughly. Only by immersing these in water and washing each leaf thoroughly is one assured that they are relieved of all dirt and germs which may have lurked there from their recent contact with garden soil.

Eastern Connecticut Health

No cases of communicable diseases were reported from Norwich during the week ending April 11th, according to the weekly morbidity report issued by the state department of health. From eastern Connecticut towns communicable diseases were reported as follows:

Diphtheria—Groton 2, Rockville 1, Plainfield 1, Putnam 1.

Scarlet fever—Groton 3, Pomfret 1, Putnam 21, Willimantic 2, Woodstock 3.

Typhoid fever—Montville 1.

Measles—None.

Whooping cough—Groton 2, Jewett City 1, Montville 1, New London 4.

CONTAMINATION OF WATER BY CROSS CONNECTIONS

Danger From Cross Connections is the caption of an article on city water supplies which appears in the weekly health bulletin issued by the state department of health. The article follows:

The State Department of Health is constantly endeavoring to impress upon the officials in charge of public water supplies the danger of possible contamination by cross connections with impure supplies from polluted brooks, rivers and ponds. Connecticut is a manufacturing state and the number of such cross connections is large. Hartford and Stamford now prohibit cross connections. Numerous cities throughout the country forbid the practice, and in some states, cross connections are now forbidden.

The severing of all cross connections undoubtedly involves considerable expense but if we place the customary economic value of $5,000 on every human life, from the economic viewpoint alone it is worth while. Every now and then a new case occurs where neglect to recognize the danger of cross connections harvests a toll of sickness or loss of human life.

The Illinois Department of Health reports that in December 1924, and January 1925, 12 cases of typhoid fever were reported in Sterling and Rock Falls. The two communities, located on opposite banks of the sewage polluted Rock River have a common [illegible] supply owned by [illegible] Water Company. Against advice from the State Department of Health that the cross connection should be discontinued was ignored.

Investigation by the Illinois State Department of Health showed that all the cases were among employes of a factory which maintained a private supply from the polluted river, separated from the public drinking water supply in the factory by a check valve and globe valve. The pressure on the private supply was greater than the public supply. Pressure gages placed on either side of the valves showed that the globe valve, when shut, leaked, as did the check valve. The employes who became sick all worked on the second floor and a study of the hydraulics of the piping showed that the leakage would be expected to pass to the second floor.

Even though the pressure on a private supply line is normally lower than the public supply, a break on a main may lower the city pressure and cause trouble.

The factory management, in the opinion of the State Board of Health (see "Engineering News-Record," of March 26, page 527) is responsible for this illness, but in turn the water company and the city officials of the two communities share the responsibility. There have been two deaths.

Is your community going to combat the cross connection menace or wait for such a lesson?

PAPERBOARD CO. RECEIVER CAN BORROW $10,000

Judge Edwin C. Dickenson of the superior court has issued an order to Frank W. Browning, receiver of the American Paperboard Co., to borrow $10,000, according to the terms of an application made by the receiver.

In his application Receiver Browning states:

That on March 19, 1925, as temporary receiver, he was authorized to borrow $5,000 for the purpose of paying the pay roll of the Uncas Paperboard Co., due at that time. This order provided for the payment of said $5,000 out of the first available funds in his hands. The receiver has paid said note for $5,000.

That on March 30, 1925, the temporary receiver was authorized to borrow the sum of $12,500 for the purpose of paying for a barge of oil and the receiver now has on hand cash and negotiable notes to that approximate amount to pay said note for $12,500. Also that receiver borrowed the sum of $1,335.91 to pay for insurance on the assets of the company.

Said note constitutes a lien upon and a preferred claim against the assets of the corporation in the hands of the receiver.

The sum of $2,500 was borrowed for the general expenses of the receivership business, which is to be paid out of the first available funds in his hands.

With the exception of the $2,500 note, all have been discounted by the Thames National Bank of Norwich, one of the largest creditors of this receivership estate.

The receiver has outstanding accounts receivable due to him as receiver from product manufactured and sold under the receivership which is far in excess of the amount authorized to borrow.

The Thames National Bank has in view of the terms of the orders of the notes and certificates issued requested the receiver to pay these notes before honoring any further checks of the receiver drawn on its bank where funds belonging to the receivership estate are banked.

The receiver believes that it is for the best interests of the receivership estate that he be authorized and empowered to borrow a sum of money not to exceed the sum of $10,000 for use in carrying on the business of this corporation, and issue receiver's notes or receiver's certificates, which notes or receiver's certificates shall be and constitute a lien upon a preferred claim against the assets of the corporation now in the hands of the receiver, subject to liens and mortgages on said assets on March 14, 1926, and to be paid out of the proceeds of any sale made in this cause of any funds that shall come into the hands of the receiver which can be made applicable.

Judge Dickenson has granted Frank W. Browning, receiver for the Uncas Paperboard Co., of Thamesville authority to negotiate as receiver such trade acceptances, notes or other negotiable instruments to any person or corporation as may be received by him in the course of the carrying on the business of this company from its customers at a rate of interest, however, not to exceed 6 per cent.

Frank W. Borwning receiver, represents in his application that in the carrying on of the business of this company, the receiver is obliged to take in payment for the goods manufactured and sold by him as receiver, the trade acceptances, notes and other negotiable instruments of various customers.

That the receiver believes it to be for the best interests of the receivership estate that he should have authority to negotiate and discount said negotiable instruments with any persons or corporation so that the proceeds of such negotiable instruments will be immediately available to him for use as receiver in carrying on business.

Storrs, Conn., April 20—William F. Kirkpatrick, head of the poultry department of the Connecticut Agricultural college, has been made a member of the committee of arrangements for the third world's poultry congress, to be held in Ottawa in 1927, according to dispatches received from England today. The appointment came through the office of Edward Brown of London, president of the International Association of Poultry Instructors.

The World's Poultry congress was first held in 1921, and present plans call for a meeting of the congress every three years in different parts of the world. Instructors and investigators in poultry husbandry from various countries are sent as delegates to this congress, which through a series of meetings and discussions enables its members to obtain a world viewpoint on matters pertaining to poultry husbandry.

Professor Kirkpatrick's appointment will find favor among poultrymen in general, for in addition to his work as head of one of the leading college poultry departments in the country, he served last summer as a delegate to the second World's Poultry congress, which was held in Barcelona, Spain.

The Canadian government is inviting the poultry congress to Ottawa for its third session, and the first meeting of the committee on arrangements will be held sometime next month.

ANNULMENT OF MARRIAGE DENIED BY JUDGE BROWN

In a decision handed down Monday, Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court denies the petition of George Francis Smith of New London, for annulment of his marriage to Madeline Mulligan Smith.

The judge finds that the petitioner failed to establish his claim that he had been induced to marry the defendant by fraudulent representations.

In his memorandum of decision Judge Brown says:

The plaintiff in this case seeks a divorce upon the ground that he was induced to marry the defendant by her false and fraudulent representation that she was at the time of the marriage single and unmarried, whereas in fact she was at the time the legal wife of one Reynolds.

The undisputed evidence disclosed that prior to her marriage to the plaintiff, a marriage ceremony in which the defendant and Reynolds were the principals, was performed at Brewster, New York, and that subsequently the defendant discovered that Reynolds at the time was a married man with a wife and children living. Upon such circumstances the weight of authority seems to be that marriage of the defendant with Reynolds was void, and she could therefore legally re-marry without any decree of court annualling the same. But even though this be not the law, the plaintiff in the present case failed to prove that Reynolds at the time when the plaintiff and defendant were married, June 10, 1922, was still living, and had not been divorced from the defendant. Furthermore, the plaintiff upon the witness stand in this case, admitted that before he married her, he knew the prior alleged marriage of the defendant and Reynolds, which of itself is conclusive that he was not induced to marry the defendant by the fraudulent representation of the defendant as alleged.

I, therefore, find that the plaintiff has failed to sustain the burden of proof which is his and that he is therefore not entitled to a divorce in this action.

BULLARD'S BARN BURNED WITH 20 HEAD OF CATTLE

A two story frame barn and 35 foot silo were destroyed and 20 head of registered Ayrshire cattle were burned to death in an early morning fire Monday on the farm occupied by George A. Bullard at the foot of Fitch Hill on the Norwich-New London highway. The fire, cause unknown, was discovered about 3:30 o'clock by Mr. Bullard who saw the glare through a window in his house. The barn is about 500 feet from the house.

Word was telephoned to the Norwich fire department and Squad A was sent to the scene. Although the barn and silo were burned down all the surrounding property was saved.

People for miles around were attracted to the scene by the reflection in the sky and a bucket brigade was formed to help protect the remaining buildings. The loss which is about $3,000 is covered by insurance.

Incendiarism is suspected as the cause of the fire as it is thought that the cattle mutilator may be responsible. Mr Bullard stated that there had been no light in the barn since Saturday. Neighbors report having seen several suspicious persons in the vicinity of the farm last week.

This is Mr. Bullard's second loss by fire. About three years ago, Mr. Bullard suffered a similar loss. At that time fire destroyed his barn, a pair of mules and a quantity of farm implements.

POETRY

Concord Hymn

(Note—This hymn was composed by Ralph Waldo Emerson to be sung at the dedication of the Concord battle monument, April 19, 1836. The 150th anniversary of the battle of Concord is being celebrated this month. The government has issued memorial stamps for the occasion.)

By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,
Here once the embattled farmers stood
And fired the shot heard 'round the world.

The foe long since in silence slept;
Alike the conqueror silent sleeps;
And time the ruined bridge has swept
Down the dark stream which seaward creeps.

On this green bank, by this soft stream,
We set today a votive stone;
That memory may their deed redeem,
When, like our sires, our sons are gone.

Spirit, that made those heroes dare
To die, and leave their children free,
Bid time and nature gentle be,
And make us worthy of our sires.

April Rain

It is not raining rain for me,
It's raining daffodils;
In every dimpled cup I see
Wild flowers on the hills.

The clouds of gray engulf the day
And overwhelm the town;
It is not raining rain to me,
It's raining roses down.

It is not raining rain to me,
But fields of clover bloom,
Where any buccaneering bee
Can find a bed and room.

A health unto the happy,
A fig for him who frets!
It is not raining rain to me
It's raining violets.

38 SEAMEN WENT DOWN WITH JAPANESE FREIGHT STEAMER

The Raifuku Maru Sank in Raging North Atlantic Seas 180 Miles South and West of Sable Island—Passengers and Crews of the Cunard Liner Tuscania and the Homeric of the White Star Line Were Helpless Spectators of Tragedy of the Sea—Launching of Lifeboats in the Boiling Seas Would Have Been Suicidal.

New York, April 21—Thirty-eight Japanese seamen, the entire crew of the Japanese steel freighter Raifuku Maru, were drowned in the raging North Atlantic seas when their ship sank under the eyes of two shiploads of humanity unable to help them.

Two ocean liners, the Cunarder Tuscania, and the Homeric of the White Star Line, futilely stood by as the seas gulped down men and boat, their decks filled with agonized Atlantic voyagers. A wail went up from the helpless spectators as the stricken ship opened her stern and plunged beneath the waves.

Rescue was impossible. It would have been suicide to launch lifeboats into the boiling waves that churned the luckless crew to inevitable, quick death.

"Regret unable to save life," read a laconic message wirelessed to the White Star offices here by Captain John Roberts of the Homeric a few minutes after the Raifuku Maru sank. Gilding the air close upon Captain Roberts' message came this from the Tuscania:

"Tuscania arrived at S. O. S. in time to see her sink with all lives lost. Rescue impossible."

A detailed story of the disaster, which occurred 180 miles south and west of Sable Island, will not be known until the Homeric, New York bound from Southampton, arrives tomorrow. The grim story of the hours the thirty-eight spent in their hopeless struggle with the sea probably never will be known. All that is known now has been pieced together from the meagre reports sent through the air from the stricken steamer and the ships that sought to aid her. The "high lights" of the tale are supplied in two of these messages.

"Ship 19 degrees low. Not very danger. Please quick assist."

It was this message, with its quaint language of the Raifuku Maru's captain, that rang a "full speed ahead" signal aboard the Homeric, and sent it plunging through the wind and waves in its futile race against death. The message for help was sent out shortly after 4 o'clock this morning.

Hours later, Captain Roberts sent this message to his line's offices:

"The Homeric proceeded to the assistance of the Raifuku Maru at 4:47 a. m. eastern standard time and sighted the steamer at 10:54. The steamer sank at 11:53 in latitude 41.43 North; longitude 61.39 West. Regret was unable to save life. Proceeded on voyage at 12:03 this afternoon."

This marked the end of the stricken freighter's seven hour struggle against the monstrous battering rams of a half gale that had swept the waves throughout much of this time her crew was helplessly trapped, for her life boats had been smashed by the thundering seas. The ship, of 5,467 gross tons, listed badly, her bulk cargo of wheat having shifted in her hold.

Many vessels and shore stations heard the S. O. S. calls. The Homeric, 45 miles off, and Tuscania, 63 miles away, as well as the Scythia of the Cunard line, and the Greek liner King Alexander, with two tugs from Halifax and Canso, set off for the rescue, sending reassuring messages to the stricken boat. It later was estimated that her position was a scant 600 miles from the scene of the Titantic disaster.

As the racing boat plunged ahead, tragic messages in the Japanese captain's broken English were picked out of the teeth of the half gale.

"Ship meeting heavy weather and held starboard 28 degrees," came one at 6:59. "Smashed lifeboats inboard. In danger."

Eleven minutes later a garbled message came through the gale. "Now in danger but coming lifeboat from sixty miles there," was the best the receiving stations could make of it. Then, at 9 o'clock, the last message, in staccato words:

"Now very danger. Come quick."

The Homeric arrived first. Her awed passengers and crew saw the foundering vessel with her decks awash and the pathetic figures of her storm lashed crew clinging to the superstructure. A short time later the Tuscania hove into sight. But both liners were held helpless by the high seas and wind and had no choice but to stand by and watch the sailors perish with their ship.

The Raifuku Maru, built in 1919, and the property of the Korusai Kisben Kabushiki Kaishi, of Kobe, left Philadelphia with her wheat cargo April 3, arrived in Boston April 4, and left that port for Hamburg April 18. It was the local offices of this company that gave out the number of the crew aboard, under command of Captain Izeki Company officials said they estimated their loss at $300,000, not including the value of the 7,200 tons of wheat in her cargo.

The messages received tonight at the offices of the White Star Line from Captain Roberts of the Homeric furnished more details of the futile race of the liner to the assistance of the sinking Japanese [illegible]

The first received from a request for further information, read:

"Proceeded to the assistance of the Raifuku Maru and arrived as the ship was foundering. Regret I was unable to save life, owing to heavy gale and mountainous seas."

The second message, which with the previous ones from the Homeric pieced out the story of the sea tragedy, follows:

"At 11 a. m. eastern standard time approached as near as possible in a terrific sea. No boats could be seen and the crew were leaving by the weather side. The ship was on her beam's end. It was impossible to launch lifeboats. We pumped oil to windward to give them a lee. She capsized at 14:18 after which no life was seen on the wreckage or in the water. Impossible for any to have survived."

Interpreted by the White Star officials, the second message indicated that the Homeric tried to calm the waters by running oil on them, but that even this did not flatten the seas enough to permit the launching of lifeboats from the Homeric.

The doomed Japanese seamen with their lifeboats smashed, swarmed over the rail as the vessel listed and were either swept away by the sea or engulfed in the whirlpool created as the ship sank.

T. Kahno, general manager of the Kokusai Kisen Kabushiki Kaisha, absolved Captain Izeki of all blame for loss of the vessel and paid him a final tribute by classing him as one of the best commanders of the company's fleet of 100 vessels.

STEPHENSON PETITIONS FOR RELEASE ON BAIL

Indianapolis, Ind., April 21.—Admission to bail of D. C. Stephenson, Earl Klinick and Earl Gentry, the trio held on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the death one week ago of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, of Indianapolis, was asked in a petition filed today by their attorney. Judge James A. Collins said a hearing could be held on the petition on Monday, April 27.

DECLINES TO INTERFERE WITH EXECUTION OF BOY

Pittsville, Pa., April 21—Judge R. H. Koch late today handed down a decision refusing the appointment of a commission to inquire into the sanity of 15 year old William Cavalier who will be sentenced to the electric chair next week.

His attorneys announced they would appeal the case.

The court suggested an immediate appeal from his decision so that the state supreme court could pass upon the question. Judge Koch stated that if it had been alleged in the petition that Cavalier had become insane since his trial he would have granted the petition, but he refused to go into the general question of the boy's sanity after a jury had convicted him.

Counsel for Cavalier accepted the offer of the court to suspend the death sentence, which was to have been imposed next week, until the supreme court can pass upon the question of whether the sanity commission shall be appointed.

The petition for the sanity commission was presented by Fred Lennig, warden of the county jail, who stated that he considered the defendant insane.

COST OF NOT PLANNING IN CITY DEVELOPMENT

New York, April 21—Boston, which has had to spend $50,000,000 in recent years in widening and straightening streets, was cited as an example of the cost of not planning for the future, in city delevopment, by Philip Nichols, Boston attorney, addressing the International and Regional Planning conference today.

Deploring the haphazard way cities grew in colonial days, Mr. Nichols pointed to Washington and Philadelphia as examples of foresight in city planning. He said Boston streets seem to indicate that they follow the same trails as the cattle in early days.

LITTLE GIRL TOPPLED FROM HOTEL VERANDA

No bones were broken and so far as can be determined there were no internal injuries.

PROGRESS IN THE TRIAL OF SENATOR WHEE'

Great Falls, Mont., April 21—Legcounter-maneuvers began today at the trial of Senator Burton K. Wheeler as his attorneys took up the defense of their client, who is charged with wrongfully appearing before the department of the interior to prosecute oil prospecting permits after his election to the senate.

Without asking for a directed verdict, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief of defense counsel, began the examination of witnesses as court convened this morning.

He later announced that he had summoned four witnesses from the east in an effort to controvert the testimony of the government's star witness, George P. Hayes, New York attorney.

The government also had its inning when one witness testified that Edwin S. Booth, former solicitor for the interior department, was in communication with Hayes in March, 1923, regarding the affair of Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator, for whom, the government charges, wheeler prosecuted permits before the department.

A two-day adjournment of the trial was seen when Senator Walsh requested Federal Judge Frank S. Dietrich to allow time for defense witnesses to arrive from the east. The government offered no objection and Judge Dietrich took the request under advisement. His ruling will be made tomorrow.

Senator Walsh said he would produce a witness from Washington who would testify as to long distance telephone records in an effort to check Hayes' testimony.

Other witnesses, it was said, include Henry Stern of Buffalo, N. Y., and two character witnesses from New York.

Hayes testified yesterday that Booth called him from New York with reference to the Campbell permits and that Senator Wheeler had approached him [illegible] New York and asked that he appear before the department to prosecute Campbell's permits.

On the witness stand Booth said he had no recollection of such a telephone conversation, but A. H. Furr, his former secretary, later admitted he placed a call for Hayes in New York in March 1923, at Booth's request.

Booth admitted that he sent a statement of the condition of Campbell's [illegible] to Hayes on March 13, 1923.

K. P. Stewart, special assistant attorney-general, who is associated with District Attorney John L. Slattery in the prosecution, took over the cross-examination of Booth.

"Now, you sent a telegram to Mr. Hayes March 13, 1923, saying you were anxious to get in touch with him" Mr. Stewart asked. "What about?"

"The Gordon Campbell matter," Booth replied.

"And this was the first time you mentioned the Campbell matter to him?"

"Well, I wanted to see if Hayes was interested."

"And you say this related to the financing of Campbell's company and not to his appearance before the department of the interior in behalf of Campbell? How are you going to have this matter put up to Mr. Hayes when you had no list of permits involved in his properties?"

"Undoubtedly I would have arranged for him to meet Senator Wheeler."

Booth identified telegrams between himself and Hayes which showed that Hayes had agreed to meet teh solicitor in Washington on a certain date in March, 1923.

"Now do you mean to say," pursued Mr. Stewart, "that you did not use a telephone in the department of interior to call Mr. Hayes in New York to arrange for this meeting?"

"I don't say that I didn't; but I have no recollection of it."

He never attempted to get Mr. Hayes to appear before the department of the that a letter introduced by the government, related to the proposed financing of the Gordon Campbell company.

The defense then introduced copies of five letters that passed between booth and Hayes.

One, dated June 9, 1923, from Hayes to Booth, said:

"I tried to see you several times in Washington. I have financial conditions arranged for Campbell, but understand, he is dickering with some one else."

Another, written from Hayes to Booth, who is in Tulsa, Okla., said:

"I have been inquiring for you. I have about completed the matter of financing your friends in Montana but they have wired me to wait."

A third, dated April 28, 1923, at New York, said:

"I was in Washington Thursday and found you had resigned from the interior department, then went to the department of justice and found you were out. We are making a little more progress with your friend, Gordon Campbell."

It was signed with Hayes' name.

J. B. Fisher, of Great Falls, a former employe of Campbell, testified he was Campbell's "lineman" and that he watched maps and land holdings for the oil operator. He declared he had discussed land matters with Senator Wheeler, but never government permits.

Fire Is Consuming City Of Cananea, Mex.

Flames Are Raging in Rich Copper Mining Center of 20,000 Population — Hundreds Made Homeless.

Paris, April 21—Special dispatch to the Herald say hundreds are made homeless and property damage of approximately $500,000 was caused today by a fire which devastated a large portion of Cananea, Sonora, Mexico.

Flames were still raging tonight in the town, a rich copper mining center of 20,000 population. Fifteen business building and nearly two hundred homes have been consumed by the fire which started shortly after midnight last night and raged unabated throughout today.

A strong wind fanned the blaze. Police and fire departments and federal troops mustered forces and helped the panic-stricken residents to places of safety.

Blocks of the business and residential sections are charred embers tonight. The fire broke out in the business section and destroyed the Mercantile Bank building, the Royal Theatre and other business buildings. The wind then carried the sparks over a hill to the residential section where numerous buildings were wiped out. Sparks started another fire in the section known as "Old Cananea" where more than a hundred small residences and small stores were destroyed.

Only one fatality has been reported. A Chinese merchant perished in the flames.

ADDRESS BY PRESIDENT COOLIDGE BROADCASTED

New York, April 21.—An address by President Coolidge in which he sounded a message of peace and prosperity, tonight was broadcast from a specially prepared phono-film made a week ago at the White House, marking what was said to be the first attempt ever made to broadcast a voice from the motion picture screen.

The film, which recorded both the movements and voice of the president, was shown at the Friars club to visiting editors and publishers in New York, dinner guests of M. Koenigsberg, president of King Features Syndicate, International News Service and Universal Service. Dr. Lee DeForest personally supervised the making of the film and its projection while the Radio Corporation of America took charge of the broadcasting.

Tonight's demonstration, described as a notable scientific achievement, enabled the president to reach millions of persons with his message without taking active personal part in the immediate proceedings. Expressing his amazement at the wonder of the invention, President Coolidge said that he had chosen to speak of matters as old and familiar as the new process was new and novel.

"The nation holds a position unsurpassed in all former human experience," he said. "I do not profess that we can secure an era of perfection in earthly existence, but we can provide an era of peace and prosperity, attended with freedom and justice and made more and more satisfying by the amenities of life."

Reiterating his plea for economy in administrations of the charities and hugovernment, the president asserted that the national must make progress in an orderly, sound, common-sense way. The right of private property and self-government within limits "imposed not by the fist of man but by the law of the Creator," he described as the foundation of American government.

HARNESSING OF TIDES IN THE BAY OF FUNDY

Fredericton, N. B., April 21—Dexter P. Cooper, hydraulic engineer, who has spent many years working on a superpower plan by which the tides of the Bay of Fundy would be harnessed, said here today that he would present his proposals to the Dominion and Provincial governments, he came here to consult Premier Veniot regarding the plan.

The project would involve an estimated expenditure of $100,000,000 and result in development of 600,000 horsepower of continuous electric energy, it is asserted. The Maine legislature has passed a bill giving authority for the project, but as a dam and other works needed would extend into New Brunswick, both the provincial and Dominion governments must be consulted.

The work would be done in Passamaquoddy Bay, on the border between Maine and New Brunswick, at the mouth of the St. Croix river.

PRESIDENT CONCERNED OVER SHIPPING BOARD AFFAIRS

Washington, April 21—Concern for the administration of the shipping board's affairs prompted the recent letter of inquiry by President Coolidge to Chairman O'Connor of the board. With respect to the position of the commissioners who opposed the sale of the dollar interests of the five vessels in the California-Orient Line. The ships are at present operated by the Pacific Mail Line.

This, rather than the sale itself, was disclosed today as the important factor in the president's mind, but the question whether he contemplated any action as a result of the wide split in the board which developed over the sale, remained in doubt tonight. Reports that resignations might be called for or proffered went without confirmation as did suggestions that some reorganization of the board's functions might be looked for.

Two Revolts Under Way In Honduras

American Marines Were Landed at Ceiba Upon the Recommendation of the President of Honduras.

Washington, April 21—Two distinct anti-government movements are reported to be under way in Honduras, one on the north coast centering upon Ceiba and the other extending along the Guatemalan frontier.

Official reports received today added that the landing of 165 officers and men from the cruiser Denver at Ceiba yesterday had been urgently recommended by the president of Honduras, the governor and commandant at Ceiba, and the American consul, to provide protection for American lives which the local authorities were unable to give.

The situation on the north coast, advices said, was more or less local at present. Several hundred armed men have been active along the line of the Standard Fruit and Navigation Company railway near Ceiba, many of the troops in that region having been sent to take part in operations along the Guatemalan border.

On the night of April 16, the village of Monte Cristo, six miles from Ceiba, was raided. Owing to the shortage of military equipment in that region, the Honduras government was unable to fit out an adequate force to meet the situation.

Since early in March the Honduras military commandants along the Guatemalan frontier have reported almost daily movements of small armed armed bands in their respective department. Movements of small rebel bands along the Nicaraguan frontier also are reported to have taken place since April 1. The Nicaraguan forces are reported to have cooperated with the Honduras federal troops in pursuing raiding bjands.

Recent disorders at Octopeque and La Esperanso also were reported. Octopeque was said to have been captured last Wednesday by a force of several hundred members of bands organized by the revolutionists who called themselves the "reds."

TO CREATE INTESTATE ROADS AS U. S. HIGHWAYS

Washington, April 21.—Agreement was reached today at the closing session of the meeting of the joint board of state nad federal highway officials to create a group of interstate roads to be known as "United States highways," which will be designated with uniform markers.

Final decision on the selection of the highways and the style of signs will be reached August 3, when the board is to meet in Washington again. After a series of regional meetings throughout the country, to receive recommendations of state highway officials.

The board adopted the policy of the American Association of State Highway Officials concerning the "trials association" by agreeing to permit "reputable trails associations" now existing to continue their activities provided they do not conflict with state and federal policies.

A definite stand was taken, however, against further expansion by such associations, and a warning was issued urging all citizens "to investigate carefully the responsibility of trail organizers and demand convincing evidence insuring proper expenditure of funds before contributing to or otherwise supporting such agencies."

The symbol for marking the highways will be the outline of the United States shield with a yellow background and "U. S." in black letters, the route number in a lower corner, and the name of the state through which the road runs in an upper corner.

Tentatively the following signs were selected:

Luminous signs, yellow for caution, red for danger and green for clear. Non-luminous signs, yellow with black letters, round for railroad crossings, hexagon for danger-stop, diamond-caution—slow square attention—look, rectangular direction—information.

GOVERNMENT PROCEEDINGS AGAINST OIL COMPANIES

Washington, April 21.—The government has completed a brief in the proceedings against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Standard Oil of New Jersey, the Texas Company and about 50 other oil companies charged with monopoly of patent rights covering the oil "cracking process," for use at a hearing May 8 in Chicago before Circuit Judges Evans, Page and Anderson.

Through the alleged control of these patents, the department of justice holds the oil companies named in the litigation are permitted to control the production of gasoline.

FRENCH CHAMBER VOTED CONFIDENCE IN PAINLEVE

Vote of 304 to 218 Came After Nine Hours of Bitter Debate —Joseph Caillaux, the New Finance Minister, Was the Central Point of Attack—New Ministry Declared For "a Highly Qualified Representative at the Vatican"—Committed Itself to Efforts to Settle the Inter-Allied Debts in Connection With the Execution of the Dawes Reparation Plan.

Paris, April 21—(By the A. P.)—The chamber of deputies tonight gave Premier Paul Painleve and his government a vote of confidence, 304 to 218. The vote came after nine hours of bitter personal debate, in which Joseph Caillaux, the new finance minister, was the central point of attack. Caillaux, restored to power from prison and exile, was considered by the opposition as the most vulnerable spot in the armor of what has been designated the Painleve-Briand-Caillaux cabinet; but, staging the most impressive comeback in the history of the French political world, he weathered the fierce storm in the chamber.

The ministerial declaration, the context of which was virtually known previous to M. Painleve's presentation of it before the house, was a matter of secondary importance both for those within the chamber and the thousands surrounding the Palais Bourbon, who had come to see Caillaux.

The government in its declaration appealed for national concord and emphasized the need of real security for France. The ultimate imposition of drastic financial measure was foreshadowed in the statement that "when we have succeeded finally and definitely in balancing the budget, we will be obliged to ask big sacrifices of the nation."

The ministry declared for "a highly qualified representative at the Vatican, and apparently repudiated the idea of General Nollet, the former war minister, for shorter military service and a sort of army reorganization, which Marshal Foch is understood to have opposed. It promised peace to the Catholics and less friction with Alsace-Lorraine and committed itself to efforts to settle the inter-allied debts in connection with the execution of the Dawes reparation plan. M. Herriot's peace programme based on the Geneva protocol was the single plank unchanged from the previous ministry's platform.

The dominating idea of finance, which caused the downfall of the Herriot cabinet played only a small part in the debate, because M. Caillaux was not ready to propose measures. He spoke very briefly, more, it seemed, to renew contact with the speaker's rostrum than to make a financial declaration. He asked the chamber in a matter-of-fact tone to take into account the difficulties confronting a minister returning to a ministry which he found singularly unchanged.

It was at this point that he declared reference to the treasury: "I found it in a state which, although I do not wish to exaggerate, is very serious. It is choked." This confusion in the accounts and the abuse of special accounts must be considered as of the greatest importance, and he added: "I have no intention to increase the advances from the bank of France to the state.

The minister promised to have the 1925 budget voted as promptly as possible. He will strive to get the 1926 budget in parliament some time in June, and of it, he said: "The budget will be in exact balance, including all the expenditures of France covered by taxes and taxes alone if it becomes necessary to ask the country for new sacrifices with no hope of Faithful to my financial past I will remain inflexible on the man way who responsible for the voting of the first income tax in France."

DIRIGIBLE LOS ANGELES IN FLIGHT FOR BERMUDA

Lakehurst, N. J., April 21—Carrying the largest personnel in her history, the dirigible Los Angeles left this afternoon for Bermuda with prospects of a fair flight throughout the journey. She is expected to reach the islands before dawn tomorrow.

In addition to the regular crew of 28 men, there were aboard a number of extra army and naval officers as observers. Eight sacks of mail were carried.

A total of more than 50 men on board compared with the previous largest human cargo of forty-three men.

Without any delay, the huge dirigible turned her nose seaward after leaving the field here and was soon lost to sight. If the dirigible reaches Bermuda before dawn, as is expected, she will cruise about several hours before launching to the mooring mast of the U. S. S. Patoka, waiting there to receive her.

Weather reports from Bermuda indicated that the Los Angeles would have a clear fairway for the journey.

Captain George W. Steele was in command and Commander Jacob H. Klein was executive officer. After a stay of several hours in Bermuda, during which the mooring mast on the Patoka will be tested thoroughly, while official government calls are made by the dirigible officers and the observers, the Los Angeles will leave before sunset.

She is expected to return to her hangar here early Thursday morning.

DAWES ADDRESSED THE ANNUAL A. P. LUNCHEON

New York, April 21—Vice President Charles G. Dawes, addressing the twenty-fifth annual luncheon of the Associated Press in the Waldorf-Astoria today, continued his campaign for cloture in the United States senate and called upon the people, countless numbers of whom heard him by radio, to impress upon their individual senators and need for this reform.

Introduced by Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, as a "radiant personality" and a public official who has "cut out for himself a man-sized job," Mr. Dawes drove home his arguments with characteristic energy. Shaking his first vigorously as he talked of the effects of unlimited senatorial debate.

"What the people want is sincerity. There is no greater calamity to any many when he is ambitious than to have the right of unlimited debate. Why? Because through the years as he speaks on every subject at great length—wonderful speeches, sometimes —the American people are interpreting his character and motives and ambitions, and they come to know whether he is out for the accomplishment of public good, irrespective of its personal effect upon him, or another."

Between the luncheon courses and Mr. Noyes' presidential address, Mr. Dawes puffed briskly at his famous pipe. It came out of his pocket during the fruit course and he put it away only as he was being introduced. Between puffs he chatted with Mr. Noyes, General Pershing, Owen Young, his colleague in the reparations report, Melville E. Stone, counsellor and former general manager of the Associated Press and other guests at the speakers' table, once leaving his chair to converse with a friend several seats away.

"Too often the leader of a perfectly-run institution may be lost sight of. The members asked me to express to you that we have not lost sight of the splendid service you have performed for them and your country. Instead of signalizing only in silver anniversary, which signifies the past, we might pay tribute in suggesting the fiftieth anniversary that is to come. Therefore, instead of silver we had made it gold."

The accused was fined $50 and given a two months' jail sentence on an amended charge of assault and attempt at adultery.

The second case was that of Petro Laude and Giovannie Laude, 31, father and son, of Springfield, Mass., who pleaded guilty to the transportation of liquor without a United States government permit, on February 27. A second count of bribery which had appeared in the charge was nolled, upon recommendation of Assistant State's Attorney Howard W. Bradford. The father Petro Laude was fined $200 and costs and given a four months' jail sentence. Giovanna Laude was given a $300 fine and costs.

The Leone case occupied most of the session, Attorney Charles L. Torrey of Putnam, appeared for the defendant and Assistant State's Attorney Bradford for the prosecution was assisted by Attorney Arthur G. Bill, of Danielson. Mrs. Geer was the first witness. She testified that she and her husband and their 14 months' old child occupied a tenement in Dayville and Leone had a work shop on the floor underneath and according to the witness he often came to her door and during a four week period insisted on making improper proposals to Mrs. Geer, which she rejected. He once offered her money for her attentions and this she spurned. She told her husband of Leone's intrusions and he advised her to keep her door locked and refuse the man admission; but on the Saturday morning in question Leone came and said that he wanted to borrow something. On this pretext she allowed him to enter. He again asked her to have improper relations with him and when she refused he assaulted her. She states that Leone threw her to the floor and in order to carry out his purpose tore her clothing. In defending herself she broke a rocking horse over the head of the accused. The torn clothing was accepted as an exhibit in the case and examined.

On cross-examination by Attorney Torrey, plaintiff admitted meeting the defendant several times in her tenement and talking with him in his workshop. She told of the improper proposals and in describing the assault she stated that she did not make any outcry. Following the attack she went to Mrs. Mary Maley, a neighbor and acquainted her with the situation. Mrs. Maley told her to tell her husband, which she did.

Mrs. Maley said that when Mrs. Geer came to her home in an excited condition she showed her her torn clothing and displayed marks on her limbs which she said she sustained during her struggle with Leone.

Alden Geer, the husband, testified that an attempt had been made to make Leone settle quietly and avoid publicity on the matter, but this method had failed. The attorneys brought out the fact that a similar attempt to collect money from a Danielson physician on an alleged charge of assault on Mrs. Geer while the woman was receiving treatment at the office, had been made previously to this case and had failed. Both Mr. and Mrs. Geer admitted being mistaken regarding this alleged assault. Evidence to that effect was also given by Deputy Sheriff Charles Ayer, of Danielson, who listened to the proceedings from a room adjoining the physician's office.

Frank Seone's testimony clashed with that of the complaintnt. He denied flatly having had any improper relations with plaintiff. He stated that Mrs. Geer was a constant caller in his workshop, a shoe repairing establishment and that she tried in many ways to entice him to do wrong. He refused to be beguiled and on several occasions actually put her out of his shop. He did not see her until afternoon on the day of the alleged assault.

During the recital [illegible] Rosilla Martell of Fall River, Mass., an aunt of plaintiff, testified that she spent the first part of the week of April with her niece and during her visit Leone came into the Geer tenement every day and made improper suggestions to her niece. He even went so far as to make such proposals to herself, she stated, and wanted her to work for him and become his common law wife. She did work for him for two days, but refused to have any relations with accused.

Court recessed at 1 o'clock for luncheon. Upon reopening brief arguments were made by Attorneys Bradford and Torrey and Judge Nickerson gave his opinion that there was a case of assault, but an attempt at adultery rather than rape. He then imposed sentence.

WOMEN EVERYWHERE say:

"Chipso is the greatest labor-saver I have ever found"

Grocers tell us that, in all their retail experience, they have never known a product to sell as fast as Chipso.

There must be a real reason for such a phenomenal success.

There is not only one, but there are a dozen. Let Chipso users tell them in their own words.

A Louisville woman saves 2 hours every washday

This woman does the washing for six people every week. Our representative took down her comments word for word:

"I got a package of Chipso the other day, and tried it on my washing. Believe me, it was a big washing, too. It's wonderful: that washing would have taken me four hours normally, but I had it hanging up to dry in about two hours, and my clothes and bed-linens were as white as snow and looked like new. Besides, I wasn't worn out as I usually am on washday. Chipso is the most marvelous thing in the way of soap I have ever tried, and I think I've tried them all. You can count on me buying Chipso from now on."

This Boston housewife uses Chipso for everything

She was talking with a grocer. This is what she said:

"I'm glad you sell Chipso. I've become tired of feeling that I must buy a soap of some form for washing dishes, another for the washing machine, another for this and another for that. Do you know that Chipso will do wonderfully for all purposes where a household soap is needed? You can't sell me anything at twice the price that will do half as well."

You can buy Chipso at any good grocery. Two sizes, both large. Packed in blue and orange boxes. Try it today.

DISINFECT TOOLS WHEN PRUNING DISEASED TREES

Soce orchard men have not finished their pruning, and, therefore, it is not to late to give a warning in regard to spreading of infection of canker and blight through the orchard by not disinfecting the tools used in pruning. Apparently there is not a good understanding yet as to the necessity for such disinfection when cutting out diseased and dead limbs. A recent inspection of many orchards in the county has shown that there is more or less a widespread infection of these two diseases. Fire blight may be found in the small limbs on the main branches or even on the trunks of apple trees. It causes death of the tissues and spreads both up and down the limbs or trunks. In cutting out such diseased wood, the cut should be made back on new live tissue and the steel or shears should be carefully wiped with a solution of corosive sublimate 1 to 1000. Such branches as are removed should be burned to prevent further spread of the infection. Canker may be present in two forms, either of which is readily recognized by the decay and shrunken condition of nearby tissue or the corrugated, swollen appearance adjacent to the point of infection.

The same treatment is recommended for the tools when used in removing limbs that are diseased. If the tools are not so disinfected, subsequent cuts which are made on live tissues will commonly show a new entrance of the disease during the coming season.

HOW TO DESTROY ANTS AND ANT HILLS IN LAWNS

Many people find their lawns and gardens partially destroyed and encumbered by small ant hills during the spring and summer seasons. These ant hills are very common, especially on sandy soils and are a serious nuisance. There is one sure and very simple method of destroying them. Carbon di-sulphide, a colorless liquid, which can be procured from some druggist and wholesale houses, is the weapon used to exterminate the ants. A few ounces are poured into each ant hole and the opening closed with a mud cap to prevent the entrance of air. All ant holes in a colony should be treated in this way.

Sometimes it is possible and even necessary where there is a widespread infestation of ant colonies to makes holes in the ground with a broom handle or similar stick, five or six inches in depth and at intervals of six or eight inches over the infested area. These holes are then treated as has been advised for the ant holes.

Carbon di-sulphide is a very volatile liquid. The material and the gas formed is very inflammable and care should be used when handling it. It is a heavier than air gas and consequently penetrates downward through the under-ground channels and nearly always gives a complete destruction. I may be necessary, however, to follow this method more than once if the soil is badly infested. It has been used to a great extent in this lacility and proved very successful in all cases.

HOG-SANITATION SYSTEM GROWS IN POPULARITY

That the system of swine sanitation originated in the United States department of agriculture a few years ago is saving hog raisers large numbers of pigs and much money is shown by reports coming in continuously from various parts of the middle west. Illinois, where the system was first tried out in McLean county, has been taking up this new method of handling sows and young pigs with a great deal of energy, and the results obtained no doubt will stimulate increasing numbers of farmers to raise pigs under sanitary precautions which will keep them free of worms.

This spring 500 farmers in 57 Illinois counties gave all the pigs farrowed a good start by having them come in clean farrowing houses after the sows had been thoroughly scrubbed. The live-stock extension specialist of the University of Illinois considers that with this start half the battle in the economical production of pork has been won. He says the other half consists merely in keeping the pigs away from worm eggs until they are [illegible] at least 4 months of age, and to do that does not require skill, but merely determination and persistence.

Reports indicate that farmers who have raised pigs the sanitation way will not go back to the old careless method. They saved more pigs, the pigs grew faster, the gain costs less, the pigs were ready for market sooner, and the profit was greater. At the experiment station farm at Urbana, Ill., a lot of sanitation pigs gained 35 pounds each while others allowed to run in old hog lots where they picked up worm eggs gained only 11 pounds. Dr. H. B. Pfaffensperger, of Bloomington, Ill., representative of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, reports a lot of sanitation hogs that reached an weight of 218 pounds, while others frequenting an old hog lot grew to only 162 pounds. In this case the sanitation method increased the size of the pigs 35 per cent. Hundreds of farmers in various parts of the state have reported similar and even greater gains. One man raised sanitation hogs to a weight of 300 pounds in the same time that his hogs formerly grew to only 200 pounds; another reported a ton litter of sanitation pigs averaging 273 pounds when others in the old hog pastures weighed only 150 pounds a gain of 80 per cent. A farmer who adopted the sanitation system last year had two sows which raised 13 pigs on a half acre of old pasture land which had been plowed and sowed to oats and rape. As this man expressed it, he had the best "luck" with these pigs that he had had in 10 years.

SOIL CAUSES CLOVER FAILURES

Fertilizing for clover has become one of the farm problems. Lime is one of the first requisites if the soil is acid. A method approved by agricultural experiment stations for the application of lime and which has worked out excellently in actual practice is to harrow it into the plowed field before seeding the clover. The lime can be applied, however, when it is most convenient to plow the fields.

For average conditions, about 2,000 pounds of finely ground limestone or a ton hydrated lime per acre are the proper proportions and sufficient to remedy conditions and speed up the clover.

Owing to the decrease in the supply of barnyard manure on farms, much soil needs both potash and phosphoric acid for the best stand of clover. Phosphoric acid deficiency, experiments have shown, may be the factor which checks the growth of the clover.

Acid phosphate and muriate of potash supply the lack, applied at the rate of 300 to 600 pounds of potash and 100 pounds of muriate to the acre. If mixed fertilizer is applied, one high in phosphoric acid and potash should be used. Clover when well started will procure its nitrogen from the air.

An appreciable percentage of the failure of clover crops is blamed upon the seed when it is the condition of the soil when lies the trouble. If limed and given potash and phosphorus fertiliser the clover would do its full duty.

Mammoth red clover is said to be more tolerant of acid and poor soils than the medium variety but this does not mean that liming to remedy acid conditions is unnecessary.

Another cause for the failure of clover to survive the winter is too close grazing or cutting. Clover needs at least a four-inch growth for winter protection. If grazed closer than this a good stand may be ruined. An application of manure in the fall is a great help in winter protection.

CAUSES OF INCREASED YIELDS

Production of wheat in all the fields of the earth has increased nearly one-half in the last quarter of a century but the acreage of the field planted to wheat has increased only one-quarter. How does the extra wheat come about?

It is also a matter of accurate statistical knowledge that in the last 50 years while wheat production has increased about two-thirds or 66 per cent, there has not been an increase in population quite equal to 80 per cent. What becames of the extra wheat?

Modern machinery, better knowledge of fertilizing, faster methods of sowing, harvesting, and threshing have helped, but another factor is quite as important as all three together. This is the fact that when a farmer now sows a field to wheat he sows it only to wheat where formerly he sowed as many weeds as he did wheat and consequently he harvested almost as much weed and straw with his wheat as he did wheat.

Modern cleaning methods turn seed from a field, which is a mixture of wheat and tares, so eloquently referred to in the scriptural parable, into clean seed practically free of weeds. Another factor for which seedsmen should be credited is that most seed sown in these modern days by progressive farmers are live seed and will germinate, while in the older days at least a third of the seed was likely to be defective, dead, and impossible of germination the imperfect grains being inseparable from the perfect grains through lack of the complicated modern machinery.

It is difficult to figure just how great a percentage of the increased production of wheat may be attributable to the fact that seed wheat is now nothing but seed wheat and through its use there are millions more stalks of wheat to the acre and correspondingly millions less of weeds than before the days of modern agriculture and seed harvesting.

The excess wheat production over that of 25 years ago has been readily absorbed by higher standards of living, the great increase in the use of white bread, the sending of wheat flour to the distant parts of the earth where formerly it was unknown.

Up to the days of modern machinery and seed culture, the world did not have enough bread to eat. In fact it hadn't enough of anything. Where formerly a peck of wheat a year was a liberal average allowance for a whole family in the United States, today at least five or six bushels a year is about the average consumption per person in the United States.

Good seed and up-to-date machinery have made this possible.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

"Charley's Aunt" is Now a Picture

Satisfying the public demand for feature comedies, the Christies of Hollywood in connection with Ideal Films, Ltd., bagged the biggest prize the stage has ever had to offer.

It is "Charley's Aunt," the most successful farce ever written. With Syd Chaplin in the title role and supported by a brilliant cast "Charley's Aunt" is said to be one of the high spots of motion picture comedy. The Breed Theatre is fortunate in securing this laughable classic which will be shown for 4 days beginning Sunday.

Palace Theatre.

"Everything perfect," at the Palace theatre, the first part of this week with a great picture and a fine vaudeville programme. Without a question of doubt it is the best bill in town and one of the greatest the Palace has ever offered. It would be useless to talk about the act of acts, the Siks Rockets, in their whirlwind of stunts, which is the best in its line. Stunts never before attempted are put over without a quiver by the Rockets.

Adams and the Thompson sisters appear in a classy novelty musical act. Saxes, banjos and other tooting instruments combined with dancing entertain royally for 15 minutes.

Two men who shake a wicked pair of hoofs, give a clever exhibition of the use of the feet. They sing several good melodies as an added attraction for their act.

Are you married? No. Then, you must be single. Anyway, no matter whether you are tied in the traces or not, come to the Palace and see for yourself both sides of the curtain. A miniature musical comedy act with four people, beautiful scenic effects. You'll laugh, you'll cry, but watch out for the effect, when you see Marriage vs. Divorce.

George Dunn imitates different kinds of birds and other sounds without the aid of any musical contrivance.

Connors and O'Brien appear next in a study in blackface, funny stories dancing, the kind which goes over big.

Next we have a pair of funsters which are really funny. Leonard and Willard perform their stuff and guarantee to please you.

On the screen is "If I Marry Again," a heart-throbbing drama of modern times, packed full of thrills and plenty of action, with a star cast including Doris Kenyon, Frank Mayo, Lloyd Hughes, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman, Anna Q. Nilsson and others. A picture which will pierce you to your heartstrings.

The Price of Love.

From many of the various cities and towns where "The Path of Love" have been shown in moving pictures, have come the finest of complimentary criticisms. The picture has proved to be one of the drawing cards of the season, and the members of Mercier Assembly, Catholic Ladies of Columbus consider themselves fortunate in being able to bring the film to the Breed theatre on Thursday of this week.

"The Path of Love" tells the story of a selfish, hard-hearted man, who has made money his God. Greed drives love out of his life.

A fateful journey, a terrible railroad collision with death hovering for weeks over a broken body a convalescense and out of disaster and suffering comes great happiness.

Soul-stirring, sublime. This miracle is wrought through the love of the Great Apostle, St. Francis of Assisi. His charity comes down through the ages and overpowers greed and pride and arrogance.

The second picture, "The Sin That Was His," is a splendid story also laid in the Canadian Northwest and is shown in a most effective way.

Tickets are on sale for these pictures which will be shown at 4, 7 and 9 p. m. o'clock on Thursday, at the stores of Messrs. Bowen, Bray, Ethier, Harrington, Madden, Mara, Portelance, McNally, Quinn and Desmond. Slab and Sullivan and the committee in charge will have tickets on sale at the Breed theatre on Thursday for children and adults.

Palace Theatre.

Tomorrow brings to the Palace "Always a good show," another supreme vaudeville show headed by the [illegible] ladies' orchestra, Bert Earl and his 8 California Girls, versatile symphonic jazz band, eight peaches, all graduates from the University of California, under the able direction of Bert Earl, himself, each and every one is a soloist and an artist. They play thirty instruments, this is the greatest and highest paid act that the Palace has ever offered.

The screen attraction will be "The Trifflers."

No more dramatic and convincing story has been brought to the screen in some time, nor one told with greater clarity than B. P. Schulberg's new Preferred Picture, "The Trifflers," adapted from the novel by Frederich Orin Bartlett, to be shown at the Palace theatre Thursday.

Besides the very powerful story, the magnificent settings, which show with its old Spanish atmosphere and the natural beauties of California, Old World settings, there are seven reasons why this latest B. P. Schulberg production is a very rare treat. Those seven are the stars who play the important roles of the story.

The cast in reality reads like Who's Who in stardom.

Mae Busch, plays the part of Marjory Stockton, Frank Mayo is Monte Covington, a blase young [illegible] who succumbs to the charm and beauty of the girl. Elliott Dexter, in one of the finest roles of his career, Lee Moran, adds his sense of comedy in a fine part. Eva Novak, beautiful and charming, Lloyd Whitlock and Dorothy Revier play the more important roles.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Polo has always been a strictly man's game until Producer George Fitzmaurice saw its possibilities for movie novelties. Then he selected a team of four beautiful blondes and another of four beautiful brunettes. Instead of the conventional riding togs, they wore bathing suits and, astride fleet and capering polo ponies. Meantime Fitzmaurice's cameras ground in the amazing scene. It affords one of the many novelties in the new Goldwyn-Fitzmaurice picture, A Thief in Paradise, which will be shown for the last time today at the Breed.

The Fox news, a cartoon and a Christie comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Broadway Theater

The last of the week will see a wonderful line up of exceptional vaudeville acts at the Broadway theater, that will make the program the outstanding one of the season.

There are two acts of Keith vaudeville scheduled that alone are worth the price of the small admission charged, [illegible] The Boyd Revue of 1925 and A Milton Aborn Production Betty Lou.

The Boyd Revue of 1925 is a whole show in itself, consisting of six girls and two boys. Some excellent singing and dancing of all kinds are featured with scenic effects and costumes, that have brought this offering some of the highest praise given the best of acts in the biggest cities. They come here direct from the big time houses of the country and we can truthfully say that it is an exceptional attraction that the grown ups are going to love as well as the children.

The Milton Aborn production is also an outstanding attraction that is going to be the talk of the town.

The cast includes Viola McEwen a prominent member of the Aborn players; Harry Foulds, who played a prominent part in Sam Harris' production of Icebound and Chester Hewman who as the mischievous boy in Lewis and Gordon's production of When Love is Young scored quite a success. From this one can readily see what talent has been aggregated to make this an outstanding offering. There will be five other acts on the same program all equally as good as the above mentioned and the photoplay is a story of New York life featuring Elaine Hammerstein and Lou Tellegen in After Business Hours.

MORRIS TO BE PAYMASTER GENERAL OF THE NAVY

Captain Morris is now on duty with the department in Washington. He is the son of Brigadier General Charles Morris of the army and is the great-grandson of Commodore Charles Morris, who was executive officer of the Constitution in the engagement with the Guerriere in the War of 1812.

Three is a remedy for everything except some of the remedies.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

There was ice on pools of water about Danielson, Tuesday morning, and frost on the Easter hats and coats of the elect. For the second consecutive morning the mercury dropped below the freezing point, 28 being the low reading for Monday morning and 24 for early Tuesday morning.

The freeze left a trail of damage in its wake. Peach trees, which had budded in territory hereabouts, were in numbers of cases nipped and the crop prospects for this year ruined. From an outlying section one man reported that buds on 140 peach trees had been killed. Some early crops also were damaged by the unexpectedly low temperature and there was real gloom in the hearts of those who had labored arduously and patiently to get advance offerings of early vegetables from nearby gardens for the local market of their own tables. Some gardens will have to be at least partly replanted as the result of the season's reversion to what approximated late winter weather.

Chicken thieves are regularly operating out on the Providence pike. To date raids on chicken coops have been confined to areas just over the border in Rhode Island, but publicity is given the fact that poultrymen in this nearby territory may be on their guard against losses by the thieves. The latest haul reported is one in which hens were taken from the coops of Warren Williams, who lives a dozen miles east of here on the Providence road. The theft is the third of poultry in that immediate vicinity within a week.

The Sunshine class of the East Killingly church recently presented at an entertainment given in connection with a supper arranged by the Willing Workers of the North Foster church, a playlet entitled By Way of Secret Passage. There was a large attendance.

Consider this aspersion on Danielson's standing as a metropolis: Charles E. Forcier of Arctic was fined $2.00 and costs, the latter amounting to $1.65, for parking his car for more than an hour in one place on the street in Danielson, Conn. Next thing motorists know, they will be getting pinched for parking at Rice city of West Greenwich Center.

That, ladies and gentlemen, is from Pawtuxet news in a Providence paper. It seems that people in the valley are not impressed with the importance or dignity of this community. Just for that the next man from Arctic who gets "pinched" for parking up here may be fined 3 cents additional. Such should be his dire punishments. As a matter of fact, Mr. Forcier was only fined $1.00 here, but with the usual propensity of small people and small states for exaggeration it was made $2.00 in the Rhode Island report of the case.

It would appear that Danielson craves excitement. It gave itself a fan with the needle, Tuesday morning, by allowing a report relative to a fire on the roof of a building in the business section of Putnam to grow into a story that a group of buildings at Mansfield's corner in the heart of the business district was aflame. The story gained general currency here and telephone calls to Putnam making inquiry about the fire were put through by some, while others, awaiting no verification, rushed over to Putnam in their cars to be in on what they thought would be a thrill. That's what comes of ennui. Putnam had the good fortune not to suffer any such fire disaster as was reported here.

Mrs. Susie G. Williams of Brooklyn, secretary of Quinebaug Pomona grange has sent out announcements relative to the special meeting to be held with Echo grange in Franklin hall at Willimantic Saturday next. The morning session is to open in the fifth degree and applications are to be received. An illustrated travelog, Roaming Around Rome, will be given by George H. Hamilton, of Senexet grange, Woodstock. During the noon recess a dinner is to be served by Echo grange.

At the afternoon session the fifth degree will be conferred in full form. The lecturer's program will include a reading by Mrs. Helen G. Wright, Andover; an address, America the Beautiful, by Rev. E. Scott Farley of Suffield and musical numbers by members of Echo grange.

A big Mack truck from out of the state went off the state highway, at the foot of Little Rest hill, five miles east of here, Monday afternono and rolled over on its side after coming down the grade from the Rhode Island line. The driver was not injured. Other trucks rigged with wrecking apparatus righted the ponderous vehicle late Monday night and hauled it back into the highway. The machine was not materially damaged.

Warnings recently given by the police and the offer of the borough health officer to prosecute anyone found dumping refuse in the Assawaga river near the foot bridge leading across the stream from the state armory has helped check the nuisance in some degree. Watch is being kept on the locality with a view to fixing the responsibility for any further abuse of the stream and neighborhood as an outlet for accumulated refuse.

Clifford H. Starkweather has sold a summer cottage at Old Killingly pond near East Killingly to Providence parties.

Leo Bodo, employed in a bank at Putnam, is ill at his home on Carter street.

There appears to be a prospect that the population of Brooklyn jail will diminish with the coming of warmer spring weather. Not so many are seeking arrest and imprisonment now as during the winter season, when there were more than 60 prisoners at the jail at times.

There have been a number of bad brush fires in this territory. One up Abington way spread over several acres. It threatened a house owned by George Sumner, before it was extinguished by volunteer fire fighters. While this fire was still burning, another was discovered near the railroad between Abington and Elliott which proved to be the most dangerous and widespread that has been in this vicinity for a long time. Fifty or sixty men worked for several hours to put it out. It burned over both sides of the railroad and covered over an area of nearly 200 acres. At one time the house familiarly known as the Ayers place, now occupied by Mr. Murray, was threatened. On the West side of the tracks it burned over land owned by Seymour Paul, Charles Griggs, Dr. Hutchins and Dr. J. D. Clark. Fire Warden A. D. Briggs and his men fought the fires until early in the morning before the last blaze was extinguished.

PRAISES BUDGET, URGES ECONOMY

In his address at the opening of the Women's World fair at Chicago, President Coolidge took occasion to commend the manner in which the arrangements had been made whereby the expense of the fair was provided for before the doors were opened. It had been arranged on a budget basis and he made the most of the opportunity it provided to point out the excellence of such an example. "With full regard for the need of such a policy the president declared the importance of sound business methods was never so great as it is today, and this holds good in equal measure to government business which needs to be placed on a basis of rigid economy.

The people, in the daily management of their modest domestic affairs, note that the great interests of their governments and their semi public institutions are dealt with in a spirit of laxity and a mood of carelessness and may find little inspiration to apply better methods in the management of their own concerns. The great business operations which are under the public eye ought to be handled so as to make them an example of sound procedure," were the words used by the president and they are entitled to the heartiest endorsement.

One has reason to look to governments for an example, for the application of the best business methods and the rendering of efficient service under the most economical methods. Too many times such a search is in vain, and too often it is because there is a disposition to follow somebody's else methods. Economy and efficiency mean simply doing things in the easiest way. Piling up expenditures regardless of conditions doesn't mean good business or good judgment.

The president some time ago took a stand for better business conditions in government and the elimination of waste. He has shown no deviation therefrom thus far and given no indication that there will be throughout his terms. He is insisting on those things for the federal government which needs to be applied and municipal governments and many enterprises if needed conditions and lower taxes are to prevail.

USING THE SURPLUS

In connection with the cutting down of federal taxes, the suggestion has been made by Chairman Madden of the appropriations committee of the lower house of congress that such surplus as exists each year should be refunded to the taxpayers, and it is probable that legislation calling for that will be introduced at the next session of the national legislature.

How this would work was illustrated last year when a tax cut was put into effect after the full tax for the year had been paid. Those who paid their income taxes in March received a rebate of 25 per cent. several months later. By the Madden plan such surplus as was found at the end of the year, whether it amounted to 10, 15 or 25 per cent., would be returned.

This as can be realized would involve a tremendous amount of work, even though it might stimulate more interest in government finances and create a demand for the greatest economy for the effect it would have upon the refund. That would not, however, take into consideration the fact that taxes are figured as overhead and that those who plan on getting the equivalent from the trade would still be collecting full taxes and not receive from the government a rebate which could not be returned to those from whom it was collected.

Piling up a surplus invariably invites dipping into it for various appropriations which are too often without merit. The surplus could be utilized for defraying expenses for the coming year, with its resultant effect upon taxes, or it could be applied to the reduction of indebtedness, which likewise would have its good and permanent effect in cutting taxes.

Much will probably be heard in regard to the use of the yearly surplus, between now and the opening of the next congress. Such action as will produce the best results is desirable and for this reason there cannot be too much thought directed thereto in the meantime. The good and the bad features of the idea deserve thorough consideration.

HINDENBURG CAMPAIGNING

A political campaign is on in Germany this week. Preparations are being made for the election on Sunday and they are strenuous if we are to accept the statement that the young men of the nationalist following have been ordered to give up the use of tobacco and alcohol during the week that such expense as might be incurred in their use may be devoted to the insurance of success for the candidacy of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg.

It is a contest between candidates of two combinations of parties. Von Hindenburg has spoken to the extent of seeking "a place in the sun" for Germany through the government he would head. He has declared that he is not a candidate through ambition but because he considers it a duty and his object is "to insure the German people full sovereignty and freedom and its rightful place among the peoples of the world."

When he declares that "the accusation of war guilt must go," it may be something that is more easily said than accomplished. There is no disposition to overlook his war position and when it is urged in his behalf that he does not propose to "change the government forcibly," it may be expected that this will be accepted as his intentions to stand steadfastly by the German republic, but something of a much more definite character in the way of assurance will be required before anything like that is accepted misgivings. Doubt is bound to be persistent in that respect.

While Von Hindenburg has spoken it can by no means be said that he had increased his strength among the German people. He is making use of all possible political strategy but his prominence has been gained through the military and not the political. He now claim as he does that his success would not mean a militaristic reaction in that country, but even among the German people there seems to be ground for the belief that this will be taken with a liberal pinch of salt.

HIGHWAY MANNERS

When the attention of the drivers of motor vehicles are directed to the need of displaying good manners and respecting the Golden Rule of the highways there will be enthusiastic approval of the effort that is being undertaken by the motor vehicle commissioner.

In making this appeal the commissioner realizes that it is not required by the great majority of drivers. For the most part they are mindful of the other fellow and anxious to do the right thing. There are many however who are heedless, many who think that there is such a thing as being discourteous.

Whether such an appeal will go home to the class for which it is intended is a question. Perhaps it will serve to direct the attention of the thoughtless to certain things which they have been in the habit of doing without realizing just what it meant to other drivers. Perhaps it will succeed in getting the attention of those who need to have more regard for the rights of others than for speed and a good time. And it is barely possible that it will bring some to a recognition of what responsibility actually rests upon the individual driver relative to the treatment that needs to be accorded all other highway users.

There is no question as to the desirability of having such an authority set forth these things in the manner which the commissioner has. Even if it is only a percentage of those hit who take the advice there will be something accomplished in the interest of better feeling among fellow users of the highways.

BEAUTIFYING HIGHWAYS

Out in Indiana, between Indianapolis and Noblesville, they have constructed a new paved highway. Apparently it is greatly appreciated and while it is recognized as a thing of value from a utility standpoint there is also displayed the desirability of making it attractive by beautifying it. With such a thing in view an organization has been perfected to carry it out, the plan being to set out an elm tree every 60 feet, set back 30 feet from the shoulder of the road and to sow grass between the pavement and the trees. There will also be an effort made to remove the unsightly signs and reconstruct fences or remove them.

This plan is not so different than has been followed in a number of instances where memorial highways have been established. It cannot fail to appeal to any community that has the right degree of civic pride. Participation by large numbers ought to follow the mere suggestion, and what it promises for those who are in a position to get the benefits daily will likewise be fully appreciated and lauded by the visitors and the tourists. It is such ideas and examples that are frequently transplanted to other places for the production of similar results.

In these days when there is so much use being made of the highways in all directions, there are occasions when states look after such details as the planting of trees. The idea is one that may well get increased attention when so much is being urged in behalf of more trees and when there is a thought of doing something on Arbor day or of indulging in an annual tree planting effort each spring.

THIRTY DOLLARS PLUS

As their father stamped out of the room the girls looked at each other in complete discouragement. His manner of closing the door was ominous and final.

"I feel ashamed to be seen in my lovely new fur coat when father looks so shabby all the time," groaned Edith. "I don't see why he acts so."

"I do," replied Dora. "I remember how pitifully dad used to scrimp and economize so that mother and we children could have what we needed. He can't realize that he ought to spend his money for his own comfort now that you and I are grown up and self-supporting, and that we haven't dear mother with us any more."

"Let's put up a job on him" Edith's eyes twinkled as she unfolded the plot that had suddenly popped into her head.

That evening at dinner she smiled at her father with the same loving expression which used to wring from him ill-afforded pennies for her childish wants.

"Now, daddy what did you say this morning was the very most you'd pay for a suit made to order" she asked.

"There's no use arguing with me any more," said her father. "If you girls are so crazy for me to have a new suit I'll get one ready made. I'm not going to pay any tailor the price charged now. It's ridiculous when you can get a good ready made suit for $25."

"Didn't you say this morning," persisted Edith "that you wouldn't pay over $30 for a made-to-order suit?"

"Well, yes, I'd pay $30. That's what I used to get a first-class suit for out in Iowa when you girls were kids."

"For that amount you can get a good suit made to order at Swinson's, the tailor around the corner. I saw an advertisement in his window as I was going to work this morning and I ran in and asked his prices. He said he aws making suits very cheep now to keep his helpers busy during the slack season. I told him that you would order a suit."

"The dickens you did!"

"But you will, won't you, dad, to please Edith and me?" coaxed Dora. "You know you're going to the Leigh wedding with us, and we want you to look your handsomest."

"Handsome nothing," gumbled the father, but later in the evening he grudgingly agreed to drop into Swinson's and see about a suit, and the girls went to bed in giggles.

The tailor promised the suit in plenty of time for the wedding, and the girls' interest in their own pretty costumes waned in their pleasure and excitement over their father's new clothes.

"I do wish dad would come," said Edith on Saturday afternoon as she and Dora were putting the last touches. "We can't be late for a wedding."

"He went out to the barber's quite a while ago."

"Yes, but he came in and hurried out again. Didn't he look nice in his new suit? There's something really distinguished about dad when he's decently dressed. There he is now."

"Why dad—why, father—why did you take off your new clothes?" exclaimed both girls. "We're nearly late now. What made you change into those old duds?"

"Well, you see I was showing Smythers, the barber, what a good suit I had had made for $20, and what do you think, he offered me $40 for it? And, by George, girls, I took him up. Easy money for me, and he's just starting on a sudden trip, so he was glad to pay me a bonus to get it. Lucky it fitted him."

"Lucky! Oh, dad, why did you do it?" asked Edith tearfully.

"Well, you know, I don't care anything about the wedding, and I'm going to buy you each a present with the $10 I made, so you girls haven't any reason to cry."

When alone in the taxi the sisters looked at each other in complete chagrin.

Then they laughed wryly.

"The moral is," said Dora, "that money spent in deceiving dad is thrown away. Think of our $40, my dear!"

"And what if he orders another suit at Swinson's?" groaned Edith.—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Blue Laws in Willimantic

Mr. Editor: I read in the Norwich Bulletin weher Attorney Harvey of Willimantic was going to enforce the blue laws for keeping Sunday. Now if Mr. Harvey will just read his Bible exodus 20th chap. 8-9-10 verses he will read what God commanded men to do. Eighth verse—Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy. Ninth verse—Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work. Tenth verse—But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the lord thy God, in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son nor thy daughter, thy man servant nor thy maid servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy strangers that are within thy gates.

Also if he will look in the table of time he will find God's own way of calling days. First day of the week, Sunday, second day, Monday, third day, Tuesday, fourth day, Wednesday, fifth day, Thursday, sixth day, Friday, seventh or Sabbath, Saturday.

And that there are many Sabbath day people who do not fear to keep God's Sabbath and work on man's so-called Sabbath, Sunday. Has the law been so made, to punish those who keep God's holy Sabbath, and in this so-called free country, compel men to forsake God's Sabbath for man's. If so it had better be put with the man's changing God's time to the so-called man's time, day-light saving time, and ruining the health of the people, little children's health injured beyond all help, being nervous, weak, tired, and sick, from such early rising to get to school. The milk men are obliged to submit to the breaking of their contract, to deliver milk at certain hours, go an hour earlier because the time is changed and trains run an hour earlier. I think as a humane agent and prosecutor, if Mr. Harvey would devote his time he is fooling away to break God's laws, and enforce the humane law for cruelty to man and beast, little children, old people, as well as middle-aged, he would be doing a much better work for God and man, and might get some extra stars in his crown.

When will the milk men get sand and grit enough to stand banded together and refuse to deliver milk earlier one time of the year than another?

Gillette Had to Send Home for Money

Although his father did not want him to be an actor, William Gillette won his consent, then had to plead for a chance on the stage and before long had to send for money to get back home.

Born in Hartford, Conn., his boyhood days were saddened by the deaths of two brothers in the army in the Civil War. It was his father's desire that he be a lawyer, but while attending the academy in Hartford he dreamed of being an actor and immediately after quitting school became a public reader.

After several seasons on the platform he went to St. Louis, determined to be an actor. The manager of the theatre would not listen to him, and Gillette had to grasp and hold the man while he expostulated that he would act in the stock company for nothing.

Sent to the manager's other theatre, the St. Charles, at New Orleans, he made his stage debut. Stranded there he had to get money from his father. The next season, through the influence of Mark Twain, who was a neighbor, he obtained a small part with John T. Raymond in New York, where he attended lectures at the New York university and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the day time.

Illness of an actor gave him a chance to play the part of Prince Florian in "Broken Hearts," and the tall, awkward reserved youth made an impression that gave him the same role in Boston, where he attended Boston university and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the day time.

Next with the Macauley Stock Company of Cincinnati and Louisville until it "quit paying salaries," he joined Kate Claxton's company in "The Two Orphans." Mark Twain helped him find a producer of his play, "The Professor," and at 27 Gillette became a star in it. Then came success as playwright, stage director and star in "Held by the Enemy," "Secret Service," "Sherlock Holmes" and other plays.

Devoted to his wife, he retired into the woods at Tryon, N. C., immediately after her death, was taken serious ill and suffered from poor health for a long time afterward. Returning to the stage he produced other successes and today, at 69, he is respected as one of the greatest actors of the American stage.

CHILD TRAINING

THE BOY AND THE MAN
Ethelyn Edwards Crowe

"The child is father of the man." Just recently a case has come under my observation which clearly illustrates the real significance of this statement.

In one of our small towns there lived a little lad whose mother was a widow. He was the youngest of several small children for whom the mother found it difficult to provide. She worked hard and people feeling sorry for her gave generously to both her and the children.

This lad was very careful of his few possessions and he was praised and encouraged in this seemingly good characteristic. The years sped on and the kindly folk of the village not only supplied him with work but frequently made him presents.

He grew to manhood, married, and moved on to a farm. Of course he was a renter and had little to invest in equipment. When sowing and harvest seasons came the neighbors were generous; they loaned him machinery and extended a helping hand. All was well.

A year passed and the next season things were harder for the neighbors were not so ready to help and to loan. Another year came and he had to work alone.

The difficulty lay in the fact that he was not ready to do his share. He was a good borrower but a poor lender. He would take his neighbor's most expensive implement as a matter of course but was a miser with his cheapest tool. In returning help he seldom gave hour for hour.

All his life he had received and received and no one had ever thought of asking him to return. All his life he had been encouraged in hoarding that which was his own because this hoarding tendency had been mistaken for thrift. And now he was puzzled, and grew sullen and indignant. Neither did the neighbors understand—they hadn't the time nor ability to analyze. To them he was neither a child nor an orphan but a grown man who was not playing the game. They accepted the situation without comment and simply left him alone.

He was naturally sunny and loveable. Training and environment were almost wholly responsible for his unfortunate situation. One wonders what might have been the outcome could he have had a longer, more regular school life. Kindergarten and higher grade education would no doubt have corrected much. In the kindergarten, he would have learned the wholesome lesson of give and take, and this would have been followed by the rougher but effective lessons of the seventh and eighth grades. As it was he had learned only one-half of the lesson of sharing—namely, to take.

Jackie Coogan, child film star, arrived in New York from Hollywood wearing his new long trousers. The purpose of his trip, he said, is to "play golf and see the Giants."

My youth and beauty helps
By Edna Wallace Hopper

For forty years I have searched the world for the best beauty helps in existence. I spent nine years in France. And countless experts elsewhere have given me their best.

Those helps made me a famous beauty. They have retained my youth and beauty. The thousands who see me daily on the stage marvel at my bloom.

Now the best I found is placed at every woman's call. Toilet counters everywhere supply them. And I gladly send to all who ask a sample of any for test. I urge every girl and woman to try, at my cost, the matchless helps I found.

My rosy bloom

I found in France a liquid cleanser, used by famous beauties there. It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. It cannot assimilate in any way with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. I call this product my Facial Youth. One use will give you a new conception of what a clean skin means.

I use a super-cream called my Youth Cream. It contains a dozen ingredients which experts have advised for me. These include products of both lemon and strawberry. Also the best that science knows to foster, feed and protect the skin. A test of Youth Cream will amaze and delight you.

White Youth Clay

Clay is the greatest help that women can employ. But not the crude and muddy clays so many have applied. I use a clay which is the final result of 30 years of scientific study. It is white, refined and dainty. And it combines many helps beside clay.

I call it my White Youth Clay. It purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it, the causes of blackheads and blemishes. It combats all lines and wrinkles. It causes a rosy after-glow by bringing the blood to the skin. Many women seem to drop ten years in one application. No girl or woman can look her best without the use of clay.

My envied hair

My hair is thick, lustrous and luxuriant. The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at its glory. I have never had falling hair or dandruff, never a touch of gray. In fact, my hair is finer far than 40 years ago. This I owe to my Hair Youth. It combines many helps in one. I apply it directly to the scalp with an eye-dropper. There it combats all that suffocates the hair roots. It stimulates and tones. I never met a woman who found anything to bring comparable results. I wish all women who love beautiful hair would learn what Hair Youth does.

All druggists and toilet counters now supply Edna Wallace Hopper's beauty aids exactly as I use them. Mail this coupon for a sample of any, stating which you want. My Beauty Book will come with it. If the sample delights you, get my products at your store. Clip coupon now.

Boys' Day in School

On Friday, April 24th Boys' Day in School will be observed in Norwich and vicinity by practically all of the schools, both public and private. The purpose is to impress boys with the value of an education as a necessary requisite in character building for citizenship; to cultivate, on the part of our citizenship, a deeper regard for the schools as the greatest institution for the building of sterling manhood and good citizenship; to arouse officials and authorities to the importance of adequate facilities, such as schools and playgrounds, so that there may no longer be part time classes and a lack of recreational facilities, to interest fathers and mothers in their own boys.

The committee having this matter in charge have cooperated with the school authorities in the putting on special programmes with a view of emphasizing the great importance of a thorough education and of making the best possible use of the hours spent in school. Boys' safety is also stressed on this day and all others on the programme.

If it is practical and possible, it is planned at the academy to have some member of each class take charge of the class for the day.

First Days of School in Norwich

By the early laws of the colony, it was ordered that every town containing thirty families should maintain a school to teach reading and writing, and that a Latin school should be established in every county town. A grant of six hundred acres of land was made to each county to assist in establishing this Latin school. These regulations were not always observed; the new settlements were tardy in their educational matters. The earliest schools were taught principally by females, who advanced their pupils little beyond reading, spelling and learning the catechism. The New England Primer, containing the Westminster Catechism was the universal class book of the children. This was first published about 1660. In Norwich no schoolmaster is mentioned before 1677 when John Birchard occupied the teachers chair, and was engaged to keep nine months of the year for twenty-five pounds, provision pay. Public works were slow in progress, more from the want of hands to labor, than from deficiency of skill or the absence of enterprise. A school house was finally built in 1683 by John Hough and Samuel Roberts. Both of these men lived in New London, but found employment in Norwich. In the year 1700, a startling fact appeared in the indictments of the grand jury of the county: "Norwich presented for want of a school to instruct children." This was soon remedied, and work was begun upon a new school house.

1743 schools were maintained by what was called a country rate of forty shillings on a thousand pounds, and all deficiencies made up by the parents and guardians. The schools were distributed over the town, and kept a longer or shorter period, according to the list of each society. The school at the landing was to be three months and seventeen days, and the two at the Town Plot Norwich town one at each end five and one half months each. The Wequanuk school period was for two months and fifteen days. If any of these schools should be kept by a woman, the time was doubled, as the pay of the mistress was but half that of the master. During the Revolutionary War the schools of Norwich were not neglected as an institution of learning of higher grade was maintained through the war. Dr. Daniel Lathrop in 1782 left a legacy of $2500 to the town for the support of a free grammar school under certain conditions, one of which the school should be kept open during eleven months of the year. The brick school on Norwich Green was built for this purpose.

Schools of Later Period

In 1830 Greeneville took the lead in the march of improvements, consolidating her two school districts and establishing a high school. In the other city districts there was much opposition but about 1855 progress was made and the Central School House a building of able proportions was erected on Broadway, the same being three stories high and well supplied with furnaces and cisterns. The Broadway school in its day was considered the finest in appearance, position and convenience of any common school house in Connecticut.

The idea of a "free academy" originated with the Rev. John P. Gulliver and with the help of many prominent citizens this institution was incorporated in 1854. The story of our schools is a long one, but at the present time we have some very fine buildings, but are in need of more. The Elizabeth Street school is one of our new buildings and should be visited during Boys' Week by our citizens. The Bishop School is in process of completion and will meet a long felt need in the Bridge District. We also have some fine parochial schools which are commodious and well equipped. Many neighborhood groups are already planning to visit these various schools on Boys' Day, Friday.

"BATTLESHIP MAX" COHN MOURNED AT SUB-BASE

The current Sub-Marine Base newspaper says:

For over a quarter of a century in his shop on Sands street, Brooklyn, or with us here at the Submarine Base, New London, Max ('Battleship Max') Cohn labored, and won the esteem and the affection of the officers and men of the Navy.

From a small beginning he worked up a business which led to his winning the contracts to furnish the uniforms for the entire enlisted personnel of the Atlantic fleet. Successful in business his even greater success lay in his winning the confidence of men. Max was generous. He trusted men. It was his joy to tell us that he never lost a cent by his trusting our sailors.

Traditions of the Navy grow; they are enriched by the deeds of its heroes. Although not in the Navy, Max ('Battleship Max') was of and for the Navy. And now he is dead; he leaves behind him a great host of navy friends; he becomes a tradition. Max served the Service well.

BAZAAR AND DANCE HAS BIG ATTENDANCE

A bazaar and dance given Tuesday evening in Olympic hall by the Young Women's Hebrew association had an attendance that filled the hall and a patronage that made it a huge success. Attractively decorated booths with inviting articles to tempt the purchaser were arranged about the hall and were in charge of the following: Candy, Saul Alofsin and Miss A. Hecht; food, Miss Bessie Yalen and Miss Mollie Segal; fancy articles, Miss Bessie Mopsik; donated articles, Harry Schwartz and Miss Anna Hertz. The door prizes were a beautiful suede bag and a shaving set.

Aaron Segal conducted a lively auction during the evening and dancing was enjoyed to music furnished by the Harmony quartette. The general committee in charge, to whose work goes the credit for the success of the evening, consisted of the Misses Augusta Shereshevsky, Jennie Lowenberg, Sadie Mopsik, Anna Hertz, Goldie Segal, Leah Addlestone, Bessie Yalen, Sarah Blum and Sarah Stamm.

GAVE TAXATION TALK AT WEST END COMMUNITY

A talk upon tax equalization by John J. O'Rourke of the tax analysis committee was the feature of the meeting of the West End Community Association which was held Tuesday evening at the Elizabeth Street school auditorium with a good sized attendance. Paul A. Brown introduced the speaker who gave a very clear exposition of the work that has been done by the tax analysis committee and described the majority and minority reports that have been made.

A number of the audience discussed the taxation matter with the speaker and it was observed that there was quite a sentiment in favor of the majority report that advocates the employment of assistance from out of town in making a re-assessment of the grand list.

SPEAKERS FROM STOP— ADDRESS ALUMNI CLUB

About 25 were in attendance here Tuesday night at a meeting at the Wauregan hotel of the Eastern Connecticut local alumni club of Connecticut Agricultural college. Imbert F. WEDDING
Ducharme-Prive

At the Sacred Heart church, Taftville, Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock, Louis Ducharme, son of Mr. and Mrs. Exavier Ducharme, and Miss Matilda Prive, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Prive, both of Taftville, were united in marriage by Rev. Henri Chagnon. The musical part of the mass was given by the men's choir, Miss Alice Frechette presiding at the organ.

The bridesmaid was Miss Rose Prive, sister of the bride, and the best man was Albert Ducharme, brother of the groom. The bride was charming in a gown of white canton crepe and carried a beautiful bouquet of roses and sweet peas. The bridesmaid was prettily attired in a canton crepe gown, trimmed with lace, and carried pink roses.

After the wedding ceremony a breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, at No. 12 South B street, covers being laid for over 50. The bride was a string of pearls and the bride's was a string of pearls and the bride's gift to the groom was a pair of gold cuff links. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a boudoir lamp and the groom's gift to the best man was a gold piece.

The bride and groom left for a wedding trip to New Bedford, Providence, New York and other cities and on their return will reside in Taftville. Both are well known in Taftville. Mr. Ducharme is employed at the Versailles paper mill. Guests were present from Providence, Chicago, Arctic, R. I., and other places.

A sharply worded note from Mexico, which league of nations officials refused to publish, and a caustic communication from Russia, in which both countries refuse to come to Geneva, gave special advance publicity to next month's conference on control of traffic in arms.

ACADEMY CLASHES WITH PRATT HIGH OF ESSEX AT CAMPUS THIS AFTERNOON

Undaunted by its defeat last Saturday at the hands of the J. B. Martin Co. the Academy baseball team is out for blood this afternoon, when they meet the fast Pratt High school nine of Essex on the Academy campus. This is the first meeting of the two schools on the diamond and a great battle is expected to show just how the two teams shape up.

The lads from along the Connecticut river have the intention of taking the Red and White's scalp, but shall they? This will be answered this afternoon and everyone should be on hand at the campus to see which team is successful on its warpath. Clever teamwork which will enthrall the spectators and lift them from their seats will be shown to advantage.

The Pratt High is bringing a collection of players, each one a star in himself and worth witnessing in action.

The Academy team, which has the makings of a championship nine, will have Johnny Green, the speedy right fielder on the box, Hinrichs, catcher; Burke, 1b; Carlen, 2b; Carroll, 3b; Chodkowski, ss; Busch, lf; Jarvis, cf; and Capt. McGowan, rf.

BULKELEY GETTING READY FOR ACADEMY GAME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 21—The Bulkeley squad, which will be in charge of Captain Tillo Daniels, due to the absence of Coach William R. Canty who left on Sunday for his home in Vermont to spend the week, will take up the diamond duties on Wednesday afternoon, in preparation for the game with Norwich Free Academy at Morgan Park on Saturday. The entire Bulkeley squad of ball tossers were given the Monday and Tuesday to keep away from the ball park, for they have been playing baseball lately. But the first part of the week will be devoted to the hardest kind of hitting and fielding practice the Bulkeley team has ever undergone in. Bulkeley is not expecting an easy victory from their annual rivals from Norwich and the Bulkeley team will find the Bulkeley nine even better groomed for the game on Saturday than the game Bulkeley engaged in with Morris High of New London City last week.

The fine victory which was pounded out at the expense of Morris High in a one-sided contest, before 2,000 fans was a source of pleasure to the numerous Bulkeley backers. The Orange and Black in this opening contest showed the offensive ability and a batting punch which was not lacking in the least to produce runs. Probably the most satisfying part of the victory over the Orange and Black was the twirling of the Bulkeley hurlers who set the opposing batters literally speaking, down with their pitching.

For the Bulkeley team will put in more practice than usual for the Norwich game and will work out daily at once in the morning and another session which will last a good part of the afternoon. There will be no undervaluation of the Norwich outfit, but there is one consolation for the Bulkeley nine and that is no matter who will get the assignment for Norwich, such batters as Shaflott, Daniels, Barry, Booth, Hutchinson and others will have to be faced, not to mention the remainder of the batting order which is equally effective in wielding an effective stick at all times. The defensive side of the Bulkeley arrangement will be another problem for the Red and White to overcome. The work, especially of the infield was highly gratifying on Saturday.

All in all the Norwich team will have to face the veteran Bulkeley nine which is dangerous at all times. In the last encounter on the diamond Norwich was victorious in all games being won by close scores. This was true last year when two victories were pounded out at this city by a score of 17 to 12 and 7 to 1 victory for Bulkeley. Last season saw Bulkeley capture the pitching between Hinrichs of Norwich and Duffy was assaulted for other twirlers respectively. The importance in the game with Bulkeley and Norwich is of course self evident.

From all present indications, Norwich will present a much stronger lineup than in former years. But whether the Red and White will be able to overcome the field and batting strength as Bulkeley will present it remains to be seen when the two nines line up in their annual home and home series on Saturday. If it is expected that N. F. A. twirlers expect to have an easy time with Bulkeley batters, then they will find the ever heavy hitting Shaflott, Daniels, Booth, Barry and numerous others in the lineup eagerly awaiting the umpires cry of "play ball." The team inked a fast ball pitcher was demonstrated against Morris High on Saturday, home runs and batting ringing from the bats of the Bulkeley batters.

The experience of Coach Canty, the veteran mentor in charge of Captain Daniels and his men. There is a strong possibility that Daniels will replace Fallon in right field and give Joe Parisi a chance to twirl for Bulkeley. This arrangement will no doubt add strength to the batting of the Orange and Black for both Parisi and Daniels can work them for pitchers, while they are woefully weak with the stick, at least he showed this deficiency in a game with Morris High Saturday.

Tunney to Prepare for Bout

Chicago, April 21—After a two weeks vacation in the oil field of Oklahoma, Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion, left today for New York to establish a training camp for his 15 round contest with Mike Gibbons in the Polo Grounds June 2. Tunney plans to work at Saratoga Springs for two weeks, finishing at Summit, N. J.

The title-holder engaged Bud Gorman, Kenosha, Wisc., heavyweight, as one of his sparring partners.

WALKER TO DEFEND TITLE AGAINST SHADE

New York, April 21—Mickey Walker, welterweight boxing champion, will defend his title against Dave Shade of California, on a date prior to August 15, by decision of the New York State Athletic Commission.

Walker had been suspended when he failed to meet his leading challenger, at recently a bout with the middleweight titleholder, Harry Greb, loomed as an outdoor attraction for the early summer and Walker crossed over from Jersey seeking an armistice.

He posted $10,000 with the commission. Shade has been informed that he must furnish a like amount by tomorrow. The weight will be 147 pounds at 2 o'clock the afternoon of the fight.

At the same time, Walker cleared the way for his prospective meeting with Greb at the Polo Grounds June 19 as one of the attractions of the Italian Hospital fund show and definite announcement of this match is expected tomorrow. Harry Wills, negro heavyweight who has challenged Jack Dempsey, will oppose Charley Weinert of Newark, conqueror of Louis Angel Firpo, on the same card.

Tex Rickard will stage his milk fund bouts on May 29, featuring Mike McTigue, light heavyweight champion and Paul Berlenbach. A week later Jimmy DeForest will bring together Tommy Gibbons and the American light heavyweight king, Gene Tunney, at the Polo Grounds. There will be a lapse of two weeks before the hospital fund program is unfolded.

A draft of an agreement between the Pennsylvania and New York state boxing bodies was drawn up, calling for co-operation in such matters as weights, dates and disqualifications.

Tommy O'Brien of Milwaukee appeared before the officials displaying an injured hand and physicians' certificate to show that he would be unable to appear in any ring until June. Quintin Romero, Chilean heavyweight, urged the commission to obtain his release from his manager, David Valdes.

Mike Dempsey, welterweight of Rochester, N. Y., was reinstated.

SANDE WINS FIRST RACE SINCE HIS INJURY

Havre De Grace, April 21—Earl Sande, America's famous jockey, today rode his first race since he was injured at Saratoga last summer, and won with Sarazen. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's great gelding, it was Sarazen's first race of the year too.

Sarazen took the Newark handicap, a six furlong dash for three year olds and up in the time of 1:11 flat, breaking the track record by 1-5 second. He took the lead in the stretch and won easily by two lengths; Big Blaze was second and the Vintner third.

Two dollar mutuels on Sarazen paid $3.30; 2.70 and 2.30.

Plainfield High vs. Killingly

This (Wednesday) afternoon at the Connecticut Mills baseball grounds the Plainfield High baseball team will meet their traditional rivals of Killingly High. The contest is sure to be close and fast as both teams are determined to come out on the long end of the score.

Due to a late start in the season, not much has been heard of the Killingly nine but Coach Emery of Plainfield is taking no chances with the upstate aggregation. The Plainfield squad has been put through two days of stiff practice for the game and fresh from their victory over the Bryant-Hatton school of Providence, on Saturday, will enter the battle on edge.

No official line-up has been announced but the Plainfield team will probably start the game with their regular nine, Boyle at 1st, Mercier 2nd, Branch ss, Stevens 3rd, Wallace lf, Allup cf, Tyler rf.

For the mound duty Boker will probably be given first call as Belknap will be saved for Saturday's contest. For the backstop position, Allard, who has already won his spur as a baseball player of no little ability, will be the choice.

Speedboys Vs. Rosedales.

The Jewett City Speed Boys will clash with the Greeneville Rosedales at the Diamond, Sunday, April 26th at 3 o'clock. The game has been postponed from Sunday, April 19th on account of rain.

The Jewett City Speed Boys have an open date on Sat. April 25th, and challenge the Norwich Ramblers for a game at Jewett City. Answer through the paper or write, Mgr. Frank Casey, Jewett City.

INDIANS DEFEATED FOR FIRST TIME THIS SEASON

Detroit, April 21—Cleveland was defeated for the first time this season today when Detroit won the last game of the series here 4 to 3. Detroit made three runs in the second after Fewster, Indian second baseman, made a wild throw trying for a double play with two men out. Cleveland tied the score again in the sixth when Stephenson knocked a home run and Burns and Fewster each doubled. Fothergill, going in for Wingo in the eighth, clinched the game for Detroit when he singled to centerfield, bringing in Manush. Cleveland failed to score in the ninth.

PRES. COOLIDGE SHOWS MUCH INTEREST IN BASEBALL

Washington, April 21—President Collidge stopped during his regular evening stroll about the city today to study an inning by inning score of Washington's baseball victory over Philadelphia, planted on a show window of a downtown store. At the same time the president purchased one of the popular magazines from a newsstand nearby.

Mr. Coolidge followed the Washington baseball team closely last year and with Mrs. Coolidge, an ardent fan, saw most of the world series games. They plan to attend the opening contest of the season here tomorrow between the Senators and New York.

AGGIES AND WESLEYAN MEET AT MIDDLETOWN TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Storrs, April 21—Both Wesleyan and the Connecticut Aggies will attempt to break into the win column tomorrow, when they meet at Middletown in what will be the second game of the season for both nines. The Red and Black lost a close game to Springfield last Saturday, while at the same time the State College nine lost its first game to Brown at Providence.

On the brand of play displayed by the respective teams in their opening contests, the game tomorrow should be a good one. Wesleyan, though taking the field with a number of green men, put up a great game against the Physical Directors, and they can be counted upon to make things interesting for Dole's men. The Aggies, on the other hand, more than surprised their followers by their great stand against the Brown outfit. The Bruins this year have a team that shapes up as one of the greatest in its history, and it should make a great record. Connecticut's team, while off in its stick-work, played flawless ball in the field, and the spirit of the team is the best seen in some years.

Coach Dole gave his men an hour of batting practice this afternoon, followed by a short game with Coach Alexander's freshmen nine. The batting of the varsity showed much improvement, while the fielding and the base running of the team was also good. No practice was held yesterday, as Dole had an indoor session with the squad in which the play of the team against Brown was reviewed.

Oscar Nanfeldt, former New Haven High pitcher and star football tackle, will probably start on the mound for the Aggies with Wells in reserve. Wardle will do the backstopping, with the rest of the lineup as follows: Makofski, 1b; Schofield, 2b; Captain Ahearn, 3b; O'Brien, ss; Seymour, lf; Tiernan, cf; Gilbert or Swem, rf. The Brown lineup: Smith, cb; Howard, c; Dieter, cf; Captain Reynolds, cf; Angeles, 1b; Schwegel, lf; Wielland, 3b; Funk, ss; Porter, p; with Jacobson, Nichols or Carlson in reserve. The game will be called at 4 p. m.

BROWNS TAKE CLOSE GAME FROM WHITE SOX

St. Louis, April 21—The St. Louis Browns gained an even break in the series with the Chicago White Sox by winning in the fourth and final game 9 to 8. It was the Brown's second victory of the season. Tobin and Robertson hit home runs with men on the bases. Sisler hit safely for the seventh time in seven games. The score:

GROVES LACK OF CONTROL HELPS SENATORS TO WIN

Philadelphia, April 21—By taking advantage of Lefty Groves' wildness, the champion Senators split even in the champion series here by taking their two-game series by taking the contest 6 to 2. The Athletics took an early lead by finding Mogridge for three hits and two runs in the first three innings, but thereafter were helpless against the veteran southpaw. Three walks, a single and an error gave the Senators three runs in the fourth inning. The score:

GOV. TRUMBULL SIGNS SUNDAY SPORTS BILL TO BECOME EFFECTIVE JULY FIRST

Hartford, April 21—Governor Trumbull signed the Sunday sports bill at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon. Effective July 1, it grants local option of the towns and cities of the state to permit professional baseball and football games within their confines between 2 and 6 o'clock Sunday afternoons. Amateur sports are allowed on Sunday afternoons under the existing statute.

Governor Trumbull issued the following statement:

"I have approved substitute for house bill number 814, 'an act concerning the playing of baseball or football on Sunday.' Considerable pressure has been brought to bear upon me by the proponents and opponents of this legislation. I have given thoughtful consideration to all of the communications addressed to me on the subject but have not found in them any reasons for or against the bill, which were not stated to the various debates or in the public hearing before the judiciary committee. Proposed legislation of this character has been before several recent sessions of the legislature and the various aspects of it have become well known to the public. It is reasonable to assume that the people were familiar with these arguments when they elected the present membership of the general assembly. The legislature I believe to be truly representative, and the fact that this bill has been adopted in both branches of the general assembly after careful deliberation, leads me to the conclusion that the majority of the people of Connecticut want such legislation. I yield to no one in my respect for the Sabbath, but regardless of my personal convictions, I consider that the governor under the circumstances could find no justification for going contrary to the popular will of the state."

Only One Car Delivers Results Like These

There is only one car that delivers Chrysler results and that car is the Chrysler Six itself. Consequently Chrysler popularity continues unabated. You are invited to study these results at first hand.

First you will observe that the tremendous power is vibrationless at all speeds. It represents a step forward in motor smoothness and efficiency as important as the overlapping power stroke of the six in contrast to the old two-cylinder—opposed engine.

You will also experience new riding qualities. A new type of spring mounting, with rear springs mounted close to the hubs and parallel to the wheels, makes it possible to drive the Chrysler around turns at 50 miles an hour. Side-sway and road-weaving are eliminated.

All these qualities, as well as many other features that distinguish the Chrysler Six from all other cars, are properly appreciated only when you ride in the car. For that reason we are always eager to demonstrate Chrysler results. A telephone call is all that is necessary.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Still doubtful about the pitching staff the Brooklyn Club has purchased Pitcher Herbert Thormahlen from Dallas of the Texas League. Thormahlen, a left-hander, was with the Yankees several years ago. He won 11 and lost three games in the Texas League last year.

The Yankees have sent John Levi, Indian outfielder to Harrisburg of the New York-Pennsylvania League, on option. The former all-around Haskell College athlete needs experience before he will figure as a big leaguer. Levi is said to have the makings of a good hitter.

Milwaukee has traded Pitcher Dixie Walker to Birmingham for Infielder Stewart. Walker, who starred in the Southern League before joining the Brewers, is making a kick about joining the Barons, declaring that he is entitled to some of the "purchase price."

Fort Smith of the Western Association, has sent five players to Texarkana of the East Texas League. They are: Outfielder Buck Butler, First Baseman Ed Mullaney, Second Baseman Bill Pierce, Shortstop Johnny Conrad and Third Baseman Epley.

C. G. Young has been elected president of the Cushing Southwestern League club. Other officers are: Chester Blankenship, vice president and Fred Doye, secretary. The directors are R. M. Tuttle, C. C. Sitterly, R. J. Clay and E. W. Pulliam.

James J. Lynch has been made business manager of the Pittsfield Eastern League club, succeeding Leroy P. Ogden, who resigned because he was unable to give sufficient time to the work. Ogden had served in such business capacity since 1919.

President W. A. Scott of the Cotton States League, has announced the following staff of umpires: Robert M. Clarke, Norwich, D. C.; George L. Barthel, Laurel, Miss.; L. B. O'Bryan, Merian, Miss., and G. L. Goddy, Gulfport, Miss.

Nig Clark, oldest player in the game in point of actual service, has been signed by Tulsa of the Western League. He will help out as catcher as well as coach some of the younger pitchers. Luke Stuart has also signed with Tulsa.

After his Red Sox floundered around against the Louisville Colonels, Manager Lee Fohl and some of his players visited the Louisville Slugger factory, and that afternoon came back and walloped the Association team, 12 to 4. Messers. Hillerich and Bradsby naturally took the credit, because of the new bats with which they furnished the plans, when they visited their factory.

With virtually every civilized nation on the globe now ranking as a tennis-playing country, the United States is easily first in the number of its tournaments, having wrested the honors in this respect from Great Britain several years ago. During the coming season there will be more than 200 events held under the sanction of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and this number will not include many minor club and local championships.

In the season of 1892, Brown of the Louisville club set up a high record of 658 times at bat.

27,000 MILE HIKER STOPS HERE OVER NIGHT

Police headquarters entertained an unusual wayfarer over night Tuesday. He was Charles Roy Loungeway, 28, of Lowell, Mass., who walked into headquarters early in the evening and asked Sergeant John Casey for lodgings for the night. On his back he carried a pack and a blanket roll, the whole weighing 63 pounds, decorated with a sign that gives the reason for his strange adventure. It reads: From Lowell, Mass., to Panama, C. Z., and Return."

Loungeway explained that he is doing a 27,000 mile hike on a $50,000 bet between two New York men that no human being could cover that distance in three years under the conditions they imposed. Who these two men are he is not at liberty to tell, but if he accomplishes the feat he gets 20 per cent. of the bet. The first lap of the stunt, he says, he has already accomplished by covering 12,000 miles over a route that took him through 28 states in 7 months and 16 days.

To win the bet he must be back in New York city on Nov. 7, 1926, thus having about 19 months left in which to cover 15,000 miles. His route will take him down through the Atlantic coast states, across the Gulf states into Texas, from Texas through Mexico towards the Canal Zone, and his southern limit will be Bogota, Columbia, South America. From there he will retrace his steps to New York city over a route that is laid out for him.

Loungeway came on here from Providence Tuesday, speeded along by automobile rides, for he is allowed to ride upon invitation, although he must not ask for rides. The people he met in this section, he said were the most generous he had ever known and he was a day ahead of his schedule, largely because of that fact. However, one of the conditions of his stunt is that he cannot ride in a bus or in anything that runs on rails. If he crosses a river on a ferry boat, he is obliged to keep walking back and forth on the boat during the passage.

The hiker's walking gait is between 3 1-2 and 5 miles an hour and he uses a 32 inch stride and a 34 inch stride alternately, finding this is a way to rest himself and keep up his endurance. Loungeway believes that outdoor walking is the greatest exercise in the world and his weight has increased from 132 to 155 pounds while he has been doing his hike. He has been perfectly well all the time, and hasn't had a blister, callous, corn or bunion during all the time, ascribing this to his method of hardening his feet which he does by giving them a bath every ten days in boiling hot water in which a plug of tobacco has been dissolved.

The hiker will be on his way today (Wednesday) towards Hartford, after securing signatures of city officials to prove that he has been there. He is selling pictures by which to provide funds along the way, but he is allowed to receive assistance in other forms, which he must report to his principals.

MANY COMMITTEE REPORTS ON BILLS MADE TO LEGISLATURE YESTERDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Hartford, April 21—As a result of the morning executive sessions of the judiciary committee held last week a large batch of reports were received in the senate and house today, most of them being unfavorable. The committee on the proposed constitutional amendments was reported unfavorably by Chairman Cassidy.

The amendment proposed that no inheritance or succession taxes should ever be imposed. It has been urged that this is being done by some of the southern states, notably Florida. It is considered as a bait to entice a resident there.

Against the protest of House Leader Alling, a roll call was ordered this morning on the bill concerning the taking of shad. After a long speech by Mr. Rugbee of Lyme against its passage an amendment was offered by Mr. Bates of Pomfret that would allow five days fishing instead of four as proposed in the bill. Mr. Bates is a native of Old Lyme and hence his interest in the matter. The roll call was ordered and the amendment was adopted. Leader Alling changed his vote from no to yes and then moved a reconsideration and that the bill be tabled. Both motions were lost. He then moved that the house adjourn and this motion was also lost.

The bill as amended was then passed. Mr. Rugbee was warmly congratulated after adjournment upon his victory in defeating the measure. The session on the Connecticut river has been strongly opposed to the restriction to four days. They wanted seven.

No time has yet been set by the committee on capitol furniture and grounds, of which Senator Robbins of Meriden, is chairman and Representatives Isbell of New London, Havens of Waterbury and Wilson of Chaplin are members for hearing upon the report of the comptroller, concerning the changes in the hall of the house that was accompanied with specifications.

It is figured down the proposed salaries of $6,750 each to widows of supreme and superior court judges. The plan was to give to these exactly the same amount as the state referees would have received as state referees. Senator Shaw for the judiciary committee said it was considered bad precedent for the legislature to set.

THE HOUSE

The house convened at 11.30 with Speaker Barlow in the chair. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Johnson of New Haven. Unfavorable reports were received from the judiciary committee on H. B. 27, concerning states attorneys with the statement that a substitute will be submitted later; H. B. [illegible] concerning liability of operators of motor [illegible] providing for liability of owner; H. B. [illegible] concerning the humane disposition of disabled animals; H. B. 256, concerning criminal jurisdiction of the court of common pleas in Litchfield county; H. B. [illegible], amending an act concerning cruelty to animals; H. B. 827, an act concerning liability of motor vehicles; H. B. [illegible] concerning sale of wood by cord and [illegible] cords of cord; H. B. 856, providing that commercial motor vehicles registered in another state cannot be operated more than [illegible] days in this state without securing license.

The committee on public health and [illegible] reported with favorable recommendation H. B. [illegible] concerning poisonous poisons; H. B. 888, providing a fine of not more than $200, for operating a drug store or pharmacy without a pharmacist license; H. B. 895, an act concerning the marking of poisons; H. B. 896, concerning fees for pharmacists examinations; H. B. 905, an act concerning the definition of word "person" in pharmacy act; H. B. 888, an act concerning the granting of pharmacists' licenses.

Cities and boroughs committee reported against H. B. 446, an act concerning the retirement of state employees.

The committee on claims reported favorably on claims of Leo J. Sisson of New Haven for compensation for [illegible] connected in the service of the state. He was allowed $50 a month to cease at his death; also on claims of George J. King of Danbury for $90 for expenses incurred by illness while in service of the state. Both were passed under suspension of the rules.

The judiciary committee favored the passage of H. B. 281, amending the operation of the borough court of Greenwich; H. B. 5[illegible], an act concerning mechanics' liens; H. B. 837, an act concerning location of cemeteries and amending section 3589 of the general statutes; H. B. 284, an act amending charter of Greenwich Hospital association.

Cities and boroughs committee, favored passage of H. B. 350, consolidating town and city of Middletown and providing for salary of judge of city court of $2,000; associate judge $900; clerk $[illegible] and prosecutor $1500.

A [illegible] ordered on the calendar for [illegible].

The committee on banks would not [illegible] H. B. 733, an act authorizing [illegible] corporations to act as agents [illegible] transaction of any legal business.

The house committee on constitutional amendments through Chairman Cassidy reported unfavorably on H. J. R. 25, that would eliminate the imposition of inheritance or succession taxes.

A substitute for H. B. 790, an act concerning the taking of shad that was starred for action on the calendar provoked considerable discussion and led to a number of motions and counter motions. The bill as submitted by the committee limited seining to four days a week and forbids the setting of nets attached to stakes. Mr. Rugbee of Lyme was opposed to these features of the bill and made a long plea to the house to reject them. Representative Bates of Pomfret offered an amendment that would allow five days fishing.

The bill as amended was passed. At 1.25 the house adjourned till Wednesday at 11.30.

SENATE

The senate was called to order today at 11.25 by Lieutenant-Governor Bramard.

The bills for the pensioning of the widows of supreme and superior court judges were rejected in senate today. The committee on the judiciary reported unfavorably on the bills to give the widows of Judge E. B. Gaggin, Judge John P. Kellogg and Judge Lucien F. Burpee of the supreme court the salary of [illegible] referee.

Senator Shaw in explaining the report of the committee said that the bills to pension widows of the judges named would create a precedent which the committee did not care to recommend. The judges of the supreme and superior courts were paid each a salary of $9,000 and the chief justice $9,500. On reaching the age of 70 they are appointed state referees at a salary of $6,750 or three-quarters of their salaries as judges. The bill would give each of the widows of the judges named $6,750 a year. The senator included the name of the late Judge Webb of the superior court in giving the list of deceased judges for whose widows pensions were asked, but the bill referring to Mrs. Webb was not included in those read by the clerk. The report of the committee was accepted and the bills rejected.

An unfavorable report was also received from the committee on the judiciary for the appointment of Judge James P. Woodruff, who has retired from the judgship of the court of common pleas for Litchfield county, to the position of state referee. Senator Shaw said it was not the custom to appoint judges of the court of common pleas on their retirement from their judicial positions. The report was accepted and the bill rejected.

An unfavorable report was made by the committee on the judiciary on the bill establishing a public sales act. The bill was rejected.

An unfavorable report was received from the committee on the judiciary on a bill fixing the salary of the state's attorney of Fairfield county at $8,000. The bill was rejected. Senator Shaw said the committee had another bill on the subject under consideration. The bill was rejected.

An unfavorable report was received from the committee on the judiciary on senate bill No. 320 concerning the pollution of streams. The bill was rejected.

The committee on the judiciary reported a substitute bill concerning the retirement of state employes who were in the service prior to 1923. It provides that where they have been in the service of the state for forty years they shall be entitled to a pension of three fourths of their average salary for five years. Tabled for calendar.

A favorable report was received from the committee on the judiciary on the bill to allow Charles A. [illegible] messenger of the supreme court in Fairfield county, to retire on a pittance under the general pension law for state employes. It was tabled for calendar.

A favorable report was received from the committee on the judiciary on senate bill No. 302, providing for penalties for public utilities companies who cut trees on highways without permission of adjoining property owners or public utilities commission. The bill was tabled for calendar.

The bill concerning the licensing of undertakers and embalmers was passed.

The bill creating the office of commissioner of agriculture was continued on the calendar.

The bill fixing the salary of the highway commissioner at a minimum of $5,000 and a maximum of $6,000 and empowering the board of control to determine the precise amount of the salary was passed.

On the motion of Senator Keeney the bill relating to inheritance tax was recommitted.

Senator Wolcott, the chairman of the committee on finance in explaining the favorable report of the committee on the bill extending the powers of the tax commissioner said the objections raised in the house to the original bill were not included in the amended bill reported by the committee. It was modified to meet the objection of the house. The bill was passed.

The senate adjourned to Wednesday at 11.15.

What Jimmy and Mrs. Skunk Were Getting

Oh, you who would in judgment sit,
Be sure that you to judge are fit.
Old Mother Nature.

Without full knowledge of the facts any one would have said that Jimmy and Mrs. Skunk were ruining Farmer Brown's lawn. It did look that way. All over one part of it they had dug little holes three or four inches deep.

"How do you suppose Jimmy Skunk knows where there is a grub?" asked Farmer Brown's Boy.

It was a good thing that Farmer Brown didn't jump to hasty conclusions. It was a good thing that he knew something about the habits of Jimmy Skunk. Otherwise he might have lost his temper and shot Jimmy and Mrs. Skunk. But he did nothing of the kind. Much as he disliked having his lawn dug up he wouldn't condemn those two busy little workers in the moonlight until he knew just what they were doing it for.

So the next morning Farmer Brown and Farmer Brown's Boy went out to carefully examine the ground around the little holes where the Skunks had been at work. Almost at once Farmer Brown's Boy found a broken earthy-looking little shell and handed it to Farmer Brown. The latter knew what it was at once.

"It is the broken case of the pupa of the June Beetle," said he. "I suspected as much. Probably this whole lawn of ours is full of white grubs, which you know in time would turn into June or May Beetles, as they are called. Those white grubs live in the ground three years before coming out as beetles, and they live on the roots of grass. Jimmy and Mrs. Skunk are very fond of them and they have been digging them up. They certainly have made a bad-looking place where they have been at work, but in time it would have looked far worse but for them. Those grubs would have killed the grass by eating the roots."

"How do you suppose Jimmy Skunk knows where there is a grub?" asked Farmer Brown's Boy.

"Smells it, I guess," replied Farmer Brown. "If he doesn't he must hear it at work on the roots. But the grubs that were in those cases were not working, so it looks to me as if he must locate them by smell. Anyway, he finds them and that is all that concerns us. I was a bit worried about the chickens when I found that that Skunk had made a home under the hen house, but I guess that she isn't going to touch the chickens and I'm glad she is living that near, because it is right handy to this lawn.

Farmer Brown's Boy smiled. "Yet a lot of people think Jimmy Skunk is good only for his fur," said he.

"You mean a lot of people don't think at all," replied Farmer Brown. "I've known for a long time that Jimmy Skunk is a useful citizen, but never realized it quite so fully as I do now. Some insect pests man can successfully fight, but these white grubs working underground can't be reached without digging up the sod and turning it over, and then not all the grubs would be found. Jimmy Skunk comes along and does the job neatly and quickly. He does no unnecessary digging. He and Mrs. Skunk are saving this lawn of ours when it would have been impossible for us to save it. All we have to do is to go around after them and fill in these little holes and roll the ground. In a short time no one will ever know that any digging has been going on here. Jimmy and Mrs. Skunk are welcome as neighbors so far as I am concerned. But let us hope that they have no misunderstandings with other folk."

"Here is hoping," chuckled Farmer Brown's Boy.

WESTERLY

Location of 12-pound howitzers at the Westerly station of the New Haven road was decided at a conference Tuesday noon, between Richard Joseph Rooney, chairman of the committee from Amos P. Chapman post, Sons of Veterans and Trainmaster William J. Smith and Westerly Station Agent Earl S. Vavier, representing the New Haven road. The positions determined upon are such that the cannon can be readily seen by passers-by on the highways as well as passengers on the railroad. Mounted on a cement base eight feet in length, one of the guns will be set near the driveway of the station approach and directed toward Railroad avenue and the other nearer Canal street and pointed more toward the west, both being on the grass plot to the west of the railroad station.

The brass pieces have been stored for the past few years in the boiler room of the Westerly town hall until Sergeant R. J. Rooney of Company B, Third Regiment of Connecticut, with sixteen years of service previous to the world war, appeared before the Westerly town council and requested in the name of the Sons of Veterans camp that they be given a suitable position or turned over to the Sons of Veterans, for them to locate. The council committee, President Campbell and Council Clerk Whipple, were met by Sergt. Rooney and the brass pieces were taken to the Holdredge garage for renovation and storage. The ordinance was first brought to Westerly through the efforts of Rhode Island Representative to Congress from 1895 to 1897 Warren O. Arnold of Gloucester, a G. A. R. man associated with him another the late Louis W. Arnold, long a state senator from Westerly. The cannon are said to have been known as the Stillmanville stormers before they were taken to the [illegible] rooms in the Westerly [illegible] Public Library building [illegible] which building it was thought [illegible] would be placed. Later, the guns were taken to the Westerly town hall, [illegible] was proposed to have them [illegible] that building, but the guns were never located before either building. One of the guns saw some service in the Civil war, being of a type to be loaded into small boats and carried ashore by landing parties. At the meeting of Amos P. Chapman camp next Thursday, action will be taken on the plans of the camp committee headed by Mr. Rooney and arrangements made to secure the cement bases. The railroad site was the only one offered to the committee. It is expected that the "battery" will be in position before Memorial Day, at which time it is expected they will be noted in the Memorial day exercises by local patriotic societies.

A gang of a dozen laborers in the employ of Samuel Nardone began to make the dirt fly Tuesday in front of the Broad Street Christian church, at the junction of Elm, Broad and Granite streets, in the continuance of the installation of sewers for the Westerly sewage systems. Action in beginning the work this year has been delayed until this time, that the necessary authority be given the Westerly Water Commissioners to secure funds with which to carry on the laying of sewers, which is in charge of this department of the town. It is planned to install the sewer mains in the First Drainage area of Westerly this summer on Granite, Spruce, High and Dixon streets and Railroad avenue. At the last meeting of the Westerly town council it was voted to approve the recommendation of the Westerly Board of Water Commissioners, Tristam D. Babcock, Thomas H. Morrison and Lewis Stanton, in which the soil pipe contract was let to the Westerly Lumber Co., and the installation work to Samuel Nardone.

The bi-monthly meeting of Westerly probate court, Judge Edward M. Burke, was held at 2 o'clock in the probate court rooms of the Westerly Town hall, business being dispatched as follows:

Estate of Alice B. Maxson. Petition for probate of the will of the deceased whose death occurred March 26th by Albertus R. Maxson, husband, named as executor in the will received, was proved, read and Albertus R. Maxson was confirmed as executor, bond $1,000 without surety. Frank W. Coy named as appraiser.

Estate of Louise E. LaBonte. First and final account of Attorney C. E. Rooke for Victoria M. Brown, administratrix of estate, c. t. a., together with a general release from Adolphus LaBonte, received, approved and recorded. It appeared that in the account that $10 0was due to Clayton Douglas Cornell and Dorothy May Cornell, minors and the administratrix was ordered to pay the same to their parents, Della E. Cornell and Charles D. Cornell, for their education. The accounts were allowed and ordered recorded.

Bond was placed at $4,000 without surety.

Estate of Edgar Stillman. First and final account of the Washington Trust company, as executor, there being no objection, was received, allowed and ordered recorded.

Estate of John Dodds. Petition of C. H. Gavitt for the probate of the estate of the deceased whose death occurred March 28th, intestate, received. J. J. Keane. The nuptial mas which followed the ceremony was celebrated by Rev. J. F. Quinn. Before the ceremony, Martin H. Spellman sang "O Promise Me," and at the offertory of the mass he sang Gounod's "Ave Maria." The wedding music was by the organist, Mrs. Thomas Murray, accompanied on the violin by Raymond Mullaney.

The funeral of Mrs. Bridget A. Delap, widow of Thomas Delap, was held at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by many mourners, among whom was a delegation of the Ladies Catholic Benevolent association. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Raymond O'Callahan, with Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley deacon and Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger sub-deacon. The bearers were George and Frank Delap, sons, and Arthur S. Ross and John Duggan, the last named of New Haven, sons-in-law, and Dennis Devine Jr., and William L. White of this city. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, where the committal prayers were read by Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger.

The funeral of Mrs. Helen Poreda, wife of Stephen Poreda of Winthrop court, whose sudden death occurred at Lawrence hospital from heart disease Sunday night following the young woman over-exerting herself at a dance, took place this morning at 8 o'clock at St. Peter and St. Paul's church. Burial was in the Polish National cemetery, Norwich.

Funeral services for Nelson M. Keeney, former bookkeeper in the employ of the Savings Bank of New London, were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mr. Keeney on Hillcrest street, and were attended by many business and social associates of Mr. Keeney, where Mr. Keeney had been employed about ten years. Rev. J. Bevington Lee, pastor of the Second Congregational church officiated. The bearers were William H. Reeves, and George Wheeler, and Frank C. Harris, and Ricardo Morse. The burial was in the family plot in Cedar Grove cemetery.

John Quinn and Anna Kennedy, the latter the housekeeper [illegible] former the boss, came into the limelight of publicity today when they were in the police court, the former charged with a breach of the peace [illegible] assaulted Anna and after lambasting her he was accused of seeking to tear Anna's duds off. Mamie Marino was in the mix-up, but she was not accused. She was just there to tell of what happened. But Mary didn't have that opportunity, as John's counsel demurred to the complaint and thus no testimony was needed. John and Anna have been in the court so much during recent years that Judge Prince told them this morning that the parting of the ways had been reached and that they would both go to jail when they came before him again. He pointed out that they were a source of annoyance and a nuisance to the neighborhood where they reside, and said he proposed to clean up that section so far as the Quinn place was concerned. Mr. Quinn is a cripple. He has been arrested for selling liquor and Anna has often been prosecuted for drinking it. John was fined $25 today and produced the money to settle with the court.

Joseph Menghi, a laborer, about 30, was charged with statutory rape upon a little girl of less than five years of age. He was represented by counsel and demurred to the complaint. This was overruled and Menghi was held for trial in the superior court in a bond of $7,000. He was able to furnish sureties, in the persons of his father and mother and Lorenze Mentall. What the defense of Menghi will be was not disclosed, but the little girl is said to have told the prosecuter some facts that warranted him in bringing the very serious charge against Menghi. The alleged attack occurred near the home of the child and she was able to impart information to her parents that aroused them to the point of having murder in their hearts almost. Everyone who heard of the case was incensed as were the parents of the child. Menghi will come to trial in the superior court early next month when State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown of Norwich will be the prosecuter.

Julian Randomanski, 294 Willetts avenue, requested the police this afternoon to put a stop to the annoying conduct of youths in the vicinity of the Randomanski residence. The complainant alleged that the boys annoy him nightly and had made a practice of creating a disturbance in that vicinity for some time.

A family row occurred this forenoon at 182 Vauxhall street, when Mrs. Adams informed the police by telephone that her step-mother was attempting to force the complainant and the latter's children from the house. Sergeant John Cavanaugh was assigned to the case and going to the Vauxhall street house decided that there was no necessity of police action, as the two women had simply engaged in a war of words. The officer cautioned the women against disturbing the peace, also reminded them of what would happen if they indulged in further quarrelling.

James Powers, of 144 Crystal avenue and Mrs. David Kalamania, 59 Garfield avenue, patients at Lawrence Memorial associated hospital, were discharged today.

Fremont L. Vallett, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Vallett, 171 Garfield avenue, died yesterday afternoon at the United States Marine hospital, of New York, in which institution he had been ill a week, having been removed from the tug Plymouth, upon which he was employed and which runs between New York and Boston. Besides his parents, Mr. Vallett is survived by a brother, Elwood Vallett and two sisters, Misses Jennie and Doris Vallett, both of this city.

Two United States Coast guard craft, stationed at the local section base, yesterday and today made a search of the waters of Long Island sound in an effort to locate the body of Lawrence Cudworth, 22, Springfield Mass., a member of the crew of the patrol boat 228, also stationed at this port, who was drowned off Faulkner's Light, Bridgeport, last Sunday morning. No trace of the body was found.

The city's junior council, comprising school schildren, conferred with City Manager William A. Holt this afternoon, at the municipal building for the purpose of discussing plans for organization.

Harold White, 14, formerly residing at 8 Schoolhouse Lane, and for some time under treatment at Undercliff Sanatorium, near Hartford, escaped from that institution last night and all efforts to locate the youth failed. This morning Walter White, of this city, informed the police of the escape of his brother and requested that he be given assistance in locating the missing lad. The fugitive was described as having brown hair and blue eyes. This evening the runaway youth appeared in New London and voluntarily went to his home. He will probably be returned to the institution.

Joseph Senkow of Chesterfield, reported to the police late this afternoon that while his automobile was parked on Main street, near Richards street, an automobile bearing registration N-2560 collided with his machine and damaged it.

CITIZENS ALL "HET UP" OVER CITY COUNCIL MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 21—The meeting of the city council last evening, or rather what happened at that meeting, has been the topic of discussion everywhere men congregated today. The declaration of Councilor Fox that the committee that heard the investigation which was said to be for the purpose of improving the efficiency of the police department was a packed committee, which had convicted Captain Pinney and Lieut. Gaffney before any testimony was taken, was startling in its boldness. The Councilor followed up the assertion till he brought from Mayor Clarke the statement that he regarded Capt. Pinney as inefficient, though he did not state in what particular, other than to say he had been asked to present rules to govern the police to the council and that the request, though made a year and a half ago, had not been complied with. The report of the investigation, which is understood to be based upon 1,200 pages of typewritten testimony is expected to be made to the city manager next week. Councilor Streeter, chairman of the committee of probe, told Mr. Fox that the report would be informative to him and that he would know more about police matters when the report was made than he knows at present. When that report comes in, there is apt to be an even livelier session of the council than any that has preceded it, for it is understood to be the purpose of Capt. Pinney and his friends to fight back at every stage of the game. In what particular the removal of Capt. Pinney will be sought has not been divulged. It is not likely to be made known until the committee recommends to the city manager. Then he is to pass upon the method of discipline, if any discipline is warranted. By the statement of Mayor Clarke, the thing that is needed in the police department is rules and discipline. The director of law told the councilors in so many words last night that Capt. Pinney could not establish rules unless the city manager saw fit to approve of and adopt them. The lawyer said the captain was powerless in that direction, so it is not apparent how he can be held accountable for direliction in that particular. The fight has only just begun in the opinion of close observers and the councilors who have probed have only been sparing at arm's length. They are to go into the clinches when the report comes and then some lively work is looked for. Everyone is interested, for it was a surprise to most people that Capt. Pinney was the object of the investigation, which was begun in accusations of intoxication on the part of patrolmen. Mr. Streeter has announced that he will do what he believes is his duty fearlessly and place the responsibility where it should be placed, regardless of any consequences. He is also credited with having said that he does not expect to be in the council after his term expires and that he could not be induced to remain, with such an aggregation of city rulers as now make up the council.

Mr. Fox apparently likes the situation and he, too, believes he is right in his assertion that the accused men—the fellows at whom the probe is aimed—did not have any chance from the start. He says they were convicted before any testimony was heard and he is to carry their cause right along till they are shown to be the objects of antagonism by the committee of probers. Rumor has it that a minority report will come from the committee and that it will antagonize the majority report. Mr. Fox is understood to have in mind the presentation of facts in writing that will have a bearing on the method of conducting the investigation. City Manager Holt, the mayor and Councilor Streeter are in antagonism to each other and Attorney McGuire is said to have incurred the displeasure of members who are not pleased with decisions he has given in matters that came to him on questions of law.

At the council meeting Monday night the proprietors of the so-called Fifth avenue candy kitchen on Bank street gave notice through their counsel of a suit for damages against the city of the sum of $2,000 alleging that they were kept out of the possession of property that belongs to them. The candy kitchen was under attachment for debt when the city through its tax collector, levied upon the store and its contents for back taxes owed and the place was closed. The claim of the proprietors is understood to be that the property was at the time the city levied upon it and closed it was in the hands of the court through attachment and that the city had no right to take the proceeding it did take. The director of law is to pass upon the matter now. It is understood that it was by advice of the same lawyer that the city levied upon the property for the collection of the city tax.

At the meeting of the city council last evening the privilege of erecting a bridge 500 feet in length to connect Ocean beach with the Waterford shore was given to the Ocean Beach Improvement company of which Lawrence Brockett is understood to be the head. The petitioners for the privilege are to maintain the bridge and the city is to be in no way responsible for it.

This city is to endeavor to establish a building line on the west side of Bank street, between State and Tilley streets. The city council voted to give hearings on the matter, and in a resolution adopted expressed its purpose of going forward with the work. The city does not decide to condemn land on that side of the street, but merely to establish building lines, leaving the matter of taking title in fee to the land for future decision. The estimate of benefits accruing to property by the establishment of the building lines and the damages that the property may suffer are exactly the same in perhaps every case, or in nearly every instance. The hearings are to be on the 11th of May and due notice of them are to be given. It is believed that if land is to be condemned and taken by the city, that job will be the most expensive the city has ever undertaken.

SZEWCRUK FINED $100, GIVES NOTICE OF APPEAL

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 21—Wazel Szewceuk, Butlertown farmer, was taken into custody several days ago when state police at the Groton barracks, raided his premises and found four 10-gallon stills and about six gallons of white mule. It was believed that he would be arrested today on the more serious charge of attempted bribery of State Police Officer Frederick Caron, one of the raiding officers, and Justice of the Peace Frederick L. Goss, Waterford, but he has escaped facing the more serious offense for it was decided that as Szewceuk had not offered either Caron or Justice Goss money, that there was little probability that a conviction of attempted bribery could be obtained. If Szewceuk was arrested on a bribery charge, Szewceuk approached Officer Caron and Justice Goss and to the former the farmer intimated at paying the officer $10 if the liquor charge was dropped and to Goss Szewceuk mentioned sums of from $25 to $200 as sums that he would pay to avoid prosecution, but Szewceuk did not attempt to hand either Caron or Justice Goss any money, nor did he display any money.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock Szewceuk was presented before the justice in Firemen's hall, Waterford and was fined $100 and costs on the charge of keeping liquor for purposes of sale. He was defended by counsel and gave notice of an appeal to the next term of the court of common pleas.

The penalization of Szewceuk is the third time that he has been fined for violation of the prohibition law.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS ACTIVE.

New York, April 21.—Stock prices broke sharply today under active selling for accounts. Standard industrials and rails fell back one to nearly four points while several high-priced specialties which have been under pool sponsorship dropped 6 to 12 1-2 points. Trading was in broader volume, the day's sales running well over one and one-quarter million shares.

Wall street found plenty of excuses to explain the selling. These included the apparent inability of speculators for the advance to attract a public following on the recent upswing, leading to the temporary suspension of pool operations in several issues: lower metal and grain prices; the marking up of the call money rate to 4 1-2 per cent. and the growing uncertainty over the business outlook for [illegible]

Erratic fluctuations of United States Steel Iron Pipe, which was hammered down more than 12 points to a new 1925 low at 134 3-4, as compared with a new high of 250 earlier in the year, was one of the day's features. Universal Pipe common and preferred also attained new low prices at 29 7-8 and 70, off 2 5-8 and 4 1-2 points, respectively, liquidation of these issues has been due, in large measure, to reports of sharply decreased earnings as a result of French competition.

Selling of United States Steel common which, dropped 2 3-8 points to 114 1-2 was in further reflection of Chairman Gary's remarks to stockholders concerning the corporation's dividend policy, setting at rest rumors of a possible distribution of part of the undivided surplus. In the case of the independent steels, all of which lost a point or more, the selling was attributed to disappointment over current earnings and orders.

Maxwell Motors E, which touched 75 5-8 last week, collapsed today to 75 or 7 3-8 points below last [illegible] Mack Trucks sold 10 points below its high of last week, [illegible] at 142 1-8 for a net loss of 6 [illegible] the day. Maxwell A, Pierce Arrow common and prior preferred, Jordan Motors and Willys-Overland all back 1 to nearly 3 points, Nash Motor broke 11 1-2 to 356. Resumption of dividends on Willys-Overland preferred after a lapse of nearly five years, was not announced until after the market closed.

Commercial Solvents A and B broke 1 1-2 to 1 5-8 points to 116 1-2 and [illegible] respectively, or nearly 75 points below the year's highs. Other outstanding weak spots in the industrial list included Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, Allis Chalmers, American Locomotive, American Smelting, Tobacco, Baldwin, Chandler Motors, Davison Chemical, DuPont, International Paper, Mathieson Alkali, Texas Gulf Sulphur, United States Realty and Worthington Pump, all off [illegible] points or more. The list of new 1925 [illegible] included Republic and Inland [illegible] Fuel, Anaconda, Cuba [illegible] sugar preferred and R. S [illegible]

Rails also were in fre esupply. Fris[illegible] Southern Railway, South[illegible] Delaware and Hudson, [illegible] Pittsburgh and West Virginia [illegible] a few others yielding [illegible] while Chicagko and Al[illegible] preferred, Baltimore [illegible] preferred and Omaha preferred through their previous 1925 [illegible]

[illegible] opened at 3 1-2 per cent., [illegible] to 4 and thence to 4 1-2 [illegible] calling of loans during [illegible] Time money rates consequently easy, being quoted [illegible] per cent. Commercial paper were unchanged.

The foreign exchanges displayed a [illegible] tone today. Demand sterling [illegible] nearly a cent higher around [illegible] 1-2 and French francs held relatively steady just under 5 1-4 cents.

JEWETT CITY

During the night, Monday, the mercury dropped to 26 degrees, thus establishing a record for low temperature, with apple blossom time only a few weeks away. New plowed land stiffened enough to bear up a man, as he walked across the furrows.

At one place where new construction is going on, and plastering being done, the mortar-bed froze over and at 7 a. m., Tuesday a passing resident saw the workmen breaking out the big lumps of frozen plaster with a pick. It is believed that budding trees were not far enough advanced to be damaged to any extent.

A SOLDIER 26 YEARS. HENRY M'FALL HAS RARE LUCK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Jewett City, April 21—Henry McFall is an operative today in the Aspinook bleachery, he is a man with a war record far removed from anything that is ordinary. Talks with him have resulted in obtaining some idea of his remarkable history as a soldier under the British flag. His record and war service papers as an English Tommy, stand to prove that at the age of 20, in 1852, he enlisted from his home town of Belfast, joining the 18th, Royal Irish Infantry. His first service was in Malta, where he was located ten months. Soon his unit was ordered to India, and while there his regiment was one of several others dispatched to Khartown, Egypt, for the relief of General Gordon.

McFall's regiment, although the last to leave was the first to arrive in the Egyptian city.

He tells his own tales about General Gordon, so famous in English military history. He often went about trying to preach religion to the savage Indian tribes, who, however, killed him before help arrived. McFall was one of those who received a share of the one thousand pounds, given to his regiment by the British admiralty, as a reward for their valiant attempt to relieve the sorely pressed general.

Next, McFall saw nearly two years of service under Lord Roberts in the Indian frontier campaign, where he was engaged for the most part in the Himalaya mountain district, in real guerilla warfare of the most terrible sort. At the battle of Buckrow his buddy was shot at his side. Here the superior fighting methods and skilled military tactics, enabled his regiment to overcome a much larger force of natives, even after a successful ambush.

After twelve years service in these two campaigns McFall decided to quit the army and settle down to a life of peace and quiet.

However he was not able to resist the call to arms, when the Boer War broke out, and again volunteered his services to the British flag.

His tales of South African service are full of interest. He tells of the Boer conflict as a series of forced marches, guerilla f

DENIES CENTRAL VERMONT PLEA TO CHANGE TIME OF BOAT TRAIN

(Special to The Bulletin).

Hartford, April 21—A meeting was held this morning by the Public Utilities Commission on the petition of the Central Vermont railroad for permission to change the time of leaving New London of what was formerly known as the boat train. The train now leaves New London at 5:45 a. m. as was ordered by the commission on July 11, 1915. The company now desires to make the leaving time 8:10.

The granting of the petition was advocated by J. W. Redmond of St. Albans, Vt., attorney for the road, J. W. Hanley, general freight and passenger agent, and E. J. Guthrie, superintendent of the Southern Division. They pointed to the fact that the trains were being operated at a loss, the receipts being from 30 to 50 cents per train mile while the expense was was about $1.00.

Opposition to granting the railroad's petition was heard from Mrs. Vinton of Mansfield who said that a change of time would not benefit the company in its receipts, but that the public would be greatly inconvenienced by the delay in receipt of newspapers and mails. Others appearing in opposition were H. J. Smith, of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, Doctor W. L. Higgins who wanted to get his mail before he left in the morning for his round of visitations, H. M. Bruckett of Willington, J. G. Service of South Willington, Gardner Hall of Willington, Wm. Park, B. P. Cooley and R. H. Valentine of Stafford Springs. All of the speakers expressed the opinion that the proposed change would be detrimental to the best interests of the manufacturing and business along the line.

Postmaster King of Willimantic was opposed to the proposed change on account of the delay in the mails from the south.

The Norwich Bulletin company opposed the change on account of the delay in the delivery of its publication.

The petition was denied by the commission.

NEW YORK WORKING WOMEN TO BUILD BIG CLUB HOUSE

Through New York friends and members of the committee, a number of Norwich women are interested in the big project of the American Women's association, Inc., which has undertaken to build a $4,500,000 club house. The association is a non-political, non-sectarian organization of 3,342 business and professional women who earn their living in New York.

For several years they have owned a small club house at 220 Madison Ave but having outgrown these quarters, the members have decided to expand. They have purchased a site on West 23rd-West 24th streets, where they plan to erect a 19-story club house, with the latest word in equipment, facilities and comforts. This club will contain 1,000 bed-rooms with bath, each one an outside room, opening on the street or on the terraced garden around which the club house will be erected. These bedrooms, with all the privileges of the house included, will be rented to the members at an average rental of fourteen dollars a week. Already 921 of these rooms have been reserved.

Prominent New York men as well as women are interested in the project, the treasurer of the association being Miss Anne Morgan. To finance the project the American Women's Realty company has been organized, with Lindley M. Garrison, president; Miss Anne Morgan and Felix M. Warburg, vice presidents; Arthur W. Loasby, of Wall St, treasurer; and a substantial board of directors. The club plan has been endorsed by Governor Al. Smith, Cardinal Hayes, Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Mme. Galli-Curci, Ernest Hamlin Abbott, Joseph P. Day, Rabbi Krass, Rev. Dr. Cadman and many others.

The need for and scope of such a broad and practical club home is clearly set forth in an elaborate booklet, its cover design the gift of Howard Chandler Christy and its story, "Miss Robinson Crusoe of New York" appealingly told by Harry Powers Story. Working women of New York in every line have combined to put over the big project, planning to start with capital stock of $3,000,000.

Already they have bought the ground site, at $416,000.

NEW GENERAL RULES IN BANKRUPTCY CASES

The members of the New London county bar association and especially those engaged in the administration of bankrupt estates, have manifested interest in new rules adopted and established by the United States supreme court as additional general orders in bankruptcy matters.

Receivers in bankruptcies and their attorneys are precluded from soliciting proof debt, power of attorney, or other authority to act for or represent any creditor for any purpose in connection with the administration of estates in bankruptcy or the acceptance or rejection of and composition offered by a bankrupt under the provision of new rules.

These new rules also provide that a receiver or marshal appointed by the court to take charge of the property of a bankrupt after the filing of a petition, shall be deemed to be a mere custodian within the meaning of section 48 of the bankruptcy act, unless his duties and compensation are specifically enlarged by order of the court, upon proper cause shown either at the time of the appointment or later.

Before confirming a composition the judge of the court will require all creditors and others who may have waived their right to share in the distribution of the deposit made by the bankrupt, for claims, fees, or otherwise, to inform the court, and the bankrupt to make affidavit that he had not directly or indirectly paid or promised any consideration other than as made known in the offer of composition.

No allowances are to be made to any attorney, receiver or trust of a bankrupt estate except upon a statement accompanied by an affidavit explicitly showing for what purpose the expenditure is to be made.

This statement would also be presented for the consideration of the creditors of the estate upon their meeting for the purpose.

The court is given authority to deny the allowance of any fee to the attorney for the petitioning creditors or the reimbursement of his expenses, or both, if it shall appear that the proceedings were instituted in collusion with the bankrupt or were not instituted in good faith.

Myrtice E. Fielding Germaine of this city seeks divorce from James O. Germaine, also of Norwich. They were married May 24, 1920 and the petitioner alleges three grounds in her petition for divorce, intolerable cruelty since Jan. 1, 1922, habitual intemperance for more than a year past and adultery since July 1, 1923 at Norwich with various persons who are unknown to the plaintiff. She asks that her name be changed to Myrtice E. Fielding.

Jennie Bunnell Nagle of Norwich seeks divorce from John Nagle, formerly of Groton, and now of parts unknown. They were married Dec. 3, 1906 and she alleges desertion on May 1, 1913. She asks to have her name changed to Jennie Bunnell.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR ROAD IN EAST LYME

Four of the contracts for road improvements, bids for which were recently received, were awarded Tuesday by the Connecticut state highway department. Estimated total cost of the four contracts is $305,545.91.

The highways to be improved include an additional section of the Boston Post road in the vicinity of Westport, which will be extended to a width of thirty-six feet, with concrete pavement, as part of the highway department's plan to relieve traffic congestion on that mainline route by doubling the width of the road for the entire distance from the New York state line to Bridgeport. Following is a list of the successful bidders and the roads they will improve:

CLOSE RACE IN EGG LAYING AT STORRS

The egg race at Storrs is not as fast as the management would like to see but it's close enough to please the most fastidious. In the twenty-fourth week of the contest two Connecticut breeders tied for first place. Keewaydin Farm's pen of Barred Rocks from Darien and George Phillips' pen of White Leghorns owned by Hilltop Farm at Suffield, Conn., and Meadowedge Farm at Sterling Jct., Mass., tied for second place with 46 eggs each. The pairing continues, as Payne's Giant Reds from Brooklyn, Conn., and Hanson's Leghorn Farm from Corvallis, Ore., tied for third place with 46 eggs each. Rhode Island Reds owned by F. S. Chapin of Longmeadow, Mass., and Carterloa Farm's pen of White Wyandottes from Troy, Mo., tied for fourth placew ith 45 eggs each. The total production for all pens was 4,059 eggs or a yield of better than forty-one per cent.

During the twenty-fourth week there were several significant changes among the leading pens on the basis of total scores from the first of November until the end of the third week in April. Rhode Island Reds and White Leghorns held steady, but in the White Rock class H. B. Spangler of Matawan, N. J., crowded W. C. Matthews of Wilmington, Del., out of third place. In the White Wyandotte group Carterloa Farm of Troy, Mo., jumped into second place leaving Wm. A. Ellis of Warwick, R. I., and A. B. Rice of Tekamah, Neb., tied for third position. In the Barred Rock class Jasper E. Guntill of Berwick, Me., moved up into third place instead of R. W. Davis & Sons of Rockland, Me. The birds are now out on range about one week earlier than usual. Each group of twenty birds has two yards each 20x50 feet. These yards are occupied alternately and thus the grass ranges are kept in the best possible condition.

MAN WITH REVOLVER TERRORIZED LAKE ST.

Powell G. McKnight, a colored man between 50 and 60 years old, was taken in charge at his home, 25 Lake street, by the police Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock after he had attempted to shoot a small girl with a revolver in front of Donnelly's store. Powell was brought to police headquarters and from there taken by First Selectman Wm. S. Murray to the Norwich state hospital where he had previously been a patient.

Powell appeared on Lake street flourishing a 32 revolver and snapped it twice at a small girl whom he met in the street. Fortunately the revolver failed to go off. Disgusted with it he smashed it against a stone and went back into his house, locking the door and refusing to come out again.

Word was sent to police headquarters and Chief George Hinton, Special Sergeant Myron Morgan and Officer Daniel O'Neil to bring Powell in. When the officers arrived, Powell still refused to come out and while Sergeant Morgan was trying to get into the house through the cellar a key was found that opened the door to Powell's tenement. When Sergeant Morgan went in, Powell was stretched out on the bed and made no attempt to resist arrest.

His mental disturbance makes him believes he has millions of money in trunks and other places in his house and acres of vegetables planted in various places.

POETRY

Come In, Little Stranger

"Come in, little stranger," I said,
As she tapped at my half-open door,
With a blanket pinned over her head
That reached to the basket she bore.

A look of sweet innocence fell
From her modest and pretty blue eye
As she said, "I have matches to sell,
And hope you are willing to buy.

"A penny a bunch is the price,
I hope you'll not find it too much;
They're tied up so even and nice,
Just ready to light with a touch.

"And what is you name, little girl?"
"'Tis Mary," she said, "Mary Dow."
And carelessly tossed off a curl
That played on her delicate brow.

"My father was lost in the deep,
The ship never got to the shore.
And mother is sad and still weeps
To hear the wind blow and sea roar.

"She sits there at home without food,
Beside our poor sick Willie's bed.
She spent all her money for wood,
So I sell matches for bread.

"I'd go to the yard to get chips,
But then it would make me so sad
To see the men building their ships
And think they had made one so bad.

"But God, I am sure, who can take
Such wonderful care of a bird,
Will not forget nor forsake
The children who trust in His word.

"And now if I only can sell
The matches I brought out today,
I'll think I'll be doing quite well
And we shall rejoice in the pay."

"My home, little bird!" then I thought
"Will home, full of glee to your nest
I took all the matches she brought,
And Mary may tell you the rest.

Then Laugh

Build for yourself a strong box,
Fasten each part with care;
When it's as strong as your hand can make it,
Put all your troubles there,
Hide there all thought of your failures
And each bitter cup that you quaff.
Lock all your heartaches within it—
Then sit on the lid and laugh!

Tell no one else its contents,
Never its secrets share;
When you've dropped in your care and worry,
Keep them forever there,
Hide them from sight as completely
As though the world will never dream half
Fasten the strong box securely—
Then sit on the lid and laugh!

IN LIVELY SESSION, HOUSE REJECTS THE WHEELER BILL

Mr. Bell of Salisbury Maintained That His Fellow Members of the Judiciary Committee Had Not Given the Bill or Its Substitute a Fair Show—Speaker Left the Chair and Led Opponents of the Measure—Representatives Alling and Averill Vigorously Opposed the Bill—It Was Rejected by Failure to Get the Necessary One-Fifth.

Hartford, April 23.—The Wheeler bill for amendment to the present prohibition enforcement law was rejected by the house in concurrence with the senate today. The house session was by far the liveliest this year, and it was featured by the vigorness of the opposition Mr. Bell, of Salisbury gave to his fellow members of the judiciary committee, who, he claimed had not given the Wheeler bill or its substitute a fair show.

Speaker E. L. Darbie drafted as an opponent of the bill left the chair in order to lead the debate while the gavel for the time being was held by Representative E. T. Clark, of Haddam.

Mr. Bell was not supported by many members while the burden of supporting the motion to reject the bill fell upon Speaker Darbie, House Chairman Alling and Mr. Averill, of the judiciary committee. All three spoke plainly their opinions as to the part Chief Justice Wheeler had taken in framing the bill. Mr. Alling, exercising his part to close in opposition said among other things that he was of the opinion that a law cannot be enforced until public opinion demands it." He said he sat on a city court bench, but had never passed upon a man's constitutional rights.

"The 'rub' comes on this bill," he said, "as the highest court has fostered the bill. Respect for all law and not enforcement of one law is needed. Four years ago an ex-chief justice refused to draft a law because it might be construed as judicial interference. No one branch of the government should infringe on the other."

Mr. Alling said if it was right for those who write the laws to construe them. That was the chief reason for rejection of this bill, he said. He also believed from experience that too severe penalties which stopped arrests were not good. He said there was law enough now, the state had never made it a crime to buy anything, and that the clause in the Wheeler bill which penalized buying liquor would have made for blackmail and also would have prevented the securing of evidence. He said the present law had never been enforced and penalties provided had never been imposed.

When the motion to reject was put Mr. Bell demanded a roll carr and quoted the rules to Mr. Clark that a roll call could be hod. Mr. Clark put the motion but Mr. Bell failed to get the neeeded ope-fifth as it was then after 1.30 p. m. The bill was quickly rejected.

BELIEVES HOUSE ERRED IN REJECTING WHEELER BILL

Hartford, April 23—Representative J. Mortimer Bell, of Salisbury, who was general of the small group which opposed the rejection of the Wheeler bill in the house, tonight issued the following statement:

"I am constrained to think that the action of the house failed to give expression to the widespread demand of the people of the state for a stronger enforcement law. This was due largely to prejudice and passion aroused by the arguments that the judiciary to the state had unduly interfered in legislative matters. I am afraid that as a result of the vote, the bootlegger will be still further encouraged to flout the constitution and the law and I would not be surprised to see him attempt to exert an influence in political affairs. The issue of respect for the constitution and enforcement of the laws based thereon is and will continue to be a very live one and we may expect to have the question up at each succeeding general assembly until it has been rightly settled. It may be that it will cost the state the loss of morel lves and the disgrace of more open and flagrant violations of the law before public opinion will be aroused to the point necessary to secure an efficient enfrocement of the law, but it will surely come, or disastrous results will be visited on our government and institutions."

MERRIOT PRESIDENT OF CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

Paris, April 22—(By the A. P.)—Edouard Herriot, former premier, was elected to the coveted presidency of the Chamber of Deputies in one of the stormiest sessions ever staged there. He suffered a studied affront from the opposition, however, as M. Herriot was the only candidate who failed of election on the first ballot, his supporters lacking thirteen of constituting a majority of the chamber membership, necessary for a quorum.

On the second ballot he was really unanimously elected, 267 to 1, as this negative vote, it was learned, was cast by M. Herriot himself.

Fist fighting is no novelty in the French lower house, but the presiding officer expressed the greatest indignation that the deputies should carry their voting into the rostrum itself, even upsetting the chair of the president, who immediately donned his silk hat as a signal that the session was suspended.

The conflict ensued during the second balloting, when Deputy Balanant charged that ten deputies had voted twice. Two Socialist deputies attacked him, and the fight became general.

The cabinet triumvirate, Painleve, Caillaux and Briand, face the senate tomorrow and will ask for a vote of confidence on the ministerial declaration presented yesterday. M. Caillaux will appear before a body, half the members of which sat in judgment upon him when he was sentenced to imprisonment and exile and stripped of his civil rights. Though it is expected that the senators will be reasonably peaceful, there is no concealment that a strong hostility to Caillaux exists in the upper house.

UNITED STATES FLEET TO CRUISE TO AUSTRALIA

Washington, April 22—The cruise of a section of the United States fleet to Australia this summer will be conducted, Secretary Wilbur said, notwithstanding a few scattering protests received from American citizens and organizations.

Mr. Wilbur declined to comment on a letter received from Frederick J. Libby of the National Council for Prevention of War, urging sharper curtailment or abandonment of the cruise. The secretary said 18 or 20 protests from individuals and organizations in different parts of the country had been received and answered in a "form letter."

A copy of one of these letters declared that if all the information on the subject was available "speakers and writers would not attempt to hamper their government in its efforts to promote friendship abroad and to make certain of our ability to maintain peace for our own lands."

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

RELIEF ORGANIZATIONS WITHDRAW FROM RUSSIA

Moscow, April 22—(By the A. P.)—All active American relief work in Russia, with the exception of the Caucasus area, ceased with the withdrawal of the American Students' Relief Organization from Moscow. Foreign relief assistance no longer is needed, the Soviet government has declared, as the government now believes itself able to administer to the needs of the special classes formerly aided by the American Students Organizations.

This decision by the Soviet government does not affect the Near East relief organization, which is caring for many thousands of Armenian orphans in the Caucasus. This work will continue indefinitely. Nor will the decision alter the agricultural and industrial work conducted on a small scale by Quakers and Mennonites.

Beginning as a famine relief medium under the American Relief Association at the time when Russian professors and students were in desperate need following the famine of 1921, the students' organization has done extensive work during the last three years. Largely supported by students of colleges and universities throughout the United States, funds have been available for providing eighty million meals, 25,000 Russian textbooks and journals, $500,000 in cash and unnumbered thousands of garments and shoes for needy Russian intellectuals.

THREE GIRLS OVERCOME BY AMMONIA FUMES

New York, April 22—Ammonia fumes this afternoon overcame three girls employed in the 3-story St. Regis building on West 43rd street, made many others ill and drove 300 occupants of the building to the street Twelve men and women caught on the seventh floor were rescued by firemen.

Frances Gray, telephone operator in the building, refused to leave until she had notified every office, and Albert Lloyd, a negro elevator man, continued to operate his car until everyone who could reach the elevator had been taken down.

The fumes escaped from a broken pipe leading to a 10-ton tank in the basement.

At Schraff's restaurant, next door, 60 women who were taking tea were forced out by the spreading gas. At the St. Regis restaurant on the first floor about 30 patrons left without paying their checks, police were told.

BODY OF FLOYD COLLINS MOVED FROM BENEATH ROCK

Cave City, Ky., April 22—The body of Floyd Collins, cave explorer who died from hunger and exposure when trapped in Sand Cave late in January, today was freed from its natural underground prison and moved from beneath the rock that pinned it to the bottom of the 70 foot shaft, W. H. Hunt, Central City, Ky., engineer, said early tonight.

The body was in good condition considering the time it had been exposed to the underground elements, Mr. Hunt said. He also announced that the corpse will be raised from the shaft to the surface at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Examination of the rock that fell on Collins and pinned him in the death trap, showed that it weighed only 75 pounds, according to Hunt.

Coleman died in Middlesex hospital here tonight from a fractured skull suffered yesterday when he was struck by a truck operated by James Marino, of Haddam road. Admission Made By Senator Wheeler

That He Had Discussed One Oil Land Permit With Department of Justice Officials.

Great Falls, Mont., April 22—(By the A. P.)—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, testifying in his own behalf, admitted he had discussed one oil land permit with Department of Interior officials, putting the entire story of his connection with Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator, before the jury.

The admission came while he was being cross-examined by District Attorney John L. Slattery, prosecutor. Senator Wheeler was indicted on a charge of accepting a fee for prosecuting oil land permits for his client before the department.

In admitting that he took up one matter involving an oil permit with Edwin S. Booth, then department solicitor, he testified that his action did not constitute an appearance, and that it was something he would have done for any Montana citizen on request.

The accused senator was on the stand nearly four hours and the district attorney had not completed his cross-examination when court adjourned.

When Senator Wheeler leaves the stand, the question of adjourning court pending the arrival of other witnesses from the east will be decided. They were called by the defense in an attempt to controvert the testimony of George P. Hayes, New York attorney who declared that he met Wheeler in New York in March, 1923, and was asked to appear before the interior department in his place and in behalf of Campbell with the promise of a large fee.

The senator directly denied Hayes' testimony when he was called to the stand by his chief of counsel, Senator Thomas J. Walsh.

"I never met George P. Hayes in New York," he said emphatically. "I never heard of him until he appeared before the Daugherty investigating committee in Washington in March 1924."

Senator Wheeler declared he was introduced to Hayes in attorney attached to the Daugherty committee. Meizner previously testified to the meeting of the two and said at that time neither Hayes nor Senator Wheler showed any indication of ever having met before.

LYMAN WINS POSSESSION OF THE SIMONS FARM

Middletown, Conn., April 22.—Herbert Lyman, East Hampton farmhand will retain possession of the Simon's farm on which he has lived and worked for 19 years, and Miss Jennie Cain, a nurse who came from Buffalo to "aid Lyman" in his suit for $9,000 against the administrator of the estate of Mrs. Phoebe Simons, will remain either as his housekeeper or wife, or both.

When court which opened on the case yesterday, convened after noon recess today it was announced that an agreement between the contending parties had been reached, whereby Lyman is to pay $2,200 to Mrs. Mary Purcell, of Southhold, L. I., Mrs. Simon's daughter, for the farm. Later it was learned that Miss Cain, who announced when she arrived in East Hampton last week that she had no objections to marrying Lyman, would either marry him or remain as his housekeeper. She offered her aid to Lyman after his case had been given wide publicity, because of his claims of spiritualistic communication with his former employer who died last year.

The scene depicts an attack of Turkish soldiers upon an Armenian home and Rajab sought to prevent presentation of the scene on the ground that it might injure his business and cause riots.

Judge Morton informed counsel for the plaintiff that he could not issue a restraining order which might involve a nation upon the unsupported stand of one man who was merely a temporary resident of Boston.

Publishers Hear Of Plight Of Farmers

New York, April 22.—A gloomy picture of the plight of the American farmer, which he said, could be alleviated only by effective organization, was painted tonight by Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, in an address at the annual banquet of the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

"Our agriculture is decaying," he said. "Farm bankruptcies in recent years have increased more than 600 per cent. According to the department of agriculture, the average farmer could have obtained a larger income since 1920 if he had hired himself out as a hired man. In considerable portions of the agricultural era farms cannot bse sold for the value of the improvements acine.

Optimistic reports and the juggling of index numbers to indicate improvements in farmers' finances, are misleading, Mr. Lowden asserted, and tend only to put off the day when adequate remedies will be found. Solution of the farmer's troubles, he said, is vital to the welfare of the country at large as well as to the farmers themselves.

The true solution, he asserted is a national organization whereby the farmer can sell his products in the organized markets of today on terms of full equality in knowledge and power. Under present conditions the farmer sells in competition with other farmers in a market that largely controls prices because of its own organization.

"I like to think of the time when everything I produce upon my farm I can deliver to my own association in full confidence that as much intelligence and as large a bargaining power shall be exhibited by those representing me as are already exhibited now no the part of the buyer. I like to think of the time when the representatives of all these great farmers' organizations shall meet in a congress once a year, just as other industries now meet for the purpose of forming an intelligent and cooperative program for the year," he said.

The only opposition to such a program, he asserted, comes from those who now profit through the misfortunes of the farmer.

Competition no longer plays the great part in fixing prices that was once thought, he continued. "Unrestricted competition is but a form of warfare. Whether among the nations of the world for larger armaments or among the producers of useful commodities it has been found to entail losses to society far beyond the benefits it has conferred."

Marketing conditions today, he said, have brought about a situation where a scanty crop frequently is worth more to the farmer than a bumper one. As an example he cited the corn crop of last year whose value was estimated by the department of agriculture at almost $200,000,000 more than the crop of 1923, although it was about 20 per cent. smaller.

"When the hot summer winds scorch the field, I do not know whether to pray for rain or to thank the Almighty for the unbroken drought," he said, citing it as an example of the perplexity of the farmer under present marketing conditions.

$1,000,000 SUIT AGAINST FORD PUBLISHING CO.

Detroit, Mich., April 22—Damages of $1,000,000 was asked in a suit filed in United States district court here today against Henry Ford and the Dearborn Publishing Company which he owns, by Aaron Sapiro, an attorney who has been connected prominently with cooperative marketing organizations of farmers and fruit growers throughout the country.

Sapiro's suit charges that certain articles printed in the Dearborn Independent, a weekly newspaper published by Ford, have injured him as an attorney and deprived him of "divers fees, gains, rewards and compensation," which he otherwise might have obtained.

The petition quotes articles which it is averred appeared in the Dearborn Independent, accusing Sapiro of being one of "a conspiracy of Jewish bankers who seek the control of food markets of the world." It further quotes the publication as saying that the plaintiff is seeking to get control of the wheat, cotton, potato, hop, hay, tobacco, raisin and bean markets.

Sapiro's petition claims that he has been active for 15 years in building up marketing associations for agricultural products, that he has not served in any way except as his services were requested and that he has not served in any way except as his services were requested and that he has no knowledge of "the existence of any conspiracy such as alleged by the defendants," or of any conspiracy to oppose the interest of American farmers and producers except the campaign of said defendants to mislead and deceive the farmers."

WOULD SPEED NEGOTIATIONS WITH LABOR UNIONS

New York, April 22—A definite move to simplify and speed up negotiations with labor unions was approved by the American Newspaper Publishers' association at its 39th annual convention which opened here today.

The six hundred delegates from all parts of the country voted a change in procedure in this regard as recommended by President S. E. Thomason, which took the negotiation of labor contracts out of the hands of the convention as a whole and placed it back into the hands of the board of directors.

Actual ratification of such contracts remains, as before, with the association membership.

President Thomason pointed out that heretofore with conventions held annually, contract-negotiating groups perforce waited a year before they secure instruction or approval in the various stages of their work.

Under today's enactment, such groups will get action in one-sixth the time the boards of directors to whom they are now made answerable holding meetings every two months.

President Thomason announced that negotiation with unions had virtually reached an impasse because of present hindarances his reform was aimed to remove.

DR. BROWN DELIVERS ADDRESS ON "MY NEW AND OLD FAITHS"

Address Which Bishop Manning Forbade Him to Give at St Mark's-on-the-Bouwerie Last Sunday—Deposed Bishop Admitted That He Was a Heretic, But Held That Science Had Robbed the Word of "Any Possible Meaning."—Declared That the Church Never Followed the Method Dictated, by Science, Which "Recognizes Only Truth And Error."

New York, April 22—The Rt. Rev. William Montgomery Brown of Gallion, O., bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, recently convicted of heresy by two ecclesiastical trial courts tonight delivered the address which Bishop William T. Manning forbade him to give at St. Marks'-on-the-Bouwerie last Sunday.

Bishop Brown told an audience at the non-denominational community church that he undoubtedly was a heretic when judged by theological standards, but insisted that he had chosen heresy in preference to "stultification and hypocrisy, the only two things which the church would permit."

The conflict between modern science and traditional theology as practiced and taught by the Episcopal church, he said, provided the background for his recent situation in the church. This situation had its inception in 1922 when charges of heresy were preferred against him, based on statements in his book, "Communism and Christianism."

Bishop Brown was invited to speak by the Rev. William Norman Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's last Sunday. Bishop Manning forbade him the use of the church or any parish or mission in the New York diocese.

The address tonight, "My New and Old Faiths," was on the New Testament text, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," and held, in the main, that the Episcopal church's failure to recognize a "changing concept of God" had created a crisis in religion.

Bishop Brown opened his address with the admission that he was a heretic "in the sense in which the word was always used in the days when they burned people at the stake for deviating in some particular form the approved and established codification of literal belief." He contended, however, that judged by such standards, "everybody is a heretic today," but held that science had robbed the word of "any possible meaning." The church, he went on, has never followed the method dictated by science, which "recognizes only truth and error."

"Even to propose such a scheme for separating the false and true shocks the theological mind into complete inaction," he said, adding that it is the "dilemma of the old churches that they are trying to function in this scientific world with certain theories as to the nature of truth which the world has long since discarded."

He denied that he was an atheist, saying that "if anyone tells me that he does not believe in God, he tells me nothing; for I do not know what he means by God. The chances are he merely has given up the belief in a certain conception of God; and every living mind necessarily passes through that experience." He added:

"The important thing in a man's religious life is not that he holds the right conception of God, but that he holds together a larger concept than he held yesterday."

His God, the bishop explained, "is the law of all nature, • • • which rewards those who know and faithfully observe it." He did not attack his church's concept of God, he insisted, but he did attack "the position of the church which declares by its trial of me that its representatives must not seek a larger concept of God and a better plan of salvation," a position which "automatically excludes every scientifically-minded modern man and woman from religious leadership."

WARNERS PURCHASE THE VITAGRAPH CO.

New York, April 22.—Warner Brothers, Inc., independent motion picture producers of New York and Los Angeles, today announced the purchase of the Vitagraph Company of America, the oldest motion picture producing company in the United States. The deal makes Warner Brothers one of the largest international distributors in the country.

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, announced that the deal represented an outright purchase. He did not disclose its terms. The controlling interests in Vitagraph was bought from Albert E. Smith, J. Stuart Blackton and the estate of William T. Rock, who were the organizers of the company 25 years ago and in whose hands it has been ever since.

The Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn, a 20 acre studio in Hollywood, a large laboratory there and a large library of motion pictures, having historical value, as well as real estate and all subsidiaries of the pioneer organization, are included in the sale.

Mr. Warner said his company has taken over Vitagraph to distribute its future products throughout the world. All work now planned by Vitagraph for the year will be completed, players and stories under contract being part of the purchase.

Vitagraph presented its first picture "The Black Diamond Express" in 1898, advertising it as a spectacle whereby the public would "see a train, belching smoke, approaching from a distance and actually moving right up to and passing the audience on a plain white sheet."

Warner Brothers are also pioneers in the motion picture field, starting in a small theatre in Newcastle, Pa.

SELECTING JURY FOR THE TRIAL OF OLYMPIA MACRI

New Haven, April 22.—After twenty-six talesmen had been rejected as potential jurors, one juror was selected in the first day of the first degree murder trial of Olympia Macri in superior court here today. Miss Macri is charged with the murder of John Barnano, the alleged father of her baby.

The lone juror selected was Daniel B Perry, 58, fisherman, of Milford. Conn Shortly before court adjourned for the day, Judge Christopher L. Avery, ordered Sheriff Frank Geddes to summon one lone juror into the court room for instructions regarding the reading of newspapers before the case is taken up. Investigation by deputy sheriff disclosed that Perry had vanished as the instructions were postponed until tomorrow.

Of the total of 26 talesmen that were questioned, eight were ruled out after peremptory challenges by Attorney Joseph Koletsky, counsel for Miss Macri; four were challenged by the state and the remaining fourteen were excused by the court. Of the latter 14, the majority proved to have strong feelings against capital punishment while several had physical infirmities which would interfere with their serving as witnesses. The defense had state may each challenge 25 talesmen under the state law.

It was not until 4.40 p. m. that Perry was accepted as a juror and in the hour that followed before court was recessed, no further progress was made.

DEAN INGE BRANDS IDLENESS THE WORST OF ALL SINS

New Haven, April 22—"Idleness is the worst of all sins," declared the Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, dean of St. Paul's cathedral, London, to an assemblage of clergymen and divinity students at his second lecture of the day before the sixteenth annual convocation of the Yale Divinity school here today.

That the "gloomy dean" believes in the doctrine himself has been amply proved during his stay in New Haven for he has made from two to four lectures or addresses each day in addition to attending numerous dinners and teas given in his honor.

Making the request after his lecture earlier in the day that "the secular press should call off their dogs" as his lectures were intended not for the masses but for theological students, Dean Inge made several references in his second lecture of the day to modern problems and to business men that evoked laughter from his distinguished audience.

"If the American millionaire," he said, "generally stints in spending, you will pardon me if I observe that his wife spends enough for the two of them."

This remark came after an historical review of the growth of Calvanism during which he said: "Calvanism is perhaps the only branch of Christianity that accepts the standard of capitalism. He defined the twentieth century financier during his discussion of Calvanism as follows:

"The modern business man is a queer combination of a man who spends his time working for money and is prevented from enjoying it by his conscientious scruples."

DWELLS ON IMPORTANCE OF CITY PLANNING

New York, April 22—The welfare of human life depends more on what can be done with city planning than on any other factor of civilization, possibly excepting education, John Nolen, city planner of Cambridge, Mass., said today addressing the International City and Regional Planning conference.

Mr. Nolen's position was strongly supported by Clarence S. Stein, chairman of the New York State commission of Housing and Regional planning, who insisted that the era of concentration in great cities must and will end.

"Cities such as New York have already passed the limits of efficiency," Mr. Stein asserted. "They are becoming increasingly less desirable places for industry and particularly for living. Ultimately the difficulties of working or even of sane or healthful existence will reach the breaking point. The big-city growth will end.

"The position of the large city is becoming more and more untenable. Formerly we thought men came to the large city from choice; but that in general they cannot leave now if they would. Already in isolated cases conditions have changed so that the worker must leave the city whether he wishes or not. We are, I believe, entering a period of decentralization that calls for new and broader planning."

TRAINMAN, SUDDENLY INSANE COMMITTED TO NORWICH

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, April 22—Joseph Friel of Prospect street, a trainman in the employ of the Midland Division of the New Haven Railroad, developed insanity from an attack of general paresis, early Wednesday morning. The man ran from his home into the street. Friends notified the police and he was taken to the police station. Friel's condition was not known until he escaped through a window but was later apprehended and confined in a cell. Friel was examined by Doctors M. D. Riordan and C. E. Simonds and committed by the probate court to the Norwich State hospital where he has been taken. Friel has a wife and two minor children. His friends state that he figured in a slight accident when he was thrown by a locomotive in the Boston railroad yards some weeks ago, and that he had appeared nervous and upset since that time.

MUST DAYLIGHT DRIVERS HAVE NIGHT LANTERNS?

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, April 22—The brains of the local police court have been set to work to arrive at the disposal of a case by Saturday which, in the main, questions the right of a man to drive an automobile in good daylight without having the machine properly equipped with lenses according to a state law. A verdict of guilty in this case would have a far-reaching effect. It might even extend to making it compulsory for farm drivers and bicyclist to carry lanterns in the day time. If all vehicles must be properly equipped with lights, day or night, it will confuse the [illegible] while one or two cars an hour at most only a few hours during the daytime will have to fall directly in line with the night drivers and make sure that their useless lights are law-abiding. The case arises from the arrest of Raymond Desrosiers, of lower Main street, this city, Tuesday by Constable Alfred Abbe of Windham. Desrosiers had a Ford car which he received in a trade for a shot-gun. He had tuned the machine up and was giving it a tryout over the Brick Top road when apprehended. The machine was parked at one side of the road at the time and was devoid of headlights. Desrosiers said that the car, tires, top, engine and all was worth about ten dollars. He had the required markers but his registration card had not arrived from Hartford. Constable Abbe deemed it a technical violation and brought the man to court. The case was taken up Wednesday but continued to Saturday morning.

SUPERIOR COURT SESSION PROVES A VERY BRIEF ONE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 23.—The business of the Windham county superior court, which consisted of the disposition of four cases, was concluded within a few minutes at a session held at noon in this city Wednesday when announcement was made that all the cases had been settled. Assistant State's Attorney Howard Bradford of Putnam made the announcements.

The case of Abraham and Molly Krug, charged with failure to heat leased premises occupied by Joseph Peck in the Krug block in this city was nolled on the payment of costs by the defendants. The case represented two separate counts.

Wilfred Breault of this city, charged with indecent assault on a minor girl was discharged on the payment of the costs of the case, which was nolled.

The case of Eddy John of this city, charged with violation of the liquor law was nolled without costs, on the grounds that there was insufficient evidence for a conviction. Early in February last, local police officers walked into John's pool room and found him and three men in the lavatory. A pint bottle of liquor rested on the sink and was seized as evidence. John was convicted in the lower court and he appealed the judgment. Attorney W. A. King represented the defendants in the above cases.

The case of Fred L'Heureux of Putnam, charged with violation of the motor vehicle laws, which was to have been heard Wednesday was continued until the September term of court at Putnam.

Judge Leonard J. Nickerson then ordered court adjourned until next Tuesday forenoon, April 28. At that time the case of Milo E. Elwell, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., charged with transportation of liquor, will be taken up. Elwell was bound over to superior court from the police court. He was released from Brooklyn jail this week, under a bond of $2,500.

Million-Dollar Club Forming

A Million-Dollar Idea is now being put in operation in Norwich by L. M. Crandall, the local insurance counsellor of the New England Life Insurance Co., of Bostn. The purpose of the cub is to bring a million-dollars' worth of prosperity to the community through insurance on thelives of its citizens that will make independent the retiring, the aged, the widows and the orphans by providing a monthly income to take care of emergencies. All the money necessary just when it is needed most is the club's objective. It also includes a plan to increase the endowments funds of philanthropic and religious institutions such as the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., churches, etc. This is to be done through the medium of the new policies just issued by the company, represented by Mr. Crandall.

Secretary Crandall is very enthusiastic over the new club and believes that a large amount of publicity will come to Norwich through the activities of the Million-Dollar club, and that other communities will follow the leadership of Norwich in arousing the interest of its citizens in securing suitable protection for the disabled, the aged, the widows, the orphans, and for philanthropic purposes. He says the plan will prove very helpful in filling community chests and other similar worth while projects. SICK WOMEN ATTENTION!

Read this Remarkable Testimony Regarding Results from Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Norfolk, Virginia. — "If you only knew how many women and girls have taken your medicine by hearing my testimony, it would seem wonderful to you. Every day and every chance I have I advise some one to try it. It was in June, 1904, when I had given up ever getting well, that I wrote to you. My husband went to the druggists and brought the Vegetable Compound home to me. In a few days I began to improve and I have often taken it since. I am now passing through the Change of Life and still stick by it and am enjoying wonderful health. When I first started with your medicines I was a mere shadow. My health seemed to be gone. The best doctor I had said he would give me no more local treatments unless I went to the hospital and was operated on. That was when I gave the doctors up. Now I am a healthy robust woman. I wish I could tell the world what a wonderful medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is." — Mrs. J. A. Jones, 817 Colley Avenue, Norfolk, Virginia.

Broad Theater

Plays may come and plays may go, but 'tis said in the theater that Charley's Aunt will go on forever. No play has had a more interesting or extensive "career" than this famous old farce by Brandon Thomas. After 33 years in every corner of the globe, it is still going strong and now that it has been translated into the universal language of the screen it is said "the old lady" has taken a new lease of life and will be delighting our great grandchildren as it delighted our grandparents.

Charley's Aunt made "her debut" at Bury St. Edmunds in Suffolk in 1892 with W. S. Penley starring. The play was then brought to London, being given first at the Royalty Theater and then at the Globe where it ran continuously for four years (1466 performances.) The fame of Charley's Aunt spread far and wide and seven touring companies started out through the province. Several companies are still touring with it in England, and each year it is put on in London where it is one of the "draws" of the holiday season.

Al Christie, one of the producers of the screen version, saw a performance of it in the London suburbs last spring and the house rocked with laughter. The particular touring company which played it was then back from Dublin Ireland, where the play had just broken all house records.

Charley's Aunt is coming to the Broad theatre beginning Sunday for limited engagement of four days only.

Royal Theater

The first production of that artistic director, Hugo Ballin, since Vanity Fair, is coming to the Breed theater Friday and Saturday.

The picture is The Prairie Wife, a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, adapted to the screen from Arthur Stringer's popular novel of that name, which was first published in the Saturday Evening Post.

It is a story, essentially dramatic, but with many humorous moments, of the struggles of an eastern girl and her husband in developing a farm on the prairies. The picture is filled with such incidents as the prairie fire and the capture of the murderer, with the underlying theme of the development of the prairie and the transformation of the girl

Dorothy Dev[illegible] and Herbert Rawlinson play [illegible] leading roles, with Gibson Gow[illegible] Leslie Stuart.

The eighth chapter of The Iron Man, the Pathe news and an Educational comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Today the theater is rented the Mercier Assembly who present The Path of Love.

Exceptional Program at the Broadway

Today is the day for the big show. It opens at the Broadway, of course, and we predict that it is going to be the talk of the town for weeks to come. Sensational advertising is not entered into by the Broadway management, but the shows are what counts and as a result the crowds.

Quite a bit has been mentioned about the two outstanding attractions "Boyd's Revue of 1925" and the Milton Abern production "Betty Lou". All we will say today is that these two offerings alone are worth the small admission charged.

Just a mite about the other five Keith acts.

The Selores will open the show with a high class dancing and operatic singing offering.

Goldie and Thorne follow. They are called "Those Two Different Girls," rendering songs and showing a genuine sense of humor.

Bob Walters is called "The Great Lover." He is a comedian that ranks with the best, only recently having been featured with the "Follies."

Dulmage and Kitty on their unicycle offer plenty of fun and exceptional thrills.

Beatrice Conn and Bert Albert in 'On Their Way to School" have an offering by Albert Livsey consisting of comedy, singing, yodelling and dancing all capped with a surprise and capital fun.

Elaine Hammerstein and Lou Telegen will be at the Broadway Theatre today. They are the featured players in "After Business Hours," a Columbia Picture. They are admirably supported among others by John Patrick, Phyllis Haver, Otto Hoffman and Lee Moran. The very excellent story in this picture is directed by Mal St. Clair. The question of a wife's sharing in the financial prosperity of a husband forms the theme of the story. The story was originally published in Hearst's International Magazine under the title of "Everything Money Can Buy," and was written by Ethel Watts Mumford. This talented woman writer has appeared in many places among them the Saturday Evening Post.

Watch for the Broadway's third anniversary program starting Monday.

Automobile accidents, drownings and falls, are the only causes of accidental deaths exceeding in number the ones due to fire.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Some time since, mention was made in this column that the police had issued a warning, largely directed to parents of the young people concerned and incidentally to business men and property owners, against allowing boys to prowl about in the rear of business [illegible].

The practice of the boys did not cease, though it was checked for a time, and now the sequel to the affair is at hand. In the town court before Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis Wednesday afternoon a group of boys was presented to answer to charges filed against them. The escapades that brought them to court involved picking the lock of a storehouse belonging to N. A. Jordan in the rear of the town hall building, entering and taking property, theft of fruit, sleeping out at night, etc. The ages of the boys ranged from 10 to 13 years. Included in their number were youngsters who admitted the theft of revolvers, blank cartridges, safety razors and other property.

The boys were haled to court after a investigation by the local police. Two of them who had not returned to their homes when officers were seeking them were found sleeping in an old automobile in the rear of one of the buildings in th business section, this long after midnight. The group in court Wednesday were of a troop of boys who have been giving the police more or less trouble for some time past, by one sort of escapade or another, but nothing so serious as that resulting in the court appearances. They have been causes of worry to their parents also.

A grilling of considerable duration by the police was necessary before confession was made by some of the boys of the things of which they were suspected, the truth eventually being admitted.

At a conference Wednesday afternoon in the office of Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill, the five involved boys and their parents in attendance, it was decided that the boys be given another chance. The parents are to keep close supervision over them, see that they are not allowed on the streets at night and that their general behavior is proper. If this plan to correct the boys' ways fails, they will be sent away to the state school for boys.

I will sell at a very reasonable price my white wall cases. Mose, the druggist, the Rexall store.—Adv.

Herewith is given the running time of passenger trains out of Danielson on the schedule that becomes effective Sunday next. The trains will run an hour earlier than at present, on standard time, but to conform with the daylight saving schedules that will be effective in New York and other large cities served by the railroad, on week days the northbound trains out of Danielson are scheduled to leave here at 4:48 a. m. (local train), 8:39 a. m. and 5:49 p. m., this being the last northbound train of the day. Southbound on week days the schedule for Danielson is 9:43 a. m., 12:58 p. m. and 6:43 p. m.

It is not likely that the Connecticut company will make any changes on its local lines, due to the adoption of daylight saving schedules in territory adjacent to that served by the cars of the division. It is stated that a canvass of 15 manufacturing concerns in towns all the way from North Grosvenordale to Moosup developed that only one manufacturer was in favor of the change, while all others opposed it to some more or less vehemently. So the trains now are that the electric cars will continue to operate from North Grosvenordale to Central Village and from Danielson to East Killingly and from Central Village to Moosup on the same schedules as are now in force.

Daylight saving has no foothold in eastern Windham county this year and has not for several years. Such inconveniences as its adoption elsewhere seem on the people residents here attempts are accepted as lesser than the inconveniences attendant upon having fast time generally adopted.

These inconveniences to local people that are the most annoying are of a nature not known of by the general public but involve such cases as obliging local firms who do a great deal of business by telephone to be at their places of business on a daylight schedule to keep in touch with the people they trade with by telephone and not being able to reach them in the final hour of the day's business here, as they have ceased to labor for the day.

Secretary Richard D. Banigan of the Danielson Rod and Gun club announces release by that organization of a number of male pheasants, which have been placed in areas known to be favorites with that class of wild game. The club has also caused the distribution of 40 pounds of wild rice. This will eventually provide a variety of food for wild game birds that has been largely lacking in this territory.

There are business interests here that are in favor of a booster campaign for Danielson—something that will proclaim to eastern Connecticut that Danielson is one of the most favorable places in which to buy goods. In these days of sharp competition with nearby city markets towns like Danielson have a new problem in maintaining their prestige and place. The booster campaign would be an aid in that direction.

With the coming of May, officials of the town court of Killingly will begin to benefit by the salary increases provided for them in the bill adopted by the present legislature, late in the winter. Incidentally, Judge W. Fenner Woodward will begin a new term of office extending over two years. It is anticipated that there will be no changes in the personnel of the court as it now exists.

This corner of the state appears to have gained a great reputation as to having good trout brooks. A local man reports having encountered Wednesday two men who had driven into Brooklyn from New Britain seeking big strings of trout. They were generous with their money, too, in regarding the youth who took them where they should get trout, if any are to be had.

Wednesday afternoon, at the Congregational church in Abington, funeral services for Mrs. Sarah G. Marcy 85, were conducted by Rev. Y. O. Walin. Burial was in Abington cemetery. The bearers were John Patterson, Elmer Phillips, Fred Kean and Allan Marcy. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements. Mrs. Marcy was the mother of Mrs. Myrtis Chase of this place.

In view of the large number of prosecutions in this town recently because owners of dogs failed to have the animals registered, it is of interest just now that a general re-registration of all the dogs owned in Killingly must be made within the next week. All current licenses expire with April and must be renewed on or before May 1; otherwise the owners will be liable under the law.

Joseph LaBonte recently has been a visitor at Bloomfield, this state, where his son, Joseph is in the novitiate of the Missionary Order of LaSalette.

Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis presided at a session of the town court Wednesday morning at which the case of a man charged with having been intoxicated was heard.

Spring came back for at least a visit Wednesday after having been in hiding since Sunday.

Miss Irene L. LaBonte has returned to her studies at St. Joseph's convent in North Grosvenordale, after spending a vacation at her home here.

George J. Heneault is confined to his home on Riverview by illness, which is not of a serious nature, however.

Judge W. Fenner Woodward and C. A. Hamilton were visitors in Hartford Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kennedy have been recent visitors with relatives in Hartford.

James R. Walsh is now engaged with the collection of town taxes. He was at Dayville Wednesday for the convenience of property owners there and thereabouts.

E. H. Williamson of Hartford was a visitor with friends in Danielson Wednesday.

Killingly will not likely become greatly excited over the possibilities under the baseball and football bill, so-called, just signed by Governor Trumbull. Baseball has not been a paying venture for its promoters here for several years past on Sundays, though charges for seeing games were regularly made. The attendance was not sufficient to pay the players.

H. P. Kasner, Interference Engineer of the Radio Corporation of America has located the disturbances that have been the cause of bad reception in Putnam. Mr. Kasner has been for the past two days locating these interferences, with the use of a special Radio Corporation Super-Heterodyne with loop built specially for this purpose. He was very much pleased with the co-operation given him by Howard James and Ray Sherman of the Putnam Light & Power Co. also by the industrial plants which have expressed a willingness to assist in eliminating the radio disturbances. As soon as the disturbances located by Mr. Kasner are remedied, radio reception in Putnam and vicinity will be a pleasure, whereas before it has at times been irritating.

"Edward Clayton Fisher, 166 School street, Putnam, was alleged to have tried out the speed capacity of an automobile for which he is agent, on the Oxford road, Monday. He paid $100 for the privilege in district court in Southbridge.

"According to the statement of Corp. Oliver Leblanc, he was proceeding toward Oxford in his modest flivver when a car passed him at a rate of speed that caused the state officer to step on the gas and start out in pursuit. It was a hopeless chase, however, and the corporal went to a telephone, called up the barracks in Oxford, and had the speeding car stopped.

"In court Mr. Fisher pleaded guilty to speeding and was fined $100 which he paid."

AMERICAN FOREST WEEK

Periodically we are told that there must be a protection of the American forests, that there must be a conservation of our supply of timber and a real effort made for the purpose of replacing the consumption that takes place each year. If we stop and look into the merits of such claims we find that we are using our timber supply faster than we are developing it. In other words we are plunging into what seems an ample acreage without giving any thought to the future. We are even tolerating a great amount of waste and we are doing nowhere near what we should be doing in the way of replacing the annual cuttings. The answer to all this is that before we realize it we shall be facing an acute shortage. Overcoming this possibility is not so difficult if the proper steps are taken in time, but the danger lies in procrastination and waiting until the end is actually in sight before taking the necessary measures to prevent it.

It is with the idea of having a nation-wide effort made for the purpose of arousing the country to the real significance of the situation and directing attention to the unnecessary wastage in our forest fires, wasteful manufacturing operations and the failure to keep our forest lands at work growing tree crops that American forest week has been proclaimed by the president to open Friday of this week.

Great things can be accomplished through the active cooperation of all who are directly concerned in this effort. There are many instances which show that some are already at work along these very lines. The need is for a greater realization of the importance of participating in such endeavors. Wastage can be checked without great delays but it takes years to grow trees and it is only by taking time by the forelock that the supply that will be required a couple of decades from now will be available. The special week for stimulating interest and action must therefore be regarded as an excellent means to a desirable end.

PRINTING CRIME NEWS

Not a little criticism is heard from time to time in regard to the manner in which newspapers handle crime news. There are those who hold that the featuring of crime news serves to develop a criminal instinct, while there are others who insist that the publicity is one of the means of checking it.

There are papers which invite criticism much more than others. In such instances the explanation is that the public demand is being served. There are papers which can be pointed to support such a contention, but there are others which indicate that the featuring of crime is by no means necessary to insure a paying circulation.

For the most part papers take the position that they are in business to print the news, that crime is news and that it should be treated without undue emphasis as such.

In his connection some interesting experiments have been undertaken by several newspapers concerning the treatment of crime news. Some have banned such news beyond the mere mention of what has happened. Others have tried placing it on inside pages and not featuring it, while some have made the test of excluding it all together. The reaction of the reading public has been such in the case of one paper that stopped printing crime news that it abandoned its test after a short time.

This would indicate that the readers want the news. If it is crime they want to know the essential facts about it, but there is no doubt that here is an excessive feeling that no good purpose is served by the manner in which certain criminal cases are elaborated and featured. It is believed to be such overdoing of it and the efforts which lead to the making of heroes of criminals which develops the criticisms. It is unfortunate that there is so much crime but it has its place in the news of the day and as such it must be expected that the newspapers will print it. It can easily be overdone, but no good result would be gained by trying to cover it up by omitting it.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY

Whether business is all that might be desired it seems to be disclosed by the surveys that have been made that there is no ground for pessimism. There are some sections which are not as busy as others, and there are some lines of industrial activity which are not keeping up the pace set by others but in general the outlook is by no means discouraging.

This country looks for much business from foreign markets, and according to Secretary Hoover it is getting it. Looking at the export and import figures for March it is seen that the exports, totaling $452,000,000 were the largest since last November, while the exports for the fiscal year up to the first of April show an increase over the same period a year ago of nearly $448,000,000. There have been heavy contributions to this result by the exportation of foodstuffs and cotton, but careful examination of the reports show that the factories throughout the country have been turning out large quantities of goods for home as well as foreign demands.

The foreign field presents a decidedly different situation today from what it did during the war, and it is to be realized that our increasing foreign sales are being made in the face of steadily developing industrial activity on the part of nations which were forced to abandon foreign trade during the war. That this is due to a considerable degree to the increased activity of the department of commerce cannot be overlooked. Our foreign trade had been grossly neglected in certain directions but when Secretary Hoover showed that no less than 70 distinct major agencies are cooperating with the department for the development, maintenance and extension of foreign trade it shows not only that results are being obtained but that such methods are effective in bringing about the desired ends.

Reaching the foreign market with American goods is not always the easiest undertaking in view of the competition encountered, but it is being done and with the further adjustment of conditions at home there will be further improvement in the situation.

WASHINGTON IS FIRM

Some time ago it was declared that there would be no change in the attitude of this government concerning the recognition of soviet Russia. However much Moscow may have figured that the change in the head of the department of state would mean a change in sentiment relative to recognizing the soviet government, it apparently failed to give due weight to the declarations to the contrary. It failed to accept the statements from Washington to the effect that the Hughes plan would be maintained.

Because there has been a disposition on the part of the soviet leaders to misinterpret such a plain statement, and because they have evidently been laboring under the impression that there has been a softening of sentiment here, so much so as to cause them to circulate false statements concerning the attitude of the United States, Washington has again seen the need of giving emphatic denial to anything of the kind and has resulted in the forwarding to the American diplomats throughout the world of a note which declares there is no prospect of a change in the American position.

Soviet Russia knows what the terms of recognition as set forth by Secretary Hughes are. It needs no restatement of them. They are clear and understandable and inasmuch as it has invited it by its activity the soviet government, and the rest of the world, has been informed that not until the soviet government complies therewith can it anticipate any recognition on the part of this government. That is plain enough and there would appear to be no basis for drawing any wrong conclusions concerning it.

NICARAGUA'S VOLCANO

Those with a good memory may recall that when there was before the country the question of building a canal that would connect the Atlantic and the Pacific there were two routes under consideration. There was the Panama route and there was the Nicaraguan route. The former was selected and now that waterway is handling a tremendous volume of traffic every year. So great has become the use of this canal that some talk has been indulged in relative to the building of the Nicaraguan canal in order that it may be completed before the Panama canal actually becomes congested.

One of the things urged against the Nacaraguan route at the time the decision was being made was that it was through volcanic country, that the Volcano Ometepe was close to the proposed route and it would be inadvisable to indulge in large outlays that might be quickly wasted through the eruptions which could neither be prevented nor escaped.

Inasmuch as this volcano has been active again of late new grounds for objection to the Nacaraguan route has been furnished. Whether or not the eruption has done any damage to the territory where the canal would have been dug is not known. It can, however, be easily ascertained and it no doubt will be either as an argument against further consideration of a canal there, or as a statement of fact to show that the canal would not have been disturbed had it been in existence. Ometepe has brought itself into public notice in a way that calls for an investigation as to its incorrigibility.

HOPELESS CARE.

"My goodness!" cried the desperate wife who had, with no effect whatever, announced four times that dinner was ready. "I just can't stand this another day, Dinsmore Lecorish!

"I thought your radio fever would run its course like chicken pox or measles, but you get worse and worse! As a husband you have been a total loss ever since the trial was hung from that roe.

"Not a one of your five senses remains but the sense of hearing, and that is limited to what comes out of the loud speaker.

"One would think, you being a man, the smell of food would lure you, but when I do anchor you to the family board for a few minutes you don't know whether you are eating humming birds or cornmeal mush, and care less. Whenever I have a piece of news such as that Mrs. Limpstep has at last eloped with her soul mate or that the Banfers have lost all their money, to say nothing of Cousin Louisa's coming to visit us, you yell at me in anguished tones to keep quiet for Pete's sake! Can't I hear quite plainly that the Tickletoe sisters are singing The Kitchen Blues just as natural?

"When I try to be sympathetic and companionable of an evening and begin 'Well, dear, how did things go today at the office?' you regard me as though I had handed you poison as a side dish with your coffee. Your soul is wracked because when you expect to get WMAQ that infernal XYZ comes romping in over the air with its nasal solos and bum band.

"'Isn't it too bad,' I may say, 'that our little Johnnie has a bad attack oof leprosy?' You turn glazed eyes upon me and feverishly hiss hush, there's something fluttering around 606 and you bet it's Honolulu! Graham got Honolulu and has been just insufferable ever since and, by golly, maybe he won't talk so much when you tell him tomorrow that Honolulu floated in just as simply and clearly as through it was in the next room—oh, for the crying out loud—if it isn't that pernicious XYZ just ten miles away that has been making all the disturbances and balting your expectations!

"After that the family withdraws in a hushed silence and talks in subdued tones up in the attic or down cellar or some other secluded spot which is somewhat sheltered from the tempest which rages.

"A husband may be disappointed in his wife or his life work or his children, but nothing equals the pang of being disappointed in his radio! The anguish is too deep seated to be obliterated quickly from his memory. Whenever you meet a man on the street these days wearing a heavily negraved expression of total bitterness you may be sure it is because instead of getting Havana the evening before all that trickled in was the male quartet put on by the pickle factory in Milkcan Corners downstate.

"If I tried to make you sit through a vaudeville program consisting of the 40-year-old Dubby sisters, Adenoid Ike, the falsetto tenor the Punne brothers, snappy repartee and shuffle dance, and thechild wonder, Little Adeline, singing 'Mamma Won't Buy Me Arsenic Gumdrops you'd be in the wife murder's cell before dawn. Yet when the same thing comes over the radio you listen to it a-thrill, entranced, 'ost to the wor'd.

"Our little Johnny's first tooth never gave you the ecstatic jo't that hearing the Rotary club down in Alabama clap its hands at a speech seems to afford you.

"Now, then what I want to know is whether you have the remotest int rest in a steak smothered in onions and a deep apple pie or not. And, furthermore, if you are going to act like this form now on we will take our dinners out—"

"Wait, wait!" breathed the radio addict who had been fooling surreptitiously with the d ials. "I've got something here and it sounds like long distance and maybe it's Mexico! I wouldn't wonder a bit!"—Chicago News.

Are You Discouraged?

Walker, the Prairie Dog Peddler

Born in a box-car shunted on a siding of a new railroad out in the plains, William B. Walker had to try many jobs to make his way.

Son of a civil engineer working with the force building the Union Pacific Railroad, the boy spent his early days at the small frontier town of Cheyenne, Wyo. He attended the little school, but his father died and four years later at 12 the boy had to go to work.

Having observed that tourists were interested in prairie dogs, he borrowed two horses, a wagon and a half-dozen barrels and flooded out the little animals, which he sold to easterners. Next he gathered buffalo bones from the plains and soon was selling them in carload lots to a New Jersey factory at a good profit.

After acting as cowboy for three years, he went to Kearney, Neb., and joined his mother, who had started a chain of millinery and dry goods stores in Wyoming and Nebraska. The business grew and soon was totaling more than a half-million dollars a year. Then came the panic of 1893, which wiped it out.

Now 26, William became manager of the Kearney Manufacturing Company. Four years later he was placed in charge of a bicycle factory in Denver, and two years after that went to Chicago, where he was a building broker.

Going to New York at 38 to finance the patents of the Gillette Manufacturing Company, he determined to manufacture some necessity. He had already started a search for something people needed that he could make. Finally in Berlin, Rheinhold Berger, the glass manufacturer, casually mentioned that he had perfected a hunting flask that would retain the temperature of its contents for several days. Walker's twelve-year search was ended. He bought the patent rights for America, named the bottle "Thermos" and at 40 organized the American Thermos Bottle Company with capital of $1,000,000 and a factory in Brooklyn.

Successful from the start, Walker later built a model factory at Norwich, Conn., started the Thermos Company, Limited, of Canada, helped perfect a method for manufacturing the bottles automatically, and became rich.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

THE MOSUL BOUNDARY

The pending decision of the League of Nations Council in regard to the disputed Iraq-Turkish boundary north of Mosul will affect more than British oil concessions. It may mean the life or death of a people, the Assyrian or Nestorian Christians, who, until the World war, had held on to their mountain fastnesses and their faith for more than 19 centuries," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"In the days of Marco Polo and for some centuries previous, the Assyrian or Nestorian Christians represented a mighty church spread throughout Asia;" continues the bulletin. "The Mother church was very strong in Mesopotamia and Persia, and thriving missions and communities of converts existed in Tartary, Siberia, Mongolia, China and India. Twenty-five or more bishoprics are listed in the church records of that age. Over this strong Christian church ruled 'The Patriarch of the East' with his see in Mesopotamia, a somewhat privileged organization under the early Mohammedan rulers.

"But the rising tide of militant Mohammedanism, and especially the invasions of Genghis Khan and Tamerlane, put an end to this prosperity and growth. The Assyrians withdrew into the mountains along the River Zab, an affluent of the Tigris north of Mosul. Their people had occupied this region since before the Christian era; now they concentrated there. Even the Patriarch moved to this inhospitable mountain region, making his seat a castle on a steep mountain slope near Julamerk, about 200 miles north of Hosul.

"In 1850 more than 100,000 Assyrian Christians lived in the rough highlands of the northern part of the vilayet of Mosul and in the southern part of the vilayet of Van, extending also across the Persian border to Lake Urumiah. The Kurds, who since long before Xenophon's day lived all about this Assyrian province, looked upon the Assyrians as enemies and often clashed with them on the borders; but they rated the fighting prowess of the mountain Christians highly and for centuries did not dare invade their strongholds. During the latter part of the nineteenth century and the early part of the twentieth, however, Kurds and Turks began treating the Assyrians like the Armenians. Whole villages, especially in the foothills near Mosul, were pillaged and many of their inhabitants massacred.

"During the World war the Assyrian Christians threw in their lot with the Allies when the armies of the latter reached their country. When the Turks overran the region again the unhappy Assyrians met the fate of their Armenian fellow Christians to the north. Thousands were massacred and the rest fled. A handful escaped northward to the Caucasus, while the main body of survivors, probably less than 10,000, reached the plains of Iraq where refugee camps were established for them by the British.

"In making their claims for a new boundary north of Mosul, the British included a considerable area of the foothills formerly occupied by the Assyrians and reestablished the survivors there. Some of this region lay north of the old boundary of Mosul vilayet. The Turkish government protested that in disposing of this land the British had encroached in Turkish territory. Last September a Turkish force crossed the frontier and burned a number of newly rebuilt villages, killing some Assyrians driving the others south again. A temporary boundary was agreed to along the old Mosul line. Commissioners of the League of Nations are now gathering evidence in the Mosul region, and before long a permanent boundary will be decreed. Whether the tiny remnant of the Christian mountaineers will be given some part of their old mountain home, or whether they will have to adapt themselves to life in the unhealthy plains, will be one of the important by-product decisions. In the meantime the old Assyrian strongholds in the mountains along the Zab are being consolidated as a part of Kurdistan. It is adjoining this region on the west that the recent Kurdish insurrection took place."

Stories That Recall Others

A Fox Hound Tale

The fisherman has little on the fox hunter when it comes to spinning yarns. John is a lover of hound dogs, and he will not let anyone top him when it comes to supporting them.

"John," said a friend to him the other day, "they tell me that when that real fox hunter came into your district this winter with a real fox hunting hound, you tied your old hounds to an oak tree and hid behind it."

"That's a fact," said Wright, "and be dogged, if they didn't pull down the oak tree, run over that fellow's hound and catch the fox."

Unthoughtful Rabbit

Easter morning found Betty and Jacqueline searching for Easter eggs. At the end of the hunt Betty was very much put out when she found that Jacqueline had one more egg than she had. Running into the house Betty climbed up on mother's lap and sobbed: "Nasty old bun! Left Jack one more egg than he did me."

In a few minutes Betty was called into the kitchen by the cook. "Betty, you run out back of the cherry tree and see what you find," said the cook. Betty did as requested and came back breathlessly with a nice lavendar egg.

"Why, it's still hot. He must have just laid it," cried Betty, who had taken back all unkind feelings toward "Mister Bun."

Cost of Revolution.

Final accounts submitted to the Hungarian National Assembly show that Count Michael Karolyi's revolution and governorship and the subsequent bolshevist regime cost Hungary no less than 8,525,000,000 crowns in the currency of 1913, or over $500,000,000.

Jimmy Skunk, Assistant Gardener

He is lucky, and blest, indeed,
Who to explain has never need.
—Jimmy Skunk.

Jimmy Skunk knows, for of all the little people who live in the Green Meadow or in the Old Pasture or in the Green Forest none is so generally misunderstood by man. Sometimes Jimmy thinks that these two-legged creatures are just plain stupid. So when he does meet with one who really understands him Jimmy is delighted. Both Jimmy and Mrs. Skunk had found out by this time that they were understood by all the Brown family and as they went and came they were for all the world as if they belonged there quite as much as Black Pussy or Bowser the Hound. They just didn't pay any attention to Farmer Brown or Mrs. Brown or to Farmer Brown's Boy.

All at once he began to dig with those little black claws of his

These spring days were busy days on the farm, for the early planted things were beginning to grow in the garden, and then there were the late things to plant. Farmer Brown's Boy was a busy boy in the garden. One morning when he went over to look at the strawberry bed he found a number of dead plants, and it didn't take him long to find out that the roots had been destroyed. He dug down and discovered a white grub, such a grub as had been at work in the lawn. He recalled then having read that the white grub, which in time would be a June Bug or May Beetle (it is called both names) is one of the worst pests in a strawberry bed.

Farmer Brown's Boy looked the strawberry bed over anxiously. The trouble is that there is no knowing where these pests are until the mischief has been done, and then no way of getting them but by digging them out. Oh, dear, I am afraid this bed will be ruined this year and I had hoped to have a lot of berries to sell. I guess there is no use counting on that," said he.

Just then he heard a funny little sound behind him and turned to look. There ambling along the garden path was Jimmy Skunk. The freckled face of Farmer Brown's Boy broke into a grin. He hastily dug out another white grub and tossed it out in front of Jimmy. Jimmy promptly ate it and then just as if he understood what was wanted of him, which of course he didn't, he turned aside into the strawberry bed. He at least knew that that white fat, delicious grub had come from that strawberry bed, and he was wise in the ways of white grubs. He knew that where one was more were likely to be.

So with hardly a glance at Farmer Brown's Boy, Jimmy Skunk began to nose amongst the strawberry plants. All at once he began to dig with those little black paws of his and in a moment he had another fat white grub. Of course he was pleased with it, but you should have seen the delight of Farmer Brown's Boy. Farmer Brown himself came over just then.

"Meet my assistant gardener," said Farmer Brown's Boy, pointing to Jimmy Skunk, who already was digging up another grub. "I thought we were going to lose that bed, but I guess we will have plenty of berries after all. If Jimmy will bring Mrs. Jimmy down here we certainly will, for between them they will soon get all the grubs there."

It all came about just as Farmer Brown's Boy had hoped it would. In a few days and nights that strawberry bed had been cleared of white grubs and the assistant gardener turned his attention to other things. Farmer Brown's Boy discovered that, where in the morning he found the footprints of Jimmy Skunk, no more cut worms were destroying young and tender plants. Still later he discovered Jimmy looking over the tomato plants and taking the big green caterpillars that did so much damage. Again he found him in the potato patch feasting on the hated potato beetle. So it was that Jimmy Skunk became assistant gardener to Farmer Brown's Boy.

MOST VALUABLE WORD IN OUR LANGUAGE

"Home" has been chosen by students of English at Mount Holyoke college as the most valuable word in our language. Asked to select the ten most useful English words, sixteen of the twenty students in the course in the history of the English language agreed on "home" as the single word which covered the greatest and most significant area of human life. "God" and "love" were suggested by many as alternatives to "home."

Passing over the more obvious and trivial meanings which might be attached to the word "useful" in this connection, most of the class interpreted it as meaning most completely expressive of human life. Among the other words which appeared on the lists of more than half the class were "eat, drink, food, fire, go, do." "Man" appears on nine of the twenty lists; "woman" on only three. "Mother" is more important than "father," but "sons" are more useful than "daughters," an estimate in which the very modern young women of Mount Holyoke are in accord with Chinese and Hindus. "Heat" is regarded as more important than "cold," no doubt because of its association with cooking and the domestic arts; and the general idea of social comfort. "I" appears more frequently than "you," corresponding to most people's instinctive rating of the ego, and "work" is twice as important as "play". To "know" and to "wonder" recieve many votes; to "fight" only a few.

These choices would seem to indicate that for all the great superficial differences which divide the self-conscious and highly individualized young women of today from women of earlier and simpler eras, who thought and felt more entirely within the great stream of racial consciousness, the instinctive choices of these girls correspond to very old and primitive feelings about the relative values of things, drawing from the oldest strata of the English language. Practically all the words that were frequently cited were of Anglo-Saxon origin with roots in Sanskrit.

Undersea City.

Submerged 30 feet below the surface of the Mediterranean Sea, off the coast of Tunis, the ruins of an ancient city have been found by divers. They report that many large stone buildings were visible, outlined in dim shadows and sandy bottom, and that fish swarm in and out of crumbled doorways. Scientists are preparing to make further explorations. Additional interest is attached to the discovery, as the city lies in waters described by Virgil and near the "Isle of the Lotus Eaters," of which Homer sang.

Ethier of 351 Central avenue, and Miss Louise McManus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McManus, of Hartford, were married Tuesday morning at St. Anne's church, Hartford, by Rev. Joseph V. E. Belanger. Miss Leonora Germaine of Middletown and Roderick Jodoin of Willimantic were the attendants. Charles Belanger and Francis Belanger, cousins of the bride, were ushers. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a dress of white crepe trimmed with Irish lace, and a veil of tulle banded with Honiton lace and caught with gardenias. She carried a shower bouquets of lilies of the valley and gardenias. The maid of honor wore a coral colored canton crepe dress with hat to match and carried a sheaf of spring flowers. Mrs. Henry Chouinard played the wedding march and Miss Louise M. Barbier sang "Ave Maria" and "I Love You Truly." A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, where the yellow color scheme of roses and sweet peas used at the church, was repeated. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Ethier will live in Norwich.

Macyke-Hall

Miss Florence Hall, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Hall of Brooklyn street and Vincent Macyke of Coventry were united in marriage at St. Bernard's church, Rockville, Monday morning. Rev. George T. Sinnot, pastor of the church, officiated, also sang the nuptial high mass. Miss Elizabeth Redding of Hartford was bridesmaid and Frederick J. Sheehan was best man. The wedding march was played by Miss Margaret McGuane and Mrs. William Pfunder sang during the ceremony. Following a breakfast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Macyke left for a wedding trip to Canada. They expect to return about May 1 and will live in Coventry.

Y. M. C. A. CIRCUS HAS GOOD SECOND NIGHT

Another large crowd witnessed the closing performance of the Y. M. C. A. circus at the association gymnasium Wednesday evening. As on the previous night the side show was a source of amusement for the several hundred people present. The big show started at 7.45 o'clock and the various events were run off in professional style. The clowns were on hand again and provided comedy in plenty for the audience. The circus was very successful and the proceeds will net a good sized sum for the association.

Tulips at Elks' Home.

Two fine beds of tulips in bloom at the Elks' home are greatly admired by those passing on Main street. The beautiful display in white and yellow was arranged by Otto F. Ernst.

Tulips at Court House.

The bed of tulips at the court house, planted by Superintendent Joseph J. Fields, is now in full bloom, making a beautiful showing in white, yellow and red.

ROTARIANS STAR IN MINSTRELS FOR LADIES' NIGHT ENTERTAINMENT

As has been the case for the past five years, the Ladies' Night of the Norwich Rotary club Wednesday evening at the Wauregan hotel proved to be the smartest social event of the season. This event, always anticipated with pleasure, far exceeded expectations, as a remedy for gloom and blues, there being something of interest occurring every minute of the evening.

"Full steam ahead" was sounded promptly at 7 o'clock when the doors of the brilliantly decorated dining hall of the hotel were thrown open and the 189 Rotarians and their guests sought their places at the tables. The dining hall was handsome in decorations of palms, southern smilax and clarodendron making a beautiful setting for the brilliance of the beautiful gowns of the guests. At the west end of the hall was the Rotary banner and at the east end was a large Rotary wheel in purple and gold. The table decorations were hyacinths, daffodils and ferns. On the head table was another large Rotary wheel. The decorations were by Ernst. Favors for the ladies were linen handkerchiefs.

After the singing of America, Rotary's opening hymn, Shepard B. Palmer in the absence of the club's "sky pilot," Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, asked divine grace. Immediate Past President Hugh B. Campbell presided as toastmaster and Joseph C. Worth was elected to be song leader. Joe put plenty of pep and ginger into the singing of the Rotary songs and he hardly missed one of the 87 songs in the new song books which made their first appearance at this meeting. Joe was not the least bit bashful in calling on individual members of the club to display their vocal talent.

The following menu was served

Grapefruit Maraschino
Celery Radishes Olives
Cream of Southern Tomato
Boiled Kennebec Salmon
Sauce Hollandaise
Braised Tenderloin of Beef
Mushroom Sauce
Sherbet
Potatoes en Croquettes
Carrots and Peas
French Bread
Rotary Club Ice Cream
Assorted Cakes
Demi Tasse Cigars

During the dinner D'Atri's Wauregan Hotel orchestra, E. J. Caron, leader, rendered a very attractive dinner programme, playing the following numbers:

Co-ed March, Zemecnik; Heart Throbs, Arnold; Why Couldn't It Be Poor Little Me, Kahm Jones; Sing Loo, Ruby-Norman; Because You Said Good Bye, Levy; (a) Lady of the Nile, (b) End of a Winding Lane, Jones-Kahn; Golden Morning, Al Morton; (a) All Aboard For Heaven, Rose; (b) Don't Bring Lu Lu, Henderson-Brown; Remembrance, Jessie L. Deeper; (a) I'll Take Her Back If She Wants To, Monaco; (b) On the Oregon Trail, Sedgwick; Butterfly Dance, Walter Miles; (a) If I Cry You'll Never Know, Clark-Kuhn; Legend of a Rose, Jules Reynard; (a) We Said Good Bye, Meroff; (b) Indian Dawn, Zemecnik; Gavottee Piquante, Pierson; (a) Ti Tind, Denideff; (b) You and I, Archer.

Song-leader Joe picked as his first victims Henry H. Vignot of the New London club and Bert Gager of the Norwich club, sans mustache. These two songsters rendered a delightful duet. The reason of Bert Gager's disguise was that later in the evening he was to appear in blackface costume and he was afraid the grease paint would spoil it.

Ladies Quartette

Three members of the club who arrived late, Rev. Alex Abbott, Jim Case and Bill Park were compelled to sing by the insistent song-leader. Another delightful feature of the evening was the quartette selection, Three O'clock in the Morning, by Mrs. Louis A. Wheeler, Mrs. W. Russell Baird, Mrs. Vandalia Burgy and Mrs. Arthur E. Story.

By popular demand Henry J. LaFontaine and his brother Walter F. LaFontaine sang a delightful duet number and Walter responded with How I Envy McGinty.

For Boy Scout Work.

In recognition of their untiring and successful work in the recent Boy Scout campaign, Ed. Harris and Bert Gager were summoned to the head table by Jim Case who with a very appropriate address presented medals to these two Rotarians. Mr. Case in presenting the medals paid deserving tribute to both Mr. Harris and Mr. Gager saying that they went into the drive wit hheir whole heart and soul and with an earnestness that assured success. Both, although overcome at the suddenness of their reward, responded with words of gratitude.

Gift to Retiring President.

Herbert B. Cary, chairman of the program committee, on behalf of the club in recognition of the excellent work of the retiring president, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, presented him a beautiful silver cake plate. Herbert M. Lerou presented Mrs. Campbell a beautiful basket of flowers. Dr. Campbell responded for both he and Mrs. Campbell, thanking the members of the club for their token of appreciation.

Recognized Wedding Anniversary.

As it was the 40th anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Pullen, Rev. Alexander H. Abbott in a graceful manner extended the congratulations and best wishes of the club and with them a gift in recognition of the day.

Dr. Campbell called on C. Edward Carpenter, president of the Norwich Lions club, Mr. Carpenter responded bringing the best wishes of the Lions club to Rotary and spoke of the desire of his organization to co-operate with the Rotarians in all efforts for the good of the community.

Rotarian Henry A. Tirrell, chairman of the Boys' Sunday In Church committee for Boys' Week, spoke interestingly on the subject of getting the boy to church and getting him interested in an institution that is the foundation of civilization. He urged that the parents take their boys to church next Sunday and if not one's own boy then take some boy.

Prizes Presented.

The presentation of the prizes for the evening, an event that is always an attractive feature of Ladies' Night, was made by Herbert C. Adams. Bert asked for an "honest" man to assist him and Chat Saxton responded but not without some good natured protest from the Rotarians. Bert Gager remarked that Diogenes could now throw away his lantern. Mr. Adams in making the presentation, did so with many witticisms directed at his fellow clubmates.

While the minstrel men were preparing for the entertainment that followed the dinner Jim Case was assigned to the duty of song-leader. Jim took up the obligation where Joe had left off and any songs that Joe had missed Jim had them sung.

Minstrel Memories

One of the most pleasing features of the evening's programme was Minstrel Memories, a real snappy and peppy minstrel, featuring the old time minstrel favorites of a score of years ago, given by nineteen members of the club. There was talent galore, both in the vocal renditions of the long-forgotten ballads of yesteryear and in the up-to-the-minute witticisms which the perpetrators let fly with reckless abandon, letting them hit where they might. These sallies were received in the same spirit of fun in which they were given and it was a lucky Rotarian who missed having some folly paraded before the public by the jovial band of jokesters.

Bill Park took the part of the interlocutor and made up in true minstrel interlocutory style, he kept things moving wiht professional ability. After the opening chorus the first musical number was High Brown Babies Ball by Russ Clapp. Russ started things off with a rush and if he lacked any vocal talent he amply made up for it with his clog dancing.

Going from the ridiculous to the sublime, Budge Smith sang My Wild Irish Rose with tender sympathy and a very appealing voice. Bert Gager then took the audience on a trip on The Old Fall River Line which proved to be a very hectic journey through a heavy fog on a dark and stormy night. Bert sang with remarkable enunciation that kept the audience referring to the program to see if Bert was still on the boat on which he started.

Eben Learned's selection, Go Down Moses (Burleigh) an old negro spiritual, was one of the most pleasing numbers of the program. Mr. Learned using his splendid tenor voice with charming effect.

For real southern melody and impersonation of the typical darky President Joe Weymouth's number, The Darktown Strutters Ball, gave this versatile artist exceptional opportunity to display his talent. Although Joe is president of The Native Sons of Maine one would have thought he had been born and raised in Dixieland.

Although prohibition is still in force Bill Park sang the Stein Song from Old Heidelberg, the members of the chorus being provided with steins filled with imaginary lager.

The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers was a humorous sketch by George Ely, as commander, and Privates Hugh Campbell, George Ingalls, Rue Bliven and his brother Al. Without thought of making a comparison it was a coincidence that the men selected for this sketch were former members of the Home Guards, hence their familiarity with the weapons of war. It was an uproariously funny bit of tomfoolery and left no doubt in the minds of everyone as to the meaning of the word wooden.

In contrast to the nonsense of the Wooden Soldiers was Rev. Alexander H. Abbot's solo, Gypsy Love Song, which Mr. Abbott sang with exceptional quality of tone and understanding.

Ed Harris sang Somebody's Done Me Wrong. Ed all through the evening just couldn't keep still and in this number he let loose impersonating the negro preacher whose gal had been stolen by a member of his board of deacons. We don't know what church Ed attends but from his work in this number it is apparent he had attended some of the negro revivals in the south.

Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline? was the song sung by Grove Ely, in which Grove did himself proud. Grove's pleasing voice was admirably adapted to the selection making it one of the beauty spots of the program.

Henry J. LaFontaine, without whom no Rotary entertainment would be a success, sang The Message of The Violet. Henry sang with remarkable charm and sympathy and with a richness of tone that held his audience to the last note. He was forced to respond to several encores. Mrs. Charles A. Saxton accompanied Mr. LaFontaine at the piano.

Alexander's Ragtime Band, that old favorite of a decade ago, was admirably put over by Joe Worth. Joe not only sang the song but was the whole band and parade in himself.

The minstrel closed with the singing of the Rotary prize song Rotary Forever, written by the club pianist Henry La Fontaine. Mr. La Fontaine was at the piano and it was largely through his efforts that the musical numbers of the evening were such a complete success.

HOME COMING RECEPTION FOR GRACE CHURCH RECTOR

In recognition of the home coming of the beloved rector of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, Rev. Robert B. Day, who returned recently from several weeks' vacation spent abroad, an informal reception was given in his honor, by the Woman's Auxiliary of Grace church, Tuesday evening in the parish house. Besides the guest of honor, other guests included the husbands and men friends of the auxiliary.

At six o'clock a delicious supper was served to thirty people. The menu consisted of chicken pie, mashed potato, peas, cabbage salad, rolls, jelly, cake and coffee. Mrs. Charles Burbeck, president of the auxiliary was ably assisted in the arrangements by other members. The supper committee comprised, Mrs. May Lynes, chairman; Mrs. Herman Gibbs and Mrs. Herbert Dow. The tables were attractively decorated with lighted candles and flowers, the flowers later being sent to members who are ill.

Preceding the supper, while those present were standing around the tables, the lay reader of the church, E. Allen Bidwell read a most interesting poem written especially for Rev. Mr Day, "Welcoming Him Home," composed by one of the members of the auxiliary. This original composition won much favorable comment, as the lines referred to a number of personal incidents.

At the conclusion of the supper hour, the remainder of the evening was devoted to sociability and several tables of whist were in play.

First prizes were won by Mrs. Margaret Hardsen and Miss Matilda Avery of Colchester, while the consolation awards went to Dr. Lillian M. Lynes and E. Allen Bidwell.

HOLDING TWO CAPTURED RUM LADEN CRAFT

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 22—The United States Coast Guard Destroyer Beale early this morning captured two more rum-laden craft, when the schooner Three Links, owned by Samuel Levy of Fairhaven, Mass., and the launch Irene, hailing port unknown, were found off Montauk Point with contraband liquor. The Three Links had 400 cases of whiskey aboard, while the Irene's cargo consisted of approximately 300 cases of rye and Scotch whiskey. Both craft were towed into port and this afternoon their crews were arraigned before United States Commissioner Earl Matthewson. ACADEMY PLAYING GREAT GAME HAD EASY TIME WITH PRATT H.GH

The Academy ball tossers slugged their way to a victory over the Pratt High School of Essex, Conn., to a score of 13-4. Pratt High proved to be merely a setup for the red and white team to solve and the game looked like a practice affair. Pratt High has not had any athletic relations with the academy before this game and although putting its best into the game it did not furnish any opposition for the local aggregation to solve.

Greene started the game in the box for the Academy and seemed to pitch better ball than he has been accustomed to pitch in his past games. He remained in the box for five innings allowing five hits. Woods, who took his place in the sixth held the visitors from scoring, allowing them but two hits.

The Academy team has greatly improved its batting power. They socked the pill, left and right, for seventeen hits netting them eighteen runs. Jarvis was the shining light with the stick, making five hits out of his six times at bat. Jarvis has shown that he can hit as well as pitch. Les Carroll seemed to be the main attraction for Pitcher Carlson of Pratt, being hit three times and given his base on balls twice.

Coach Brigham, seeing the game safely put away, gave most of the squad a chance to show their stuff. The whole squad played better than it had been playing and is very much improved.

Pratt High gave the Academy boys a scare in the second, in which inning they scored their four runs. This proved to be a flash in the pan and they could do no more after that. Their fielding was poor, their infield making nine errors and their pitchers wild and ineffective. How ever they furnished a good practice game for the Academy in preparation for Bulkeley.

The Academy boys will be out for hard practice for the next two days and on Saturday will travel to New London to engage in a contest with the fast Bulkeley nine. The Academy lads are out to make a good showing and will make Bulkeley go its hardest at all times and will try to accomplish what many people think cannot be done, "beat Bulkeley."

GIANTS OPEN HOME SEASON WITH VICTORY

New York, Apr. 23—New York Giants opened their home season today with a 9 to 6 victory over Boston before 40,000 fans. The game was preceded by the raising of the National league pennant won by New York last year, and the golden jubilee flag, emblematic of the senior circuit's fiftieth anniversary.

Until the ninth the game was close and well played, but in that inning the Boston infield collapsed behind the splendid pitching of John Cooney. With the score tied Walker singled, Burrus threw wild on Frisch's sacrifice bunt and then fumbled another sacrifice by Young, filling the bases. Bancroft's fumble of Kelly's grounder permitted Walker to score the winning run.

Supreme Court Justice Wagner threw out the first ball. Gerardo Machado, presidgnt-elect of Cuba, was another guest of honor. Score:

GAVE CENTENNIAL HISTORY OF JEWETT CITY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The history of the Jewett City Congregational church for a century was given in a paper by Mrs. E. H. Hiscox which was read at the centennial anniversary of the church which was observed Wednesday in connection with the conferences of Six Churches which was held in the church.

History of 100 Years

Mrs. Hiscox gave the history of the church as follows:

In 1720, what is now the First church in Griswold (Pachaug) was organized. Griswold was incorporated as a town in 1815; having originally been a part of the town of Preston. The Jewett City Second Congregational church is the daughter of Pachaug church, and was organized March 14, 1825. Preceding this, the most interesting and not well known facts known to this generation, are those concerning the church where our denomination first worshiped. Here is a photograph of the church as it was in 1860. It was given by David Hale Fanning of Worcester, whose home—not where he was born. However—stood near the site of the church, gave to Mrs. George A. Haskell of this place. The ground is now the site of Fanning Park made possible largely by the generosity of Mr. Fanning. Originally Jewett City was owned by Messrs. Smith and Avery, and Mr. Smith sold a large portion of land to Moch Baker. Mr. Baker sold this particular spot to the Episcopalians for fifty dollars. They built this church of rough-hewen blocks or stone, similar to the Dolan house across the way. This denomination existed from 1814 to 1818. The first notice in the records of it's brief history run thus—"Preston, October 2, 1813. Whereas it is purposed to engage and employ the Rev. Ammi Rogers to perform divine service and to preach in Jewett City, in this town twenty-six Sundays, and to begin about the first of December next. Now, therefore, we, the subscribers, promise to pay to the said Ammi Rogers, or bearer the sum or sums which we have annexed to our names, each Sunday that the said Ammi Rogers shall perform [illegible] twenty-six Sundays as aforesaid, we subscribe so much [illegible] as we here affix to our names, "thirty-five men subscribed from fifty to twelve and a half cents. Going on to February 8, 1814, we read the following record: We, the members, sincerely desirous of promoting the public worship of Almighty God, and the temporal and spiritual good of mankind, do hereby unite and enroll ourselves as belonging to the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, in that part of the town of Preston called Jewett City, in the county of New London and state of Connecticut, and we hereby [illegible] choose to belong to [illegible] connection of Christians, availed ourselves of all the rights and privileges secured by an act of the legislature of the state of Connecticut, [illegible] securing equal rights and [illegible] to every denomination in this state, enacted in October, A. D., [illegible]." Signed by twenty-three names. The next record of special interest [illegible] a meeting of the rector, [illegible] wardens and vestry men of St. George's church in Jewett City, lawfully convened and at their place of [illegible] the third day of September, [illegible] voted that the rector, church wardens and vestry men of the Episcopal church in Norwich, and wardens and vestry men of the Episcopal church in New London, and families be respectfully invited [illegible] the laying of the corner-stone of St. George's church in Jewett City, in the town of Preston, on the [illegible] of September, inst., and that the clerk of this parish be directed to enclose to them a copy of this note. Henry M. Herskell S. clerk. "There is no record of the laying of the corner-stone, but many have testified to their recollection that it was laid as proposed, and a large concourse of spectators for the erection of an Episcopal church in such an old Puritan town as Preston was a novel occurrence. (That part of Preston in which Jewett City is situated was made a town by the name of Griswold, after Governor Roger Griswold in 1815.)

Passing on we come to the following record: March 29, 1819. Voted that Messrs. Enoch Bailey, Nathan Rose, and Peleg Fry, a committee to confer with other parishes in the care of Rev. Ammi Rogers and to state his case, etc., and to apply to the next convention for him in our behalf. "The character of the Rev. Rogers having become the subject of much idle scandal and the bishop's ever having approved of his mission, it soon ceased. There is a story told about the Rev. Ammi which the older residents of the town used to delight in repeating, and [illegible] the Rev. Ammi was [illegible] Fred Dan[illegible] cart, a yoke of oxen and a cart. He [illegible] imbibing too freely [illegible] cart. When he came [illegible] he saw the cart, but the oxen were gone, and thus he soliloquized. Am I Ammi, or am I not Ammi? If I am not Ammi, then who in the devil am I? If I am Ammi, I have lost my oxen. If I am not Ammi, I have found a cart." It is said that at the laying of the Episcopal church corner-stone he announced that "the Great I Am" was looking down upon Am I. The next and last notice is a sudden and rather violent transition reading thus: "At a meeting of St. George's [illegible] called, in Jewett City [illegible] assembled and convened in [illegible] said city, on the [illegible] March, 1824, voted, that [illegible] A. Read, be moderator of said meeting, and Daniel Wight, clerk; John Ashman, S. C. Morgan, and Daniel Wight, committee to take charge of said church, and do necessary repairs. Daniel Wight, key-keeper and treasurer. Adjourned without day. Attest, D. Wight, clerk."

You will observe an interval from 1819, to 1824. During this time the church accommodated various denominations particularly the Baptists—Elder Amos Read, often occupying the pulpit.

On the eighteenth of February, 1825, a meeting was held to take measures for organizing a Congregational society in Jewett City, to be known and called "the 2nd. Congregational society of Griswold." An adjourned meeting was held March 14th, the society was fully organized, and the proper officers appointed. It consisted at its organization of forty-five members. The town records under the date April 22, 1828 have a document which shows the manner by which the house is held. It was purchased by several individuals and deeded to the society, remodelled and dedicated September 3, 1828.

The church was organized April 14, 1825, and consisted at its organization of twenty-three members. As the names are read, it will be seen that descendants of some of the families still live in Griswold and Lisbon. They were Stephen Johnson, Lydia Johnson, Daniel Wight, Roxanna Wight, Thomas H. Wilson, Lucy E. Wilson, Alfred A. Young, Lucy P. Young, Thomas Jackson, Esther Jackson, Mary Wilson, Lydia Johnson, Maria P. Morgan, [illegible] Wilbur, Heppy Fanning, Elizabeth Barstow, Eunice Cutter, Olive [illegible] Sarah P. Phillips, Mary W. [illegible]nning, Anson S. Cobb, John Francis and Esther Francis. Of the original number twenty were by letter from the 1st Church in Griswold, two from the church in Newent (Lisbon) and one from the Center church Hartford.

At the request of the serious people of the Second Ecclesiastical society in Griswold, Revs. Messrs. Samuel Nott, Levi Nelson, and Horatio Waldo organized the church on that date with these members.

After occupying this church for thirty-eight years, the society sold it to the Roman Catholics, who built an addition, and covered the stone walls with wood. It was finelly torn down when the park was surveyed they having built a new church.

The Congregationalists bought land of Dea. John R. Tracy, and erected a church on the site of the present structure which was dedicated December 11, 1867. While the new house was in process of construction, the services were held in Liberty hall, now the Arpik block on Main street. On the morning of February 4, 1876, the church took fire from an adjacent building, and was burned to the ground. As far as is known, there is no photograph of this church. But George H. Prior became interested to try and reproduce on paper from the descriptions of different persons, the church, Stead's store, over which the Masonic order then convened, and the Tracy home, all of which were burned at the time of this memorable fire. It is said to be a faithful reproduction, and although not yet completed, he consented that it might be shown here today. The cornerstone of this present church was laid with appropriate ceremonies September 3, 1877, and the church dedicated April 3, 1878, just forty-seven years ago this month. In 1883, a parsonage was built adjacent to the church. Twenty-two years ago, this church was somewhat damaged by fire, and extensive repairs were made, including the steel ceiling, chandeliers and candelabra, frescoing and rebuilding of the pulpit and choir platforms. A new furnace was bought, and a pipe organ installed. Later the vestry was altered and a parlor arranged, the kitchen enlarged, a lavatory added, another library and music room being installed.

In January, 1916, the church was incorporated, and absorbed the society, formerly connected with the church.

The first pastor of the church was Seth Bliss, and he was ordained June 15, 1825.

54 were added to the church during his seven years pastorate, his first and only pastoral charge. For soon after, he was elected to the office of corresponding secretary of the American Tract Society, Boston. He donated to the church what was called the Seth Bliss pastoral library, which consists of about 350 bound volumes, together with more than 200 copies of unbound reviews, pamphlets, magazines, and sermons. Following him were *George Perkins, *William Wright, *Thomas L. Shipman, *Henry T. Cleaver, *Jeremy W. Fitch, *Seneca N. Kellogg, Charles A. Northrop, George E. Hatch, *Homer T. Bench, Oscar G. McIntire, Horace E. Morrow, *Leonard W. Bacon, D. D. George N. Edwards, J. Edward Newton, *William H. Gane, L. L. D., Albert Donnell, Clinton Andrews, H. S. Stephenson and the present pastor G. K. Gray. Father Shipman as he was always called, held the longest pastorate, eleven years, although he was ordained nineteen years before then, during which time he served in home mission fields. He resigned in 1854 and lived in Jewett City until he passed at the age of eighty-eight in the year 1886.

He was a logical and convincing preacher, possessed of the dryest wit, and always eloquent in presenting the truth. Pastor and congregation had a strong mutual affection, and it was only the state of his health that caused him to resign. Rev. Mr. Tuck held the next longest pastorate, ten years. Perhaps Rev. Mr. Cheever will be remembered by many, and who recall that his daughter is the wife of Dr. Tucker, president of Dartmouth College. That noted minister, Dr. Leonard W. Bacon supplied this pulpit nearly a year, though not living here.

Rev. C. A. Northrup was afterwards for a long space of time Norwich's city missionary. Our deacon's list is: *Stephen Johnson, *Joel Hyde, *Henry L. Johnson, *Nehemiah T. Adams, *John A. Tracy, *Hezekiah L. Reade, *William Soule, Frank Bishop, *William Campbell, *Hezekiah L. Reade, *Earl M. Swift, *John C. Hawkins, John Watt, Frank E. Robinson, *George A. Haskell, Alex McNicol, L. G. Buckingham, W. E. Marshall.

The deaconesses:

*Miss Mary E. Soule, Mrs. Anna D. Chapman, *Mrs. Harriet B. Stever, Mrs. E. A. Faust, Mrs. J. C. Hawkins, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox.

The present officers of the church are the trustees, F. E. Robinson, E. A. Faust, and Andrew McNicol, Clerk Alex McNicol, treasurer, F. E. Robinson, pew warden, Fred Whalley. The three members on the standing committee are Mrs. F. E. Robinson, Mrs. E. A. Faust and Mrs. L. G. Buckingham, auditor, L. G. Buckingham, assistant treasurer, Andrew McNicol. No church history is complete without special mention of the loyal support both with time and money of the Ladies' Society.

Their work has been wonderful, the zeal with which they attack any mountain of work, debt, dirt, alterations is marvelous, and they always accomplish their goal and the men stand right back of it all, and obediently hand out their cash or wash the dishes just as they are bid. All for the church we love. The choir has always been one of the features of this church. Years ago when the Bromley boys, (twins), Conner Burleson, Prior, Tracy, Knight, Haskell, Lyon, Barrows, Hutchinson and Soule, singers and players gave the finest music. Then for some time when a quartette sang, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Leonard, who came to Jewett City to live came into the choir, and Mrs. Leonard was the soprano in the quartette. Mr. Leonard served the church as its organist for nearly thirty years. The choir leaders were the Bromleys, Charles Edward Prior, D. D. Tracy, E. F. Burleson, Theodore Robinson and the present leader, Mrs E. H. Hiscox. There is now a chorus of about seventeen, who receive many compliments for their musical ability and loyalty to their church.

The Sunday school is led by Ernest L. Prench and the Christian Endeavor Society, organized 37 years ago led by Miss Sadie Thompson. The Missionary Society under its president, Mrs. F. E. Robinson always meets and goes over its apportionment. Mrs. E. A. Faust is the president of the Ladies' Society, Earl Robinson is president of the Junior Endeavor. To enumerate the good work of many would fill a book, but I would like to mention Deacon H. L. Reade, who left a fund to our church for Bibles to be given to the baptized children of the church when they are seven years of age. It is always a part of our Children's Day service. Deacon Reade wrote several books, one of which was The Story of a Heathen, who was a famous Japanese surgeon. Mary E. Reade, a foster daughter was a missionary in Japan seven years [illegible] was killed by fire from Mt. Pelee in the harbor of St. Pierre Island of Martinique, May 8, 1902. Thomas Tracy, another name on our church roll went as a missionary to India. Members of our parish served in the civil and world wars, the latter being placed on our honor roll. Our church always helps entertain the soldiers on Memorial Day. It has been one of the six church conference since it was instituted at Griswold in 1862. Our present membership is 141—47 male and 94 female members. Two are living who joined our church 62 years ago. Mrs. Haskell and Mrs. Mary Brown of Atlanta, Ga., 33 are non resident. During the first thirty years of its existence, the church received aid from the Missionary Society of Connecticut, the amount of about $2,700. In 1875 they had already returned 1700 to the Missionary Society. A strange coincidence I will use in closing. Much of the material in this paper was taken from historical sermons delivered by Father Shipman, and in one given April 25, 1875, evidently on the fiftieth anniversary, he says: When this church shall celebrate its centennial in 1925, our country will no doubt embrace a population of more than one hundred millions. What the character of that population shall be, we tremble to ask. Shall it be educated, virtuous and happy, prosperous in the life that now is and meet for that which is to come, or shall it be ignorant, degraded and besotted, groping its way in the darkness of sin, down to the shades of death? That question depends, under God, upon home evangelization. If the churches grow weary in well doing and home evangelization fails to keep pace with the progress of population it requires no prophet's vision to read the doom of the land which we love to know by that charmed name Our Country. He that watereth shall be watered himself. I think he would have liked to have this read again at the church's centennial in April 1925.

ALL SET FOR DAYLIGHT SAVING IN NEW LONDON SUNDAY NEXT

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 23—The city of New London will adopt the daylight saving time again this year and as a result Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney this afternoon issued instructions to all members of the department to report for duty next Sunday an hour earlier than has been the case heretofore.

Announcement is made of the breaking of the engagement of Assistant Postmaster Edward T. Corcoran to Miss Mae O'Neill, the latter of New York, formerly employed in New London as a milliner.

Marian Lewis, a chocolate colored woman, is today without $35 which she would have had if she had been more discreet in the selection of the company she was to entertain at her home in Potter street last night. The woman was perched with her head and shoulders out of a window when Fred H. George, a laboring man of about 50 passed through the street. Marian was lonesome, though she had been manipulating a Victrola, so she called to Fred and invited him to her home, inquiring whether he was not willing to have a good time. The man decided he might indulge if things were to his liking. He accepted the invitation, but then the lines of the fable about the spider and the fly came to him and he hesitated when he reached the door of Marian's domicile. He was led to thoughtful frame of mind by an inquiry from Marian which was as to whether he had three dollars in his duds. Fred said he didn't have so much wealth, but that he knew where he could get it and he wandered out into the narrow street to get the needed money. Then he returned, he had reached the head of the stairs when Policeman Babcock followed him and to Marian the officer of the law thus spoke: "Now I have you Marian." Fair Marian replied: "I don't think you have. You have got another 'think.' You have the wrong pig by the ear this time, Babby, you overlook this and I will not trouble you more." Policeman Babcock and Riordan had been watching the Lewis house because of things they had heard, so they marched Maid Marian around the corner to the police station. This morning in court she was accused of being a lewd and lascivious person and was fined $25. She explained that she was once a bit giddy, but no longer was she frivolous. She told the court that the police officers were trying to "frame" her, but Judge Prince would not accept that statement as truth. Marian paid the court $25 and went away grinning in the fact that she didn't get a severer penalty.

Charles Pearl was charged with the theft of a gold watch and chain and jewel from Samuel Katz, with whom he roomed on John Street. The accused had the opportunity to take the watch, for he was allowed to go to the room alone and to get some clothing that was under the lounge where the watch and chain were secreted, under a pillow. Beyond that there was no proof that he took the time-piece, for he had two hours before purchased a watch and had the proof of it. There was no evidence forthcoming to convict the man of the theft, so the complaint was nolled. The suspicion against Pearl was strong, but it was not of the sort that would bring conviction.

Deputy Fire Chief Thomas Shipman, who is in New York at the expense of the city attending what is known as a "Fireman's College," is having real fire duty to perform at the beginning of his experience. He was put into actual service at a fire in West 33rd street Monday and came out of it with the praise of Chief Henlon. The suggestion was made today that the city of New London should take out death and accident insurance for Mr. Shipman while he is doing the dangerous duty in which he is engaged.

Former saloon keepers in New London, those who abandoned their licenses to sell liquor as soon as the Volstead law was enacted, and who were promised by the county commissioners recompense for the licenses they gave up to conform to the prohibition law, were disappointed today when they learned that the legislature had rejected propositions to compensate them for the loss of a privilege they had bought. The state is supposed to compensate them for a portion of the money they lost by giving up their licenses and the towns in which they were doing business were represented as liable for the balance of the money so due them. It is understood that Norwich has made good its promise in this respect, but that New London has failed to keep faith with the former saloonists and make good by saying. There is no doubt among lawyers that the claim of the former saloonists is not a valid one, and the probability is that suits will be instituted to recover.

Mrs. Mary A. McLoughlin, 68, widow of John McLoughlin, died this forenoon at her residence, 2 Union street after an illness of about a week with pneumonia. Mrs. McLoughlin is survived by four sons, John, Edward, Frederick and Charles McLoughlin, and by two daughters, Miss Elizabeth McLoughlin and Mrs. Dana Medling, all of this city.

The funeral of Mrs. Emma J. Brown, former resident of Montville, and widow of Willis L. Browning, whose death occurred at Mt. Dora, Fla., the 16th inst., was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of her niece, Mrs. J. J. Barrett, 342 Williams street. The services were conducted by Rev. Joseph A. Elder, pastor of Huntington Street Baptist church. Burial was in Comstock cemetery, in Montville.

Maxwell G. Rockhill, director of division of parole and domestic relations, Trenton, N. J., has again communicated with the New London police in relation to William Kruege, who is wanted by the authorities of Trenton for violation of parole. Kruege was formerly a sailor, having been stationed at the submarine base. He was discharged Aug. 25, 1924, and under the name of William Vincent Kruege. Nothing of Kruege is known by the New London police, it being believed that he left the city shortly after his discharge from the navy.

Louis and Lena Rohman have sold a house and lot on Shaw street to Max Snitkin. The price paid was $11,100.

Herman Katz has sold a house and lot at 143 Crystal avenue to Maria and Francesca Pane.

Mednel Zimmer today sold property on the east side of Main Street, consisting of a store and dwelling, to Israel Goldstein. The price paid was $14,000.

Joseph Williams, 596 Bank street, complained to the police late last night that while his automobile was parked in Washington street, a thief visited the machine and stole a spare tire. Williams' car is only one of many to receive attention from thieves of late or beside several cars taken from Washington street and later abandoned, a number of car owners have suffered the loss of equipment of the machines through thefts.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Christensen, recently married, have concluded their wedding trip and are now residing on Home street.

Mrs. Ann Cullen, widow of Martin Cullen, died this afternoon at her home, 70 West Colt street. She had been in ill health for some time and was of advanced years. Mrs. Cullen is survived by a son, Harry Cullen and a daughter, Miss Nellie Cullen, teacher in the public schools.

Mrs. Hannah Johnson, wife of Gustaf Johnson, of North Waterford, died today, after an illness of several months. Mrs. Johnson is survived by her husband, and by two sisters. She was born in Sweden.

Michael Healy of Crystal avenue, and Miss Helen Murphy of Raymond street, were married this morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley. Jeremiah Healey, brother of the groom, was best man, and Miss Nora Connors, of New York, cousin of the bride was bridesmaid. The groom was formerly employed by the Edward Bloom Silk company and the bride was employed until recently by the Robert Gair company at Montville.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schwartz, Williams street, are spending a few days in New York.

Mrs. Leroy N. Darrow, 181 Lincoln avenue, who recently suffered a nervous shock, has been admitted to Lawrence Memorial hospital for treatment.

MISSING WORLD WAR SOLDIER WITH BUFFALO RELATIVES

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 22—Eddie Smith, 27, of 87 Truman street, son of Mrs. Helen Smith, who mysteriously disappeared from his home several days ago and who, it was feared by his mother, had committed suicide, is safe and sound, for tonight, Mrs. Smith was informed by relatives in Buffalo that her son had arrived there.

Smith is a world war veteran and has been a sufferer from gas shock and with his disappearance his mother was of the opinion that her son would end his life, due partly to a morose condition because of his ill health.

MILLINER'S HOUSEKEEPER LEFT WITH FIVE SUIT CASES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 22—Mrs. Alice Douglass, a milliner doing business in New London and residing in Waterford, at Station 11, is mourning the disappearance of a quantity of clothing and fancy work material which she declares were taken from her home by a woman whom she employed as housekeeper. The woman disappeared and then it was found that the clothing, etc., had also gone. The woman is claimed to have a sister residing in Norwich and the sister is to be sought for, that she may throw some light on the whereabouts of the woman who left without any ceremony. Neighbors furnished the information that the women, when she disappeared, took away with her five dress suit cases. The housekeeper was anxious when she accepted the employment offered to her that she should be located conveniently near a church, which fact is regarded as a bit suspicious that she was not what she represented herself to be. It is also recalled no wthat she talked of going to a wedding and of making a visit in Boston.

FOR TEN YEARS

"World's Greatest Buy"

Everyone Says It—Sales Prove It

It is only as you find the real comparisons for Hudson qualities among the costliest cars that the enormous difference in price is so astonishing.

Today it offers the greatest price advantage and finest quality in Hudson history. Never was this supremacy of value so outstanding. And the greatest Hudson sales on record show how complete is public knowledge of the facts.

Is There any Reason to Pay More?

Hudson's position as the "World's Greatest Buy" is not merely a new attainment. It is acknowledgment of ten years' refinement of a great car around the famous patented Super-Six principle. No motor design, however costly, has been found to displace this long-time leadership of the exclusive Super-Six.

It is responsible for the way Hudsons endure the hardest service, free of mechanical annoyance, and retain their new car vigor and flexibility when they have become old in point of years and service.

Its simplicity has always meant a lower selling price than is permitted in complicated types. And today, economies possible only to the largest production of 6-cylinder closed cars give it value advantages never held by any rival.

All now know that higher price can buy no smoother performance than Hudson's. It cannot buy more brilliant results in acceleration, power or speed. It cannot buy greater reliability or endurance

No car at or near the price rivals the Hudson Coach in actual proof of value—which is SALES.

ALL INTEREST CENTERED IN HOUSE ACTION ON WHEELER BILL WEDNESDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

Hartford, April 22—All interest centered in the Wheeler prohibition enforcement bill as the legislature met today and the session proved to be a stormy one, before the judiciary committees adverse report was upheld by an overwhelming vote of 148 for and 60 against.

The vote of rejection came after a long debate, in which Speaker Elbert L. Darbie of Killingly led the fight for speedy acceptance of the unfavorable report of the judiciary committee.

THE HOUSE

Speaker Darbie opened the session of the house today although he was expected to yield the chair to Mr. Clark, of Haddam, and take the floor to support the judiciary committee's adverse report on the Wheeler prohibition enforcement bill when it came from the senate. Prayer was offered by Senate Chaplain E. P. Ayer. The house was charged with an air of expectancy this morning as all the women members were waiting for a report to come in today on the bill providing jury service for women.

The judiciary committee reported favorably the nominations of George R. Torrey as judge, and Arthur G. Donais as deputy judge of the town court of Plainfield to be established. Tabled for calendar.

Favorable report was made by the committee on banks on house bill No. 98, concerning reserve of banks in the state who are members of federal reserve banks. Tabled for calendar and printing.

The judiciary committee reported favorably bill No. 253 providing for humane transportation of poultry and bill No. 823 providing penalty for obtaining liquor by false statement.

Concurrence was voted with the senate in rejection of a number of bills reported adversely by the committee on finance.

THE SENATE

The senate was called to order at 11.35. Prayer by chaplain Ayer.

The committee on claims reported favorably on the claim of Richard B. Coons to be reimbursed to the amount of $12.75 on account of an automobile registration fee, the license having been used only a few weeks. The bill authorizing the payment of the claims was allowed.

The committee on the judiciary reported unfavorably on a bill to provide a pension of $6,750 a year for the widow of the late Judge Lucien F. Burpee of this city. In explaining on Tuesday the unfavorable reports of the committee on the judiciary on similar bills for the other judges Senator Shaw referred to the bill relating to Mrs. Burpee. The formal report was presented today.

Senator Meech regretted the report of the committee. He referred to the special military services which Judge Burpee rendered during the World War. But the decision of the committee must have been based on conscientious grounds. He would not oppose the acceptance of the committee's report.

Senator Wilder regretted very much that nothing could be done for the widows of the judges.

Senator Shaw said the only instance of the pensioning of the widow of a judge was that of the widow of Judge Case. The only cases for a pension was service and the widows of judges did not render a service to the state.

The report of the committee was accepted and the bill for a pension for Mrs. Burpee was regretted.

Unfavorable reports were received from the committee on banks on the bill concerning limitations on the organization of private banks; concerning the definition of private bankers and on the incorporation of private banking business. The bills were rejected.

The committee on the judiciary reported unfavorably on senate bill No. 422 requiring insurance indemnity bonds for all public service motor vehicles. The bill was rejected.

A favorable report was received from the committee on incorporations on the bill incorporating the Mortgage Bond and Title Company. Tabled for calendar.

The favorable report of the committee on incorporations for the incorporations of the Fairfield County Mortgage and Title company of Norwalk was tabled for calendar.

Calendar

Fish and Game Law

Senator Pelton explained in detail the changes in the fish and game law in the bill reported by the committee. The bill provides for the acquiring, by the fish and game commission, streams for public fishing and empowers the commission to make rules for the regulation of fishing in them; for the appointment of a chief game warden; the policing of streams, fixing the hunting license and the fishing license at $2.25 each, and a combination license at $3.75. The bill was favored by Senator Walcott, the chairman of the commission on fish and game. In reply to Senator Meech, Senator Pelton said that women, except to fish in public domain, would not require a license to fish. The bill was passed unanimously.

Assistant Clerk Henry Nowicki is in the New Britain hospital where he was operated on Tuesday evening for appendicitis.

There is no question but what they will help you and of that you are the judge—if they don't help—your money will be returned by the druggist from whom you bought them—for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets are rigidly guaranteed. A short cut to good cooking

Good cooking used to be an art which required years of training to master. Today, a Victory Crawford, a little common sense, and a good cook-book will make you a good cook in a few weeks' time.

The Victory is a combination coal and gas range. That means a cool kitchen in summer and welcome warmth in winter. It has a roomy coal oven, two gas ovens, the Crawford Adjustable Broiler, and Single Damper Control—exclusive Crawford features. It is made in two sizes, 37 and 43 inches wide, in either gray enamel or black finish. Come in and see this wonder range.

POETRY

If You Only Remember

If in the world my feeble deeds are lost
And those who praised have quite forgotten me,
All effort will have been well worth the cost
To live again within your memory,
If only you remember for a while
The comfort of this room's soft gray and rose,
Wherein I always waited with a smile
For you to come to me at daylight's close,
If only you remember well this place,
Fresh flowers on the table set for two,
The gardens glimpsed through softly falling lace,
Embroidered linen, painted cups of blue,
If you remember I am unafraid,
From memories like these is Heaven made.
—Catherine Cate Coblentz in The Transcript.

To One Who Plants Trees

While these saplings stand,
Grown to graceful trees,
Glad shall be the land
That you planted these.

Death your hands may bind
And your voice may cease;
'Neath them men will find
Laziness and peace;

Coolness in their shade
From hot August skies;
(Man will meet maid
When the night wind sighs);

Glory in their sheen
When October burns;
Guerdon when the green
Hope of spring returns.
While these saplings stand,
Grown to graceful trees,
Glad shall be the land
That you planted these.
—John Hanlon.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Colombia produces more emeralds than any other country in the world.

One minute after garlic is eaten by a cow the flavor is present in the milk.

Statistics show that every third home in the United States is on a farm.

A southern Ohio taxpayer, being assessed 8 cents as his federal income tax, originally mailed postage stamps covering this amount, but was informed that stamps were not acceptable. Then the collector received a small block of wood, in which a hole had been bored and 8 cents secreted. A corn cog was used as a stopper to hold the money in place.

The production of wood pulp, next to agriculture is the most important industry in East Prussia. There are four mills in the province, two in the city of Konigsberg (owned by the Stinnes interests), one in Tilsit, and one in Ragnit. A considerable proportion of the output from these mills is shipped to the United States, as well as to the South American countries and to Japan and Russia.

Whole milk sold and consumed on farms of the United States last year was valued at $1,714,000,000, compared with $1,750,000,000 in 1923; butterfat, $394,000,000 compared with $415,000,000 and butter made on farms, $237,000,000, compared with $246,000,000. The average of prices received by farmers for milk sold for all purposes was 5.223 cents a quart in 1924; 5.647 cents in 1923, and 4.73 cents in 1922.

A near sighted man put a $5 gold piece in the collection plate of a Middletown, Conn., church. The church treasurer was delighted when he discovered it. The next day the man who had deposited it claimed the coin, saying that he thought it was a cent when he put it on the plate. The treasurer gave it back to the owner, who was so gratified that he gave that official a quarter for his honesty.

William Egger, of Middleboro, Mass., had just conveyed a patient from Middleboro, in an ambulance to a Boston hospital and had started on his return trip when he was a witness of an accident where a woman was knocked down by an automobile. He promptly placed her in his ambulance and within a few minutes was back again at the hospital with a patient whose identity was unknown to him.

The Daibutan, the colossal bronze Buddha of Kamakura, is once more seated in his ancient position on the lotus flower dais from which he was jolted a few feet in the great earthquake in Japan. For nearly a year work of restoration has been in progress. The huge casting, weighing 145 tons, was raised from its pedestal and kept suspended while the base was rectified. Thereupon the image was lowered carefully into position.

There have been no executions in Berlin since 1921, and it now being asserted that the number of brutal murders has increased in the German capital because of the disposition of life imprisonment instead of death. Berlin has no executioner and the discussions in the paper as to the advisability of restoring capital punishment have brought more than 100 applications from men who want to serve as hangman.

RALLY IN STOCK MARKET.

New York, April 23.—Stock prices rallied briskly today after an early period of irregularity during which many popular issues sold 1 to 4 points below yesterday's closing quotations. The recovery was aided by a sharp rally in wheat, net gains of 1 to 2 points being quite common at the close.

Trade news was mixed in character. Freight car loadings for the week ended April 11 were more than 36,000 cars larger than the corresponding week last year. The weekly steel trade reviews reported a further contraction in mill activities and an easing price tendency. Resumption of dividends on the common stock of Middle West Utilities was widely regarded as a forerunner of favorable dividend action by similar other public utility companies.

United States Steel common, which closed at 116 1-8 and most of the independent steels, showed fractional improvement despite the disappointing nature of the trade reviews. Loadhum showed outstanding strength, rising more than 3 points to 36 in anticipation of a favorable quarterly earnings report.

Motor shares, which have been weak the last few days, staged a splendid comeback. Maxwell Motors "B" opened at 75, sold down to 73, and then rallied to 78 7-8, closing just below that figure for a net gain of 3 points on the day. Mack Trucks closed nearly 3 points higher at 145, while Hudson, Willys-Overland preferred, Jordan and Pierce-Arrow common and preferred moved up one to nearly 3 points.

Oils were under heavy accumulation in the trading. Pan-American B rising nearly two points to 73 7-8 while Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, California Petroleum, Atlantic Refining, Marland, Mexican Seaboard, Houston, Tidewater, Independent Oil and Gas and Union Oil of California closed a point or so higher.

United States Cast Iron Pipe touched a new 1925 low at 131 1-4 and then rallied to 129 7-8, closing just below the top for a net gain of more than 4 points on the day. Manila Electric Railway scored 5 1-2 points to a new high at 48 1-2 in anticipation of an early increase in the dividend and then eased to 45 1-2 on profit-taking. Western Union touched a record high at 104.

Other outstanding strong spots in the industrial list included Allis Chalmers, American Can, American Tobacco, American Woolen, Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies common and preferred, General Electric, International Paper, National Cloak and Suit, Savage Arms and Frank G. Shattuck, all of which closed at net gains of two points or more.

Price common was held up four points to within a small fraction of the year's high in anticipation of the stock being placed on a $7 cash Norfolk and Western responded to the announcement that it had leased the Virginian Railway by moving up 8 points to 102 bid. Publication of a relatively poor March earnings report by the Chesapeake & Ohio led to a renewal of selling pressure against some of the western carriers but it failed to make much headway. Union Pacific was hammered down two points to 132 but rallied later to 135 1-2.

Call money held steady at 4 per cent. Time money rates showed a firmer tendency, sixty to ninety day maturities being quoted at 5 3-4 per cent and the longer dates on a flat 4 per cent basis. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchange rates eased slightly. Demand sterling was quoted at 4.75 3-4 in which the early trading and then slipping back nearly a half cent while French francs ruled about six points lower around 3.57 cents. Other European rates showed mixed changes.

STEAM BOILERS AND RADIATORS!

Ever notice how a radiator starts to knock, groan, hiss and sputter when the boiler starts shooting Steam into its pipes faster than the radiator can take care of it? It's a good thing for the radiator the steam boiler has a safety valve or the poor old radiator would be blown right out through the side of the building.

A LOT OF PEOPLE ARE LIKE RADIATORS—They, too, start to groan, hiss, sputter and knock, but who pays any attention to a knocking radiator. We know it's harmless. All noise and no action until the boiler gets up steam. If Aesop were alive today I imagine he would write a little moral apropos of the above—"If you can't get up steam don't knock." To come down to the business of the day—

HERE'S A SHOW THAT WILL STEAM UP THE WHOLE TOWN

Here's a bill of Vaudeville that makes anything before it look like a small boy's cellar show trying to compete with Ringling Bros.

I THINK IT'S THE BEST BILL I HAVE EVER SEEN PUT TOGETHER IN ANY THEATRE IN ANY TOWN LESS THAN 200,000 POPULATION. I think it's so good I want a big house Thursday Af

JEWETT CITY

At a stated communication of Mt. Vernon lodge No. 78, George T. Bell, Master, held Tuesday evening a class of three received the Entered Apprentice degree. There were also six applications for membership in a future class. Two votes of importance were carried as follows: The lodge will attend devine worship in Baltic on St. John's day in response to an invitation to do so from Rev. H. H. Conklin, pastor of the Methodist church. Also voted not to give the usual Ladies' night and Masonic ball this season. It did not seem to be the sense of the members present to discontinue this important and time honored social function for good and all, only, because a too late date seemed inadvisable to the committee.

Persons between 21 and 60 must pay $3. tax. Collector will be at Town Clerk's Sat. 25th. 1 to 3. At home any time.—Adv.

Tuesday evening, in Foresters' Hall Miss Amelia Liberty was surprised with a miscellaneous shower given by friends. She received beautiful and useful gifts of linen, cut-glass, pyrex aluminum and silver. Games, dancing and music were enjoyed and refreshments were served by Mrs. Roger Guillette, Mrs. Gerald Guillette and Misses Celia Liberty, Agnes Gill and Elizabeth Stafford. Others present were Mrs. Catherine Guillette, Mrs. William Liberty, Mrs. Augustus Campbell, Mrs. Bridget Shippe, Mrs. Arthur Burdick and the Misses Marjorie Leyden, Mary Driscoll, Valida Boule, Olive Stafford, Lecard Couture, Cleo Couture, Mary Kaminsky, Violet Peterson, Estelle Jodoin, Alice Jodoin, Beatrice Read, Eva Raille, Madeline Gill, Tillie Strakua, Pauline Morancey, Marguerite Gill, Vivian McLaughlin, Dorilda Lafleche, and Lillian Kelley and Celia Deschamps of Plainfield. Knights of Pythias, 1st, 2nd, degrees tonight. Seats plenty.—Adv.

Miss Margaret Cunningham, 68, died at her home on Hill street, Wednesday morning. She was born in Ireland, the daughter of Patrick and Rose Cunningham. She was a member of the local N. E. O. P. Her only relative in this country is Mrs. Katherine Hopkins, widow of James Hopkins. Mrs. Cunningham has been a resident of Jewett City over 40 years.

Finn's tonight, Richard Talmadge in Youth and Adventure.—Adv.

Seldom has a pleasanter gathering been held in the Baptist vestry than was that of Tuesday evening, when a mother and daughter banquet was held, and over eighty were present. It was arranged by the Missionary and King's Daughters' societies, and most successfully carried out. The mothers and daughters found each other by means of picture slips and then marched to the tables, which were prettily decorated with flowers. A delicious supper of meat loaf, fruit salad, rolls and coffee was served by the hostesses, much fun prevailing at the tables, singing and cheers being interspersed. Then each one marched to the serving room with her dishes and was given coffee jello and whipped cream, and all returning to their places were served cake. It was a delightful K. P. duty. Miss Alice A. Brown, Whatsoever Circle's leader announced the programme in a most unusual but very up-to-date manner. She said a programme would be broadcaster from Station's JCBC WWG, WMS and KD, and so it was. It included piano duet, "The Soldier Pass," Mrs. Geo. H. Prior and Miss Ellen Prior; soprano solo, "Thrill," by Miss Verna Tarboy. Encore, "One More Day"; address, "Origin and Aimes of the Order," Mrs. G. H. Prior, International President of the Kings Daughters and Sons; vocal duet, "Cupid Made Love to the Moon," Misses Winifred Scates and Doris Carpenter. Encore, "The Bluebells"; address, "The Coming of Christ's Kingdom," Miss Mary L. Howard, of Hartford, President of the Woman's Baptist Missionary Societies of the state; piano solo "Tanzweifer," by Miss Margaret Jordon.

The general chairman and song leader was Mrs. A. M. Brown, cheer leader for the World Wide Guild Girls, Winifred Scates.

The hostesses were: Mrs. E. M. Swift, Mrs. John Harris, Mrs. E. M. Gray, Mrs. C. A. Gardner, Mrs. Nelbert Myott, Mrs. R. R. Church, Mrs. Martin Davis, Miss Ruby

NORWICH TOWN

The annual meeting of the Norwich Town Men's League was held Monday evening in the First Congregational chapel. Preceding the meeting at 6.30, members of the league and their friends enjoyed a fine supper of oysters, Parker House rolls, crackers, pickles, doughnuts, cakes, lady fingers, macaroons and ice cream and coffee. The executive committee was in charge of the supper, assisted by members of the league, who served. The reports of the year's activities by the several officers were submitted and approved. The executive committee reported that while four meetings were planned, the first one had to be omitted owing to circumstances over which the committee had no control. The second meeting January 28th took the form of a travel talk by Don Houghton, who related experiences, illustrated by stereopticon slides, showing his trip by automobile from Norwich through Plymouth to Cape Cod, thence through the White Mountains.

March 31st Miss Helen Marshall entertained a large audience in a very interesting address on Whaling Days.

The fourth and last meeting involved the supper, with annual reports, election of officers, etc.

In the absence of the president and vice president, H. D. Larrabee, the chairman of the executive committee, presided. Because of illness, the report of the secretary and treasurer Robert Avery, was read by his father, Dwight W. Avery, who acted as secretary pro tem.

The nominating committee reported as follows: For president, Dwight L. Underwood; vice president, T. H. Bacheler; secretary and treasurer, Frederick G. Ross; executive committee, Elmer Larrance, chairman; Edwin A. Tracy and Herbert L. Yerrington.

The year just closed shows a good balance in the treasury. Among the new members admitted to the league were Edwin A. Tracy, Charles Barber, Dudley Lathrop and Rev. Charles Reeves.

Rev. J. Harlow Gruham and choir of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Norwich, will have charge of the Sunday afternoon service at the Sheltering Arms.

Miss Florence Sterry has returned to Storrs to resume her studies at the state college, after passing the Easter vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Sterry of Lee avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic H. Wyant entertained a dinner party of twelve Sunday last, at their home on Town street.

A most attractive two-apartment house is under construction on Washington street, near Backus hospital corner for Chester E. Wright of Church street, Norwich.

Several other modern houses and bungalows have been erected in this location during the past year or so, on Washington street and Lafayette Terrace, one at the last mentioned place now being under construction for Frank G. Rice of Asylum street.

On Town street a large roofed-in inclosure has recently been built in front of the battery house, at the plant of Julian L. Williams. The driveway is of concrete.

During Boys' week, Edwin A. Tracy is to be the speaker at Town street school.

SIX-CHURCH CONFERENCE IS HELD ON JEWETT CITY CHURCH CENTENNIAL

(Special to the Bulletin)

Jewett City, April 23—The conference of six churches met Wednesday at the Jewett City Congregational church, at which time the centennial of this church was observed. The platform was elaborately and attractively decorated with geraniums, begonias and palms. Carnations given by Mrs. Mary Brown of Atlanta, Ga., were part of the decorations. Rev. G. K. Gray, the pastor presided, reading the scripture and Rev. Dwight Stone of Hanover, offering prayer. A choir of girls sang two anthems, which they had themselves prepared and acquitted themselves with much credit.

The sermon of the morning was by Rev. William Carlos Prentice of Plainfield.

In connection with his subject for which he used the text quotation, "In our going out and in our coming in," he said that man was made to take the open, not stand still wrapped within himself but to go out, take the open road, meet other men and communities in his daily task.

He spoke of the unique equipment the Christian voyager must possess to successfully meet and accomplish his share of solving the great world problems of the day.

The speaker emphasized the importance of "travelling light." "Go," he said, unincumbered by petty hatreds and jealouses that must prove but a hindrance to efficient Christian duty. Travel light, go free to ministers, abounding in good works, always with the thought in mind to spend all, and give our best in the master's service. Important lessons of service and courage, were illustrated by interesting tales from the lives of Roosevelt and Edison together with other great men whom the speaker admired.

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Albert Clement. Dinner was served in the vestry, the table decorations being forsythia and daffodils. Rev. W. H. Muttart of Preston City offered the grace.

Afternoon Session

After a devotional service in the afternoon the minutes of the last conference were read by Miss Doris Johnson for the clerk. The roll call showed from Hanover 20, Newent 13, Preston City 33, Pachaug 11, Plainfield 10, Jewett City 27, visitors 34 a total of 148. The First Congregational church of Griswold sent a letter greeting to her daughter church, written by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, who was ill, and could not be present.

The letter was read by Rev. W. J. Reynolds for the clerk. A vote of appreciation for the letter and of sympathy for the pastor and his family was passed. A vote of thanks for the addresses, music, entertainment, the floral decorations and for all that had been done to make the day memorable, and of congratulation for having arrived at the maturity of 100 years was extended the church. It was announced that the conference would meet in Hanover on May thirteenth. Byron Kinzie sang The Beautiful Gate as a solo. A paper on the History of the Jewett City Congregational church was read by Mrs. E. H. Hiscox.

Afternoon Address

Rev. J. W. Carter, pastor of the Methodist church, delivered the address of the afternoon.

His masterly handling of one of the outstanding questions of the times, The Relationship of Man to Social Service was presented to a large audience, whose interest was evidenced by their close attention.

The speaker believed that the best views were obtained by contrast, hence his outlining of the things that were in comparison with conditions that are, served to illustrate his well sustained line of convincing argument.

He believed that we should be thoroughly acquainted with our duty in the days of a life that never tarries but is continually in swiftest motion. There is a new social order, the like of which our fathers never dreamed. As life widens so our zones of influence correspondingly broaden, and our attitude toward current phases of social service, are moulded by the new thoughts and ideas of present day existence. When all is done, he said, let us render devoted service to our fellow man. Rev. W. J. Reynolds pronounced the benediction.

A pencil sketch of the church that was burned in 1876 with the adjacent buildings that were also burned, was to be seen displayed upon the altar. This was drawn by G. H. Prior, purely from stories told of "How it looked before Jewett City's biggest and most spectacular fire."

A photograph presented Mrs. G. A. Haskell by David Hale Fanning of Worcester, showed the original church which was razed to make room for David Hale Fanning park.

CONNECTICUT CONFERENCE OF SOCIAL WORK

The programme for the annual conference of Connecticut Social Workers has recently been announced. This is to be held in Waterbury, April 26, 27, 28 and 29.

The problems of social work are varied as shown by the subjects under discussion such as sections on delinquency, child care in institutions, community life and organization, rural social work, the foreign born, occupational therapy, family case work, health, mental hygiene, social hygiene and the social service exchange.

The programme carries names of professional men and women well known in social work. This offers an opportunity for inspiration from these leaders who will bring to the conference new methods which have proven effective in solving their own problems. For one who is fortunate enough to attend the full session, there will be a wealth of discussion on all the problems one is most interested in. There are evening meetings, and luncheon sessions which will enable the busy person to attend, and benefit from discussions without sacrificing any business hours.

The conference opens on Sunday, April 26, at 7 p. m., and continues each morning at 9 a. m. standard time.

There has been a change made in the Groton fire warden. Leslie Chesbro, who has been fire warden, has been replaced by William D. Alexander, whose appointment is effective at once.

CHILDREN RUSHED IN COUNTY HOME SCHOOLS

A dangerous tendency to promote the children in the lower grades in the various county homes of Connecticut more rapidly than their progress in school work warrants is seen by Maud Keator, director of the division of special education and standards of the state department of education. This is due to the fact that the great majority of the children in the county homes are in the lower grades, only an exceedingly small percentage being in the seventh and eighth grades. More than two-thirds of the children are in grades below the fourth.

In this connection, Miss Keator says:

"Only two per cent. of the total registration is found in the seventh grade and slightly more than three-tenths of one per cent. in the eighth grade. The large number of children in the primary grades foster a tendency to promote these younger children rather more rapidly than they are prepared to go, while the contrary tendency is found above grade five, where the small number of children representing many grades encourages the practice of retarding pupils who are prepared to go forward. In some cases children repeat grades which have already been satisfactorily completed or they may even be excused from school because the teacher does not feel that she can carry on another grade for the benefit of one or two children. This is a real problem, the solution of which might perhaps be found through cooperation with the village or city schools. Certainly bright children should not be penalized. Much the same argument applies to the granting of high school privilege. It is true that only a few possess this grade of ability, but those few should be granted a trial at least. Trade school classes belong in the same category."

A comparison of the registration in the various county homes for 1923 and 1924 shows a decrease in numbers in both years in Middlesex, New Haven, New London and Tolland, a falling off in the Fairfield home during the first year of the period but a stationary condition at the end of the second year, while Hartford county shows a smaller number registered on July 1, 1923, with a decided increase on July 1, 1924, over both of the earlier dates. The largest gross change is the increase in the Hartford county home with the highest percentage of change represented by the loss in Middlesex.

Speaking in more detail of the heavy first grade registration in the Hartford county home, Miss Keator says: "This year the number of young children has reached seventeen. An effort was made to meet the problem by furnishing a limited amount of kindergarten materials, and assigning one of the older girls as part-time assistant. A decided improvement resulted, but conditions were not entirely satisfactory. Furthermore, it was felt that some provision should be made for those children who were making little or no progress in the regular grades. Here also the status of the children has been placed on an objective scientific basis because of individual mental tests which were given last summer, under the direction of the bureau of child welfare. On March 18 a general reorganization of the school was made whereby the young children were excused from attentance, while the slow pupils about twenty-five in number, were placed in a coach or tutoring room in charge of one of the teachers already employed."

HEARING $175,000 SUIT OVER POTASH SALE

Continuing through the second day, suit of Stuart et al., trustees, against the American Agricultural Chemical Co., occupied the attention of the superior court at New London Wednesday with Judge Edwin C. Dickenson presiding.

The case which began Tuesday morning, involves a claim of $175,000 by the plaintiff, Stuart et al., trustees, or the American Potash Co. of Nebraska.

It is alleged that in September, 1919, the plaintiff sold to the defendant 10,000 tons of potash salts. It is also alleged by the plaintiff that in April, 1919, the vice-president of the defendant went to Nebraska to the plaintiff and ordered 10,000 tons more of potash salts, but that the vice-president asked to have over night to either cancel or confirm the order. The plaintiff alleges further that it was agreed that an answer must be returned the next day as the plaintiff had already an opportunity to sell the 10,000 tons. The plaintiff also claims to have written to the defendant a letter regarding the deal.

The plaintiff alleges that no cancellation was received at the time and deliveries of certain numbers of tons were made at intervals until Nov. 22, 1920, when the plaintiff received from the defendant word to cancel the remainder of the order.

The defendant claims the right of cancellation while the plaintiff claims that the defendant had no right to cancel the order after the vice-president of the defendant had returned to New York.

The American Potash Co. claims damages of $175,000 for the loss of profits from the remainder of the order which was cancelled by the American Agricultural Chemical Co.

Attorney Carl Foster of Bridgeport is representing the plaintiff, while Attorneys Day and Berry of Hartford and Charles B. Whittlesey of New London are representing the defendant.

MUST BE MORE SPECIFIC IN NOANK SHIPYARD SUIT

The suit instituted by the government against the Noank Shipyards Co. of Noank, following the fire which nearly destroyed the shipyard on May 19 last was before Judge Edwin S. Thomas in the United States district court at New Haven Tuesday. Judge Thomas entered decision on a demurrer, finding that the information filed by the government is not complete and that it must be amended so as to set forth in more detail the grounds alleged.

The government claims that on May 15, 1924, it delivered a boat to the Noank yards to be repaired and that four days later fire broke out in the yard, and the vessel was badly damaged by the flames. The government claims that a clause in the contract provided that the shipyard was responsible for loss from fire and other causes listed.

BAN ON FIRE PERMITS IS STILL IN EFFECT

C. H. Lathrop of Franklin, fire patrol for this section, called at the Bulletin office Wednesday evening to state that the ban on fire permits is still to be enforced as the recent light rains have not yet made it safe for the fire wardens to issue permits. Conditions in the woods and fields are still very dry and until there has been some good soaking rain and conditions are different from what they are at present, the fire wardens will not issue permits.

WILLIMANTIC FIRE CHIEF DIE DSUDDENLY AT HOME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, April 22—Fire Chief James J. Tighe, 47, of the local fire department, died suddenly at his home shortly before 10 o'clock tonight from an attack of acute indigestion. He felt the first systems of his illness upon the completion of his duties at the Bank street engine house, of Engine company No. 1 at 6 o'clock and as his condition gradually grew worse after reaching his home at 189 Jackson street, Drs. O'Neil and Ottenheimer were summoned. He was beyond human assistance and before 10 o'clock he expired after bidding his family farewell and receiving the last rites of the Roman Catholic church administered by Rev. Henry Quinn, pastor of St. Joseph's church.

Chief Tighe was born in this city, April 15, 1878, the son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Tighe. His father was superintendent of the city's sewers for a period of years. He is survived by his wife, Ella Murray Tighe, a daughter Mrs. George (Marguerite) Downes of Wauregan, a son J. Murray Tighe of this city and a grand child, George Murray Downes of Wauregan.

The death of Chief Tighe came as a shock to the entire community as the news of his passing away became known. A clean life had given him a healthy appearance and during the day (Wednesday) he gave no indication of the approaching end. He was affiliated with San Jose council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus, and has been a member of St. Joseph's church choir for 30 years. As a young men he became actively interested in the fire department of the city. For years he was a member of the Montgomery Hose company, No. 2, before the department was permanently organized. At that time he was employed in the winding rooms of the American Thread company and latter was an employe of the late Michael Sullivan, dealer in wholesale liquor. He then became bartender at the John McDonough saloon, before the enactment of the Volstead act. During the years of his experience in the liquor business his adherence to strict temperance remained unblemished. During these years he continued his affiliations with the fire department and was transferred to Engine company, No. 1. When the department was permanently organized under the late Mayor Daniel P. Dunn, he was appointed captain. Upon the retirement of Fire Chief Wade U. Webster, in 1921, the position of chief which was previously politically controlled, was made permaneht by an act of the legislature and upon appointment of Ex-Mayor Charles A. Gates, Capt. Tighe became fire chief. He has retained the position in a highly creditable manner, his efficiency having won for him not only the respect and admiration of the department but of the whole community. He also filled the position of building inspector in conjunction with that of fire chief and in this work he accomplished a great deal to safeguard the city against fire hazards. Under his regime many beneficial changes were introduced in the department and he successfully advocated many notable improvements. As the first permanent fire chief he was forced to bear many burdens and overcome various difficulties, all of which he faced with a cheerful smile and a ready heart.

Remember—

Deciding now to have a BOND instead of going on with an old-fashioned, wasteful heating method, is like deciding to own your home instead of continuing to invest in useless rent receipts!

Just as rent-money pays for the home, so does present wasted coal money pay for the BOND.

Choose now, while you can, between investing in a BOND or spending as much and more for further wasted fuel.

Exercise your best business judgment by ordering a BOND now—remembering that your order will not be accepted unless the BOND Engineering Department can safely guarantee the System to give you Satisfaction in coldest winter weather.

Had you waited to know all about Electricity before you used it, you would still be doing without the wonderful things it does for you now.

Why deny your family the greater comfort of this most modern, healthful, heating method—the BOND—merely because you do not fully understand it? You can enjoy BOND comfort and economy without knowing any more about it than you do of electricity—and it actually costs you more to "get along" without a BOND than to have it right away!

Now is the best time to make this profitable investment.

LIQUOR COURT-MARTIAL FOR SIX OFFICERS OF U. S. NAVY

Orders Signed by Secretary Wilbur—Result of Raid on the Naval Transport Beaufort at Norfolk, Va., Feb. 24, When a Quantity of Liquor Was Seized—Courtmartial is Expected to be Designated Soon to Convene at Hampton Roads—Charges Allege Possession of and Smuggling Liquor Into the United States.

Washington, April 23—Orders were signed by Secretary Wilbur for the court martial of six officers on charges growing out of the raid on the naval transport Beaufort at Norfolk, Va., February 24, when a quantity of liquor was seized upon its arrival from the West Indies.

The board is expected to be designated soon and will convene at Hampton Roads.

Under the order signed, Commander D. W. Fuller of Rockland, Maine, who was in command of the Beaufort, is charged with neglect in that he did not discover the presence of liquor on board and in allowing liquor to leave the ship. Some of the liquor was alleged to have been placed in an automobile on the dock before it was seized.

The charges against the other officers allege possession of liquor on board and smuggling liquor into the United States. One of the officers, Lieutenant Fred M. Rohow of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., of the medical corps, is also charged with failing to obey orders to report dutiable articles on board ship.

The other officers named are Lieutenant R. D. Hill, Jr., of Norwich, Conn., Lieutenant Clarence W. Baker, of Newport, R. I.; machinist Frank M. Hendricks of New Haven, Conn., and chief pay clerk J. P. Gallagher, of Norfolk, Va.

19 REAL DAUGHTERS OF REVOLUTION STILL LIVING

Washington, April 23—Reports from state regents and election of seven vice-presidents-general occupied the continental congress of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution tonight, after a day devoted to approving reports of various committees and attending a White House reception tendered the delegates.

The resolutions committee, meanwhile considered a proposal to put the congress on record of favor of alien registration and deportation of undesirables, a plan advocated by Secretary Davis. The committee reports disclosed that manuals furnished by the society and distributed among immigrants while on the way to America are retained by most of the aliens.

There are 19 real Daughters of the Revolution still living, the congress was told, and Mrs. James T. Begg, wife of the Ohio representative in presenting her report as chairman on legislation, expressed the opinion that it might be expedient for the organization to make a drive for establishment of a federal archives building to house valuable documents, now scattered in various government departments and bureaus.

Resolutions proposed from the floor, expressing sympathy for Secretary Weeks and his family in his illness and tendering greetings to Former Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand were referred to the resolutions committee.

SIR ESME HOWARD TALKS OF RUM AND NARCOTICS

Philadelphia, April 23—Criticisms of England's attitude toward the American rum running and narcotic problems and of her foreign police as one "pure greed and selfishness," were contradicted by Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador to Washington, in an address here tonight before the Society of the Sons of St. George.

"I have no wish to enter into any controversy over the liquor smuggling question," he added, "but I may say this: There is no decent minded man, there is no man with any sense of responsibility in England, who does not deplore the fact that there are evil-minded persons who abuse the British flag in order to violate the laws of this country with regard to this type of smuggling."

The liquor treaty between the United States and Great Britain was to remedy this evil, he said, and, though some arrests had been made which he thought were not quite within the terms of the agreement, the British government had refrained from protesting in view of the nature of the offenses.

NATIONAL FAME FOR BRIDGEPORT COMPOSER

Bridgeport, April 23—John Adam Hugo, of Bridgeport, composer of the opera "the Temple Dancer," which has brought him national fame, was presented with the David Bispham memorial medal at a dinner given in his honor here tonight by the Bridgeport Wednesday Afternoon Musical club. The medal was awarded by the Chicago Opera society.

Leonard Liebling, of New York, editor of the Musical Courier, was one of the speakers. In his praise of Mr. Hugo as an American composer he made a plea for support of composers and musicians of this country. Citing the huge salaries of musicians and mentioning the names of several music celebrities in this country of foreign birth including Guilio Gatti-Casazza, manager of the Metropolitan Opera company, Mr. Liebling said: "Every foreigner knows we don't stand back of our own."

SEARCHING FOR THIEVES WHO DISMANTLED AIRPLANE

Boston, April 23—Boston police and federal authorities are searching for thieves who dismantled a United States government airplane at the East Boston flying field and made good their escape with the 400 horsepower Liberty motor, the propellor, radiator, and two wheels fitted with balloon tires, it was revealed today. The parts taken from an airplane awaiting repairs, were said to be worth about $5,000. Discovery of the theft was reported to the war department and today the Boston police were called in. The plane was intact the night of April 19. Investigators are hampered by an absence of clues.

BAREFOOT CLUB MEMBERS SUSPENDED FROM SCHOOL

West Palm Beach, Fla., April 23—The "sheik" fad of wearing garterless socks, which had been sweeping the colleges and high schools of the country, was relegated to the back pages of out-of-date styles, when more than a score of Palm Beach high school boys put in an appearance at the school grounds wearing neither garters, socks nor shoes.

The exploitation of the fad was shortlived however for the members of the barefoot club were suspended from school for the remainder of the week.

TO PROBE CIRCUMSTANCES OF RAIFUKU MARU DISASTER

New York, April 23—Japan's government through its consul-general is investigating the circumstances of the Raifuku Maru disaster 180 miles southwest of Sable Island Tuesday, in which 38 Japanese seamen lost their lives.

H. Saito, the counsul-general said that his office was working on the case, in connection with officials of the Kokusai Kisen Kaisha, owners of the Raifuku Maru. An independent investigation is under way at the hands of officials of the White Star Line, owners of the Homeric, which arrived at the scene of the disaster too late to effect a rescue. Results of this inquiry, company officials said, would be forwarded to the British board of trade at London.

Two masters of trans-Atlantic liners came to the support of Captain John Roberts, of the Homeric, in the controversy started by the vessels first class passengers as to whether every possible effort had been made to save the Raifuku Maru's seamen. They were Captain Ansel J. Schmidt, of the Scandinavian-American liner Oscar II, and Captain Vincent Romano of the Italian ship Dante Alighieri.

DEPEW CELEBRATED HIS 91ST BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

New York, April 23—Chauncey M. Depew, chairman of the board of the New York Central railroad, celebrated his ninety-first birthday anniversary. When he reached the breakfast table promptly, as usual, at eight o'clock he found scores of telegrams piled besides his plate.

Messages of congratulation continued to reach the Depew home throughout the day and by night the total was in excess of 500. Among them were messages from Secreary of State Frank B. Kellogg, Lord Desborough, head of the English Branch of the Pilgrims, and Bishop William T. Manning.

Mr. Depew passed the day quietly indoors, entertaining twenty intimate friends at dinner tonight. He was described by telephone from his residence as being as "chipper as a youngster."

When he entered the dining room Mr. Depew found a birthday cake four feet in circumference at the base and as many feet high, built in tiers, and stuck all over with the ninety-one candles. At each side of this confection were mounds of ferns containing ninety-one American beauty roses, gifts of the Pilgrim Society of the United States.

He told his guests this was the most successful of all his successful birthdays.

NEW HAVEN FACTIONAL POLITICS AIRED AT HARTFORD

Hartford, April 23—New Haven factional politics were aired for nearly five hours this afternoon before the judiciary committee of the legislature which held a hearing on a bill sponsored by Clarence G. Willard, assistant secretary of the republican state central committee, providing for abolishment of the elected registrars of voters and substituting two election commissioners, to be appointed by the governor for six year tearms. The bill was vigorously opposed by Senator Harry A. Blakeslee and Selectman Louis Finemark, both members of the Ullman coterie of New Haven republicanism.

STEAMER ARCTURUS WAS HEARD FROM BY RADIO

New Orleans, La., April 23.—The steamer Arcturus which recently made an exploration trip to the Sargossa sea and which had not been heard from for more than a week, was communicated with today by the Tropical Radio Telegraph company. The vessel gave her position as 0.02 latitude south and 89.37 longitude west.

BIRMINGHAM CITY HALL WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Birmingham, Ala., April 23—Fire this afternoon destroyed the Birmingham city hall with an estimated loss of $300,000.

A large number of prisoners in the city jail which was situated in the building were transferred to the county jail.

The public library which was situated on the fourth floor of the building was destroyed.

Dr. Wilhelm Marx, the former chancellor and now candidate of the Weimar coalition for the presidency, declared in his campaign speech at Mannheim, Germany that "the policy of the future Reich president must be open and above board before the nation and the whole world."

Forest fires are again burning in several places near Oneco. One in the Pond Hill district in the town of Plainfield burned over a large tract and high wind spread two others north of this town and one west of Packerville along the railroad.

Senator Wheeler Trial Nearing End

Both Prosecution and Defense Counsel Have Agreed to Forego Calling of Witnesses.

Great Falls, Mont., April 23.—(By the A. P.)—The trial of Senator Burton K. Wheeler reached its final stages here today when the defense rested, after both prosecution and defense counsel agreed to forego the calling of witness intended to controvert testimony previously offered by witnesses for both sides.

The Montana senator is charged with appearing illegally before the department of the interior in behalf of Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator, after the lawyer's election to the senate.

Earlier in the day, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief of Wheeler's counsel announced that the defense had examined every available witness and asked the prosecution to allow a stipulation as to what the testimony of four witnesses, hastily summoned from the east would be.

However, a conference between the attorneys and Federal Judge Frank S. Dietrich resulted in the announcement that neither side would call further witnesses and that final arguments probably would begin tomorrow.

Defense witnesses, summoned from the east, were to offer testimony in an effort to impeach the government's star witness, George P. Hayes, New York attorney. Senator Walsh said. Hayes testified that Wheeler approached him in New York in March, 1923 and asked him to appear in his place before the interior department to prosecute oil prospecting permits being sought by Campbell.

On the stand yesterday, Senator Wheeler denied that he conferred with Hayes and an extended trial loomed when both sides announced their intention of bringing in impeaching witnesses.

After all available witnesses had been heard, Senator Walsh said he might ask for a continuance, pending the arrival of eastern men, who were under subpoena. The conference ironed out all difference and the defense announced that it would rest.

Both prosecution and defense attorneys announced tonight that argument to the jury would be permitted some time tomorrow and that it would be possible for Judge Dietrich to instruct the jury by time for adjournment of court tomorrow night.

The testimony given by Wheeler and Hayes was diametrically opposed. Hayes testified that Edwin S. THREE JURORS SELECTED IN TRIAL OF OLYMPIA MACRI

New Haven, April 23—Three jurors had been selected at the end of the second day of the trial of Olympia Macri, charged with the murder of John Bagnano, in superior court here. Those placed in the jury box were Frank Beach, of Milford and S. D. Bartlett, a 77 year old paper hanger of East Haven. Daniel B. Perry, a fisherman of Milford, was selected yesterday, the opening day of the trial. The girl defendant tonight expressed satisfaction with the three men chosen.

During the court session, while the steady stream of talesmen flowed from an ante room of the court house to the witness chair, the girl sat beside her counsel, Joseph Koletsky, and watched the procedure apparently with considerable interest. As each man took his seat in the witness box she gazed steadily at him and while Attorney Koletsky and State's Attorney Arnon A. Alling plied each man with questions, her eyes never left the face of the witness. When the questioning of each talesman was completed, she whispered to her counsel and apparently what she said decided whether the talesman was accepted or rejected by the defense.

When court was adjourned by Judge Christopher L. Avery until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, a total of 51 talesmen had been questioned. Of these 13 were challenged by the defense, seven were chalinged by the state and 31 were excused by the court.

DEAN INGE TAKES RAP AT DIVORCE IN AMERICA

New Haven, April 23—After stating that as a guest in this country he could not see his way clear to criticise American institutions, the Very Rev. William Ralph Inge this afternoon declared, during the course of a lecture, that "the statistics on divorce in America are a dark stain on a civilized country."

The remark regarding divorce came after Dean Inge had outlined the social evils most manifest now in England, during the course of a lecture of Modern preaching delivered before the Yale Divinity school.

"The most important of the social evils in England," he said, "are betting and gambling which have a more potent influence in ruining a man than alhohol which ruins only a few. The second great evil is immorality. Marriage has become nothing more than an institution which lasts only as long as a momentary passion."

40TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE GRIDIRON CLUB

Washington, April 23—By way of celebrating the fortieth anniversary of its foundation, the gridiron club of Washington newspaper correspondents, at its spring dinner tonight, devoted its entertainment to Coolidge's constitutionalized circus, a three ring affair in which public men and affairs got the usual good natured toasting.

Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National committee, was pictured as ringmaster, and, noting the absence of "demon Dawes" he observed to the ringside that "he has already missed one performance when we needed him."

The show was interrupted at the outset by a barker for a Democratic side show, pictured as Senator Reed of Missouri, who invited the audience to see "Walsh the wild man, goes wild on oil and sugar; Jo-Jo Robinson and his democratic donkey playing dead since last November; Heflin, the human harmonica; Overman, the strong man who breaks a tie at every performance; Roscoe Harrison who eats them alive, and the Miami twins—Bill and Charley—in their great living statuary act."

By the time the democratic side show barker had been given the "hey rube" in approved old time circus fashion, there was anotehr upset, and ringmaster Butler was informed that "the La-Follette crowd had crawled under the tent and set up a three shell game again."

A distinguished company of guests enjoyed the fun, much of it at their own expense, President Coolidge headed the list and was accompanied by eight members of his cabinet.

WAS SECOND BURGLARY AT HOME OF EDWARD F. LANE

New Britain, April 23—The burglary at the home of Edward F. Lane, pathologist at the New Britain general hospital Sunday morning, when Mr. Lane's papers and copies of autopsy reports were ransacked, was the second entrance made by prowlers, it was learned. Mr. Lane and Dr. Waterman Lyon performed the autopsy on the body of Patrolman Skelly last October and it is the opinion of Mr. Lane that the prowlers were after a copy of that autopsy report. Gerald Chapman was convicted recently of the murder of Patrolman Skelly and is under sentence to hang in June.

Shortly after Christmas, Mr. and Mrs. Lane and their one year old baby were patients in the New Britain general hospital and while they were absent from their home, it was discovered by other tenants of the house occupied by the Lanes that the Lane apartment had been entered.

Mr. Lane upon his return from the hospital discovered that all of the papers in his desk had been gone over and that jewelry left in the house by Mrs. Lane had not been disturbed and nothing had been taken.

It was learned that the prowler entered the Lane home Sunday morning shortly after 3 o'clock after the policeman who patrols that section had passed for his last rounds of the night.

INTERNATIONAL LAW ONLY BASIS FOR WORLD PEACE

Former Secretary of State Hughes Declares World Peace Can Be Ultimately Effected Only Through a Great Conference of Representatives of All Nations of the Earth to Clarify and Codify International Law—Mr. Hughes Cited the Relations of the United States and Canada as an Excellent Example of Peace.

Washington, April 23—World peace can be ultimately effected only through the clarification and codification of international law, and this is to be accomplished only through a great conference of representatives of all the nations of the earth, former Secretary of State Hughes, as president of the American Society of International Law, told members of that association at their annual meeting tonight.

Speaking on "the development of international law," he asserted that the United States must lead the way toward such a conference and reiterated his hope that "the appropriate support of the permanent court of international justice by the government of the United States will not be delayed much longer."

It was not his purpose to restate the reasons he believed the United States should support the permanent court, Mr. Hughes said, "but simply to emphasize the incalculable advantages of having such a tribunal as aid in the development of international law; to reinforce the law-abiding sentiment through recourse to the exercise of its jurisdiction and acceptance of its decisions," and added: "not improbably the nations may thus be led to avail themselves more readily of the necessary international legislative process to perfect the law and to satisfy enlarged conceptions of international justice."

Every suggestion intended to be helpful should be accepted and dealt with, no matter what trying situations and trials of patience may result, Mr. Hughes insisted, declaring that "we must not fail to remember that no progress can be had unless we have an atmosphere of endeavor and a disposition which lifts us above captiousness."

"It is this spirit, he added, that "we consider the development of international law, not as an exclusive, or sufficient remedy, but as an important means of correcting the evils that afflict us."

"In dealing with international law," he continued, "we are considering nothing that is merely formal, still less what can be imposed, but the growth of civilization itself. When we consider the disposition of violence within nations, it is not surprising that the progress toward international peace has been so slight. But it is precisely because we are dealing with civilization itself x x x that we attach the greatest importance to the development of international law which may be deemed to be a record of the judgments of the conscience of mankind."

He cited the relations of the United States and Canada as an excellent example of peace between nations and saw in the instrumentalities for "directing the thought of nations to the facilities of accord, and especially to the obligations of law, not imposed, but expressed in principles and rules accepted by voluntary actions." Ultimately, he said, the best guarantee of the independence of small states will be found in the development of the law.

Through world-wide development of the law, Mr. Hughes continued, "we may hope to make measureable progress to that degree of civilization which will prosper the efforts of conciliation in the area outside the law, which will cultivate and at some time make dominant the spirit of reasonableness in dealings with the conflicts of interest, without which all peace plans are idle dreams."

It will not be an easy task to achieve these ends, Mr. Hughes admitted. "The consent of nations must be had," he said, "and this must be obtained from governments faced with political exingencies x x x and our problem is how to stimulate effective co-operative endeavor. And it must always be borne in mind by our lay friends that it is agreement we are seeking on the part of states which according to our fundamental postulate we must recognize as independent and equal before the law.

"It is plain that the machinery best adapted to the purpose is that of the international conference, not of some nations, x x x but of all civilized nations who through their governments recogize the obligations of international law conferences where all stand on an equal footing and in which the sole purpose is to perfect the law and the institutions of the law."

He cited the experience of the nations which participated in the Washington disarmament conference and added that this nation's development of international law at the pan-American conferences should be of aid to the greater movement.

"We cannot be content until appropriate plans have been made to restate, amend and enlarge the universal law," the speaker cotended, "and this, as I have said, should be accomplished through conferences, x x x it may be added that the government of the United States has always welcomed such conferences, as our attitude toward the conferences at the Hague abundantly shows. It should be apparent that the controversy over the covenant of the league of nations involved no hostility to international conferences x x x but to the assumption of certain obligations in the covenant of the league to which prepoderant opinion here was opposed."

He enumerated the difficulties inherent in conferences: the obtaining of unanimous action, the ecessity of ratification by all governments concerned, the inevitable long delays, political difficulties on a multitude of questions, and a dozen other obstacles to rapid progress. As a result, the way to the international law conference must be well prepared, he declared, saying that "it would be idle to call a conference without the preparation of proposals well thought out; such a course would probably lead to a few pious resolutions and a long sleep."

The preliminary steps, he said, must be taken up by "the jurists of the nations, thosew ho are at once the most content and the most zealous." Most of the work already done in important international conferences was done in this way, the speaker said.

"Eventually," he continued, "foreign governments will have the decisive word. This preliminary work of jurists should, if possible, be carried on with the idea of exploring in their respective countries the policies of their governments, to the end that these might be anticipated, clarified, defined and the possibilities of modification in the interests of a general agreement be considered."

In the meantime, Mr. Hughes said, international judicial institutions should be encouraged as another way of developing international law in addition to the direct legislative progress. It was in this connection that he reiterated his hope that this country soon would lend its support to the permanent court of international justice, declaring it his conviction that this institution is free from the dominance of political organizations.

"That independence," he said, "can be made secure by the support of all nations and especially that of the United States on terms of adherence such as havebeen proposed by President Harding and President Coolidge. It would seem to be idle to expect that another tribunal can be set up or that progress can be made by such a futile demand."

Spector claimed that last Saturday he saw two wheels answering the description of those Flemming wanted to buy at Dondero's garage where Flemming is employed, and produced two others to match those taken from the Walnut street garage. Upon examination it was found that one of the Buick wheels was the smaller. Officer Hurley testified that he went to the Dondero garage Saturday and secured the wheels, which were in plain view of anyone entering the place. Flemming claimed that the wheels were brought to the garage by Mr. Dondero, to be used on another car, found not to fit and placed it one side. L. N. Paper Barrels

Winding barrels from a roll of tough "chipboard" paper is accomplished on a machine consisting of a cylinder, cut in two parts, which may be drawn apart on the axle to produce different lengths. The paper, passing through tension rollers and an adhesive-coating device, is wound for a predetermined number of layers, then a slitting wheel divides the paper, the cylinder halves are drawn apart, and an additional thickness of paper wound on in the center to provide the bilge.

The vital statistics for the town of Griswold for March show that there were six deaths. Elizabeth Belisle, pneumonia, age, 15 years; Anthony Walaztys, tubercular (pulmonary) age 20. John L. Douglas, arterio sclierosis, age 84. Maude L. Barrett, cerebral hemorrhage, age 49. Larry Nealon, accidental burning, age 48. John M. Garsiko, accidental burning, age 39.

There were five births: John Woloftis, Joseph Leodor, Jean Paul Vermotte, Guy Harold Marinello, John Edward Ladouski and Jennie Stowiecki.

No mortuary records, since the town began to tabulate its vital statistics, show anything approaching that of March 1925, when within the space of a few hours, three persons were burned to death, Wycente Osga, died in the town of Norwich, hence his name is not included in Griswold's record, except in the form of advice from the clerk of the town of Norwich. He and John Garstka were riding together when the accident occurred which proved fatal to both.

George Rocheleau, A. and P. store manager, attended the banquet at Providence Wednesday evening.

Local music lovers are looking forward with pleasure to the recital to be given by James Olsen a local young pianist of note.

Mrs. Adelbert R. Young will return to her home Sunday, after spending two weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Champion Mathewson in New Haven.

Many friends are pleased to greet Mrs. Lizzie Duce, who has returned from the south.

There is some baseball talk in the wind, which encourages local fans in the belief that there may be a team here this season.

Thursday in the borough was the warmest day of the season; 76, 78 and 80 degrees were the reported thermometer-shade readings. A fairly stiff breeze in the afternoon with an overcast sky failed to reduce the temperature before nightfall. Lawns all about the town are ready for the first mowing, to even the new grass, trees are showing a fine start, and May spring flowers are in bloom.

Samuel Truesdale, boss spinner for the Ninigret Co., as alternae for Norman B. Parkhurst, and P. W. Chase were at the meeting of the Blackstone Vallege Mills association held at Northbridge, Mass., Wednesday evening. Mr. Parkhurst is president and Mr. Chase is secretary and treasurer of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association, and at the meeting in Northbridge represented that organization officially.

Late Thursday afternoon a big touring car, bearing a Pennsylvania registration, with four young men as passengers stopped against the south curb at a busy section of the Main street state road. Conspicuously displayed, on a wide black flag like cloth across the back of the machine, were three horrible looking emblems, in white, giving an impressive skull and cross bones effect. The quartette, very ordinary individuals alighted and gazed mysteriously about.

Soon the observant citizen, and the man on the corner got busy with the tail end signs. There was talk of K. K. K. and many had visions of a night rider's raid. Some passers-by looked nervous and felt to make certain that their jack-knives were in readiness. Finally, when a small crowd had gathered, including The Bulletin man, heavily armed with pad and seven pencils, one man, more brave than the rest, even though he courted death, asked one of the men, "How about them air signs?"—Curtain.—It was four young members of Phi Beta Pi society of a southern college, enjoying an automobile trip through the Nutmeg State. And to the consternation of all, they ate Carey's ice cream sodas just like folks.

Hearing Electrons.

By means of the radio vacuum tube amplifier, scientists have been able to hear the noises made by electrons, the infinitely small units of electricity as they are "bombarded" against the plate in the tube from the hot filament, says Popular Mechanics. These electrons, it is said, carry the current and make possible the operation of the tube, which is capable of tremendous amplification. Through this, a new way of measuring the value of the electron charge has been developed and a method of research opened which may lead to valuable knowledge concerning the electron and its properties. Previously it has been studied by means of tiny drops of oil, observing their movements between two electrically charged plates. Droplets are made to fall slowly or rapidly or are held stationary between the plates, according to the presence of charged electrons in them and the voltage applied to the plates. With proper amplification, the roar of the electrons in the tube can be magnified to produce a volume like that of Niagara, it is said, and this action is to be studied in the hope that facts not presented in the gravity tests will be learned.

Beetle Broadcasts.

The broadcasting of a beetle's love song to its mate was the feature of a program sent out by a London, England, station. The occasion was a national history lecture in which the life cycle and habits of the beetle were discussed. At the appropriate moment the beetle, which had a special microphone to himself, was permitted to give his call. Many radio fans complimented the beetle on his performance.

A SCHOOL EXAM THAT ISN'T ON THE LIST

In every school—Grammar as well as High—there's an exam that every Boy is called upon to pass.

That is the test of personal appearance. It begins early and plays a vital part in the Boy's career all the way along.

Nowadays the four-piece vest suit in a boy's wardrobe is as necessary as pretty girls for a party.

This season we are showing Silver Greys, Hyland Fawns, London Lavenders, Powder Blues, and all the new shades and weaves.

The knickers are full, like those worn by the smart English golfers. The remainder of the suit is styled in accord with the prevailing models.

OUR "Cravenette" Processed SUITS

Shed water. But that's not all—the goods are treated in a special way that makes them look better and wear longer.

Special tests conducted by Columbia University proved this. And they certainly have style!

So come in, Mr. Man, we've got just the Suit you want and that Mother will approve of.

The Londoner inhales on a day of heavy smoke fog about 500,000,000,000 particles of dirt, which placed end to end would form a line about 250 miles long, according to experiments conducted by the British meteorological bureau. From 20,000 to 50,000 particles are present in each cubic centimeter of London air. Only when considered in the man are these particles of foreign matter in the atmosphere likely to excite alarm. They are very minute. It requires about 10,000 of them a cubic centimeter to make a milligram of dirt in a cubic meter. The dust particles are counted by a device known as the jet dust counter, which has been put in use at the meteorological offices of the principal world capitals. By this device 50 cubic centimeters of air is pushed rapidly through a slit and the dust is deposited on a cover glass of small cross section to be examined microscopically.

Miners' Gas Masks.

Danger of mine deaths through smothering by poisonous gases is being reduced in the Illinois coal fields by equipping the workers with "self-rescuers," tested and approved by the bureau of mines. They are designed to give the wearer half an hour or more after the gas surrounds him before he is overcome, and consist of a pinch clamp for the nostrils attached to a small can with a mouthpiece. The device is worn in the pocket or on the belt and is inclosed in a soft brass case that may be ripped open by hand. When the fumes arise the breathing apparatus is quickly adjusted and, by inhaling and exhaling through the mouth into the can miner is protected from the poiso at least half an hour and has a ch to seek escape.

Scientific Sherlock.

The post office department was faced with a mystery in the continual rifling of registered letters in the southwest. The theft was narrowed down to one of six post offices, but the question as to which one was hard to solve. A few weeks later an inspector took one of the letters that had been rifled and resealed, held it to his nose and calmly announced that the thief would be taken within a week. He was. The inspector had prepared six lots of mucilage, each ... a different perfume. This was distributed among the six offices under suspicion. The thief used the perfumed mucilage to re-seal the letter and gave away the location of the office. The rest was easy.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Cars crashed on the Brooklyn highway near the Bigelow road in the vicinity of Hampton hill, Thursday morning. Neither William G. Walsh of Providence nor Toni Postemsky of Hampton, drivers of the machines was injured in the crash. Mr. Walsh was driving a coach and Mr. Postemsky a light touring car. Officer Stremens from the local barracks investigated the accident. The cars were damaged considerably.

Incident to the change in time of passenger trains on the New Haven road, the mails will close an hour earlier than they have been closing, beginning next week. Postmaster E. H. Mosch made this announcement Thursday, and will cause to be posted in the lobby of the office a schedule showing exactly when each mail will be closed.

Attorney Louis A. Wolzard, collector of personal taxes, gave warning Thursday that he will turn over to Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill the names of all persons who have not paid such taxes by Saturday of this week. These taxes are now overdue. Despite the fact that scores of prosecutions were carried out in the town court a few months ago for such delinquency, there are about 200 persons again in arrears. This situation will not be permitted to endure. Attorney Wolzard intends to do exactly what he says, so those who do not pay this week will have their inning in court, where the expense is about five times what the tax is in each individual case.

Burdette C. Hopkins is the Killingly chairman in the organization that will have charge in the annual finance campaign of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. Harry Richardson, of Moosup, is the general chairman. Solicitors in each town will aid the chairmen in making the campaign a success. The task this year involves the raising of $4,600. for the maintenance of county Y. M. C. A. work.

Thursday morning at her home in Foster the death of Mrs. Edna Wells, 70, occurred. Mrs. Wells was the widow of Benjamin E. Wells and had lived her life in Foster, at Hopkins Mills. She was a daughter of Nathaniel T. and Elisa Hopkins Hopkins. Mrs. Wells leaves two sons, Alderbert and Wilson, with whom she made her home, and a brother, Elmer Hopkins, also of Hopkins Mills.

The death of Miss Eva S. Hopkins, 53, occurred at her home in Foster Wednesday. She was a native of Foster, as were her parents and grandparents, and had lived her life there. She was a daughter of Harris O. and Ellen Tucker Hopkins. Miss Hopkins leaves no relatives nearer than cousins, uncles and aunts.

Every minister in Windham county is being requested to arrange some notice or observance of Y. M. C. A. Sunday, May 3. Rev. G. Leon Welles, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Moosup, is chairman of the ministers' co-operating committee of Windham county. The clergymen are being asked to assist on May 3 either by speaking at the morning service of the work of the Y. M. C. A. and its needs in financing such work, or by asking some other Y. M. C. A. speaker to fill the pulpit on that date. It is possible that some members of the Y. boys' groups will speak at some of the services or assist in some other effective manner.

There was a gallery of spectators from this and nearby towns at Hartford Wednesday to hear the debate on the Wheeler bill, so-called, at the state capitol. Of special interest was the fact that the opposition to the adoption of the bill was led from the floor by Speaker Elbert L. Darbie of this town, who urged acceptance of the unfavorable report of the judiciary committee. Because there was no roll call no exact check-up of the Windham county vote is available, but those in close touch with legislators aver that the majority from this county opposed passage of the measure.

A report from Oneco indicates that a deer that became a family pet after it had been nursed back to health following an injury, heard the call of the wild and went back to the woods, carrying a bell that had been strapped about its neck. Now that unappreciative deer is reported to have been seen sitting on a log smoking a cigarette while hundreds of acres of woodland in the neighborhood were on fire. Any one at East Oneco will verify this.

Loud, long and numerous are the complaints against the condition of the torn-up state highway at Plainfield, where a state highway contract has been suspended for months and not yet resumed. The Rocky road to Dublin had nothing in the way of hazards to outpoint that stretch of Plainfield highway.

Plans are nearly complete for the county track and field meet to be held at the Brooklyn fair grounds, Saturday, May 16. This is the third annual meet and all public schools are being invited to send teams to compete. All other amateur athletes of Windham county may also take part. The county Y. M. C. A. organization has supervision of the meet.

As in former years entrants will compete in three different classes, the junior, intermediate and senior. To determine in what class he will be entered, a boy should use the following table:

Multiply the age in months by 1 1-2.
Multiply the height in inches by 4 1-2.
Multiply the weight in pounds by 3.
Add the totals.

If the sum is less than 900 points he may compete in the junior class events, from 900 to 1,000 points qualifies him for the intermediate class and over 1,000 puts him in the senior division.

The events at the meet for junior class boys will be the 50-yard dash, running broad jump, running high jump, baseball throw for distance and 220 yard relay race.

For the intermediate class the events are the 100-yard dash, eight pound shot put, running high jump, running broad jump, and 440 yard relay.

Senior class items are the 100-yard dash, twelve pound shot put, running broad jump, running high, half mile relay race.

Open events—220 yard low hurdles, 220 yard dash, 1 mile run. Boys of any class may compete in these three open events.

He spent the first week following the operation when he suffered a relapse, Mr. Macdonald's constitution enabled him to gain strength steadily and he is confident it will be long until he is in normal health. Mr. Macdonald's wide acquaintance throughout the state and numerous friends will be glad with good wishes for his speedy recovery. He recently in the past few years has been a member of the Putnam Water commissioner of Putnam. Attorney Macdonald, Jr., of this city is one of the most successful of the younger members of the Windham county bar, is assistant judge of the city court, also tax collector for the city of Putnam.

The recovery of Mrs. Carl Eke of Woodstock, after having had her jugular vein almost severed in an automobile accident, is considered a most remarkable one and one of the few instances where such an injury has not proved fatal.

Mr. Eke drove his car into a telephone pole in trying to avoid collision with another automobile. He was not hurt and the damage to the car was but slight. The greater part of the windshield remained intact but one of the broken pieces of glass struck Mrs. Eke in such a way as to cut into the large vein of the neck. She was rendered unconscious and remained so for several hours after the accident and for the same period it was not thought that she could survive her injury.

John J. Whitehead, Jr., returned to New York Tuesday afternoon after spending a few days in this city.

The new postal rates are increasing the revenue at the postoffice, this being one of the few instances where higher charges have no effect on the volume of business.

Miss Frances Obletz is planning a piano recital at the home of Mrs. Silas M. Wheelock. Although but 16, Miss Obletz' remarkable ability as a pianist has attracted the attention of musicians of the city and her recital is looked forward to with great interest. The program she is to play is an indication of the unusual proficiency she has attained, in spite of her youth:

Sonato in C Minor—Op. 27 No. 3, Beethoven; Adagio, Minuet, Presto ligatato; Polonaise in C—Op. 26, Chopin; Etude in G flat, Impromtu in A flat, The Swan, Palmgren; Danse Negre, Scott; Claire de Lune, Debussey; Scherzino from Faschingeschwank Schumann; Carnival from Faschingschwank, Schumann; Hakoczy March, Liszt; Liebestraume in A flat, Listz; Rigoletto Paraphrase, Verdi-Listz.

Eugene Gaumond, 37, who died Monday, had been at the Day Kimball hospital for several weeks, where he was taken when pneumonia developed. The direct cause of death was heart failure. He is survived by his wife. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Wednesday morning. Mr. Gaumond was a driver for several years for Whipple and Gilpatric and was well known in Putnam.

Miss Harriet E. Sabin, 87, also died at her home in Pomfret, April 17. She was born in Pomfret July 29, 1838, and has lived there all her life. Her parents were Horace and Emily Grosvenor Sabin. The funeral was held from her home Tuesday afternoon, with burial in Pomfret cemetery.

Mrs. Malvina Lagranduer, 82, also died at her home on Providence street Saturday, had been blind for a number of years. Funeral services were held Monday at 9 o'clock and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich State Sanatorium held a clinic at the Day Kimball hospital Tuesday.

GEORGE A. HAWKINS DIES AS THE RESULT OF FALL

(Special to the Bulletin.)

Putnam, April 23—George Allen Hawkins, 68, died at the day Kimball hospital at an early hour Thursday morning from septec poisoning following injuries sustained in a fall March 18.

For many years he had been chairman of the board of water commissioners and he was at the pumping station of the department when the accident occurred. A trap door in the floor had been covered temporarily with boards and he had cautioned the workmen and the employes of the pumping station not to step on them. In a moment of forgetfulness he did step he had warned others against, the boards gave and he fell a distance of ten feet. At the Day Kimball hospital it was found that his right arm had been badly broken near the shoulder and the shoulder also crushed.

It was feared for the first few days that he could not recover but he grew stronger and for a time his recovery seemed assured. Then symptoms of septic poisoning appeared. For the past ten days it was known that his case was hopeless.

Mr. Hawkins had lived in Putnam for a quarter of a century. His parents were George A. and Lydia A. Hawkins. He was born at West Gloucester, R. I., August 28, 1856. In his boyhood the family moved to East Putnam, where his father was engaged with the late Augustus Houghton in the mill business. Later they moved to Thompson where the son married Anna C. Thurlor. In 1900 they came to Putnam and Mr. Hawkins became a contracting painter, a business that he following very successfully during his entire residence here.

Prior to twelve years ago he served as a member of the City Council, was chairman of the Highway committee and gave the exacting duties of that office constant and conscientious attention. He was an enthusiastic member of the Masonic fraternity and was unquestionably better versed in the ritualistic knowledge of the order than anyone in Putnam. For twenty-five years he was secretary of Quinebaug lodge, A. F. & A. M., and was holding the office at the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife and their one daughter, Mrs. Rich, wife of Samuel Rich, one of the Representatives from Putnam to the General Assembly.

THE SARRE BASIN HAS VALUABLE COAL DEPOSITS

The President of the Saar has been reappointed.

Just how you write it depends on whether you view the matter from over the French border to the south or over the German border in the north, explains a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. The point is, the bulletin goes on to say, that the official—M. Rault—who holds what has been called "the most difficult administrative position in Europe," and who governs a region containing one of the most valuable coal deposits on the continent, has been continued in office for another year by the Council of the League of Nations.

"The Sarre (Saar) Basin is a sort of consolation prize with a string to it and has lived there all her life. Her awarded to France," continues the bulletin. "When German troops retreated from occupied portions of northern France they systematically and scientifically destroyed the French coal mines. So thoroughly was the job done that in 1919 the French could get from their restored but damaged mines less than 20,000 tons of coal whereas in 1913 the same mines had yielded 28,000,000 tons.

"The diplomats who framed the Peace Treaty set themselves the task of compensating France as best they could for her gutted mines, and decided to replace them with German mines, temporarily, at least. The Sarre mines were the inevitable choice, for the territory in which they are located adjoined the new French frontier (formed by the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine,) and existing railways and canals provided that the mines should be handed over to the ownership of the French government for 15 years, from 1920 to 1935, the German government to compensate any private owners of the mines for the loss of their property. Such an arrangement was possible with little hardship to individuals because practically all the mines were the state property of Prussia and Bavaria.

"The decision to give the mines to France ran into political and economic obstacles. The region could not be left under German control because French property rights could not be assured of protection; and the almost solidly German population and the German property could not fairly be placed under French control. The League of Nations therefore set up a unique entity which is neither annexed territory, an independent state, nor a mandate.

"A region was carved out including not only all mines under operation, but also the entire coal fields. The greater part of the territory lies north and east of the Saar river but includes a narrow strip on the opposite bank. To the south lies Lorraine, to the north the German Rhine provinces (now under Allied occupation.) On the west the Sarre territory does not quite reach Luxemburg: a narrow strip of the Rhine provinces intervenes. The very roughly elliptical territory is about 45 miles in greatest length and 30 miles in greatest breadth, and has an area of something over 750 square miles.

"Over this territory and its 720,000 inhabitants the League set a Governing Commission to consist of one Frenchman, one citizen of the local region, and three non-French and non-German members, the president to be appointed by the League Council. The French member has held the presidency since the commission was created. The commission is directly responsible to the League Council and its acts are reviewed by that body. The region was included in the French customs system, and free trade was granted with Germany until January, 1925. A further complexity in the politico-economic life of the Saarois is that the coal administration (of which the French minister of Public Works is the head) is given the right to maintain schools. Most of the schooling in the region is furnished by the Governing Commission, however.

"The Valley of the Sarre or Saar is fairly wide between Saarbrucken, near where it enters the territory, and Merzig, near where it flows into the Rhine Provinces. It is in this valley that the relatively unimportant agricultural activities of the region are carried on. Wine is the most important of the valley products. On the picturesque hills that rise above the stream are heavy forests which furnish an industry somewhat more important than agriculture. It is as an industrial and mining region, however, that the Saar has come to be known to the world.

"The mines now being worked are concentrated near the eastern end of the basin, especially in the small valleys between Saarbrucken and Neunkirchen, ten miles to the northeast. In this section, too, are many of the industries of the Saar; blast furnaces, metallurgical establishments, machine shops, chemical works, ceramic kilns, and the like. Both mining and industrial activity extend in less concentrated form down the valley and throughout the territory.

"The Saar basin has been politically a sort of twilight zone between France and Germany for centuries. At times it belonged to independent princes, at times to the old Empire, at times to France and the New Germany. Saarbrucken, which may be considered the nucleus of the region, first went to France as a part of Lorraine in 1766. After Waterloo it was taken by the Allies and turned over to Prussia. The region in which Saarlouis is situated, fifteen miles down the valley, became French before 1681. In that year, Louis XIV founded the city of Saarlouis and had his famous military engineer, Vauban, fortify it. The fortifications were torn down in 1889.

"While France has an early territorial claim to the Saar, Germany has a later territorial claim, and an overwhelming claim on the basis of present population. It is this population which is supposed to vote in 1935 to choose whether the present semi-independent regime is to be maintained, or whether the territory is to be merged with Germany or with France. If the vote takes place it is highly probable that the Saar will return to Germany. In that event it is provided by the Peace Treaty that Germany shall rebuy the coal mines from France at a price to be assessed at the time by experts."

REPORTS GREENLAND RICH IN MINERALS

What are described in a Scandinavian report to the American Chemical Society as the world's richest deposits of graphite have been discovered in Greenland.

"An American engineer, J. R. Sweet," says the report sent from Horten, Norway, "has been in Greenland for a whole year on work for the biggest graphite deposits in the world, sufficient for large-scale mining for at least 100 years.

"By [illegible] appropriate methods of refining, the working can be made very profitable, notwithstanding the rather peculiar working conditions. Sweet is of the opinion that Greenland is enormously rich in minerals, and ought to be opened to foreign capital and initiative."

Tides Foretell Quakes

With the discovery that the tides are definitely affected by earthquakes, says Popular Mechanics, scientists declare that close study of abnormal rises and falls may enable them to predict the occurrence of tremors in time to warn people to seek safety before disaster overtakes them. Observers at a weather bureau near Tokio tested the theory, when it was noticed that the tide had been rising the day of a quake, when it had passed the danger point. The morning after the water had receded four feet below the former mark. Three months before the great Japanese earthquake disaster of September 1, 1923, it was later recalled, the tide had also risen to the danger point.

Finding New Power

Although their progress is slow and unspectacular, scientists are making dogged attempts to discover a way to make artificial fuels which will replace the diminishing supplies of coal and oil. The process they seek to perform in their laboratories, according to Popular Mechanics, is the marvelous one that nature uses every day in storing up energy in leaves and plants by converting waste material into wood, etc., under the action of sunlight. Solution of the riddle is being sought in California by Dr. Herman A. Spoehr and a staff of research workers. A year's consumption of coal at the present time represents the accumulation of 400 years, he says.

Sues Entire Village.

Count Friedrich Szechenyi, a Hungarian aristocrat, is bringing legal action against the entire village of Peterhida, in southwestern Hungary. Szechenyi leased a piece of land to the villagers for a rental of one-quarter of a carload of grain a year. The villagers neglected to pay and the count is bringing suit. He has had the legal forms run off on a duplicating machine and will serve each villager.

NORWICH BOYS' WEEK

Today marks the opening of Boys' week, a fixed period during which special efforts will be made to do much for the boys in the way of interesting them in the many things where greater interest should be centered, impressing upon them the value of the various instructions which are provided for them and furnishing the leadership which is of the greatest importance in getting them started and keeping them headed in the right direction.

Boys' week was not instituted for the purpose of providing a good time. There is much more at stake. The aim is educational, with application in several directions, that not temporary but persistent efforts should be made to have the boys who are apprentices for all the responsibilities of future citizenship better able to shoulder and carry on those duties when the time comes.

What is therefore being done in behalf of the boys concerns not solely the individuals but has its bearing upon character, personality and community in the days that come all too soon.

As the twig is bent so is the tree inclined. If the boys can be given the benefit of the proper kind of preparedness in the many lines of endeavor and be bent in the right rather than the wrong direction they will not only be greater assets to the community and better citizens but their accomplishments will be much more worth while.

Much depends upon the guidance a boy gets. Parental responsibility should be shouldered and not shirked, but even more than parents can have a hand in setting the right example and giving the proper encouragement. With a full realization of this Boys' week is open to the possibility of putting in action the rudiments of good training which shall last not only for a period of seven days but throughout the entire year, and through the leadership displayed and the help extended prove an inspiration to many more than those actually reached.

Most commendable preparations for the observance of Boys' week has been made in Norwich, and it is to be sincerely hoped that it will be entered into in the proper spirit and be so fruitful as to reach the goal of most optimistic. It is one of the good causes that deserves general participation.

ENDING THE WHEELER BILL

Was the Wheeler bill for the purpose of sounding public sentiment of Connecticut? Was the point reached where certain of those concerned with the task of enforcement recognized the need of finding out what the public would stand in the way of a drastic law by which real enforcement could in their opinion be obtained?

If that was the case there seems to be no question but what the answer has been received through the action of the general assembly in decisively defeating the Wheeler enforcement law.

There has been more than the wet and dry question involved, however. It has been more than the enforcement of a law which already exists. Regardless of what the feeling may be concerning these matters there has been a strong belief, as evidenced by the vote, that the origin of the law, coming as it did from the judiciary was encroaching upon the legislative branch of the state government. It meant the creation by the court and prosecutors of laws which they would be obliged to administer, and the creation and administration of the laws undertakes more than is expected of the judiciary.

Likewise there was a strong feeling that the law as drawn was so drastic that it could not be enforced, that it would not have the backing of public sentiment, and a law which lacks that might as well not exist.

The Wheeler bill was so decisively opposed of that there is no chance of its revival. It is not only dead, but buried. Whether anything will be done in the way of strengthening recognized weak points in the present laws which had to do with enforcement remains to be seen.

According to the test made there was strong opposition to the drastic Wheeler bill and to the manner in which it originated, and not all the opposition came from the "wets."

THE LOST JAP FREIGHTER

In these days when so many things are being accomplished through progress in science, it is unusual for reports to tell of one steamship standing by and witnessing the sinking of another with the loss of all on board without making a heroic effort to save some of the lives. The radio made the summoning of aid possible, but there was lacking the means of reaching the doomed crew of the Japanese steamer before the vessel foundered.

On the arrival of the Homeric which answered the call for assistance but was unable to accomplish anything, because of the high seas running, criticism was offered by certain of the passengers because of the feeling that a greater effort should have been made to reach those aboard. Opinions differ as to whether any persons were actually seen, but the criticisms seem to have been invariably offered by landsmen, those who have, perhaps, little idea of what a small boat will stand under such conditions and who were apparently willing that others should have taken the big risk of losing their lives with slight prospect of saving anyone, but displaying no disposition to make any such sacrifice themselves.

Under the conditions, which the reports agree upon, it seems only fair to believe that those who are acquainted with the treacherous conditions of the sea in a storm understood the situation much better than did some of the passengers. It cannot be believed that those who sail the seas would have been coldblooded enough to have refused aid had there been an even chance of saving life. There's no telling when they might be in the same predicament. The chance of a small boat in that storm seems to have been well indicated by the fact that all those on the freighter had been smashed.

Perhaps those who criticized were like so many of those who, when watching a fire and the efforts of the firemen, understand so much better than the firemen how the firefighting ought to be done.

THE CLARK COLLECTION

One would hardly think of balking at a three million dollar gift and yet it can be realized that it might be given under such conditions and restrictions that it would be impossible or inadvisable to accept it.

Such seems to be the situation surrounding the art treasures of the late W. A. Clark which he left by will to the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York city, and which institution through unanimous vote of its directors has recently declined to accept it.

Former Senator Clark had not consulted with the institution concerning his proposed gift. He had not undertaken to learn whether he could expect it would be received, but had apparently taken that for granted. He hadn't foreseen the necessity of considering restrictions concerning such gifts. Instead, he proceeded to throw restrictions about it without thinking that it might be against the policy and established rules of the institution. This he did by requiring that the collection should be held intact and displayed in no other way.

That would have meant a fine acquisition to the museum but it would have made it necessary for the directors to have accepted similar restrictions regarding all future gifts, resulting in a museum made up of collections of various individuals rather than a grouping of great artists and great paintings for the best general effect.

The Metropolitan could not afford to accept the obligations. Whether the Corcoran gallery in Washington is willing to accept them will determine whether New York actually loses the expensive collection.

BULGARIA'S TROUBLES

The conditions which have been revealed in Sofia indicate the state of affairs in Bulgaria. From the character of reports it would appear that the [illegible] did not originate at [illegible] stimulated by outside [illegible] of communism.

Bulgaria has gone through tragedies before. The [illegible] is by no means a new one, and there is nothing to indicate that what seems to be a suppression of the trouble for the time being is going to be permanent.

On the other hand it would seem as if there were possibilities that it might be the beginning of a new Balkan outbreak. It doesn't take [illegible] that region and there are times when it seems as if the powers are not satisfied unless a war is kept on the simmering up in a threatening manner.

Reports coming from Vienna carry the [illegible] Bulgarians are ascribing [illegible] difficulties to the [illegible] of Jugoslavia, which is given the credit of backing the revolutionary organizing the attacks by the communists. Suspicion develops in that region at the slightest pretext, and all of the countries are posting their troops along the borders there are developments quite in keeping with the inclinations of the people of the neighborhood.

It is much easier to throw the firebrand of war in the Balkans than it is to extinguish it. Sofia has displayed a serious situation. Possibly it can be controlled and the wreckers be suppressed, but neighborhood troubles and accusations are not always put down as effectively or as easily.

FROM THE ORIENT

"One of the nicest things I ever received," said Loretta, "is that lovely mah jong set that Cousin Harry sent me from China. I have been enjoying not only the beautiful set itself, but the oriental smell of it and all the quaint wrappings and everything. Why, even the postmark on the outside is fascinating. I've had so few things ever sent to me from foreign countries and never anything from the orient. I don't know exactly what the charm is, but there certainly is one in everything that comes from places we know so little of as China and Japan."

"A lot of other places would be more charming, perhaps, if we knew less about them," declared her brother cynically.

"Well, anyhow," continued Loretta, "I've just received a letter from Cousin Harry that has been delayed. He evidently meant to have me get it before Christmas, as he says he hopes we will have a pleasant day."

"You can't tell about that," chuckled her brother. "The year I forgot to send Aunt Martha a gift until New Year's I bought something, wrapped it up in the proper holiday fashion and stuck stickers on it begging her not to open it before Christmas. When she acknowledged it she said she knew I'd be sorry to hear that it had taken so long to reach her, but that the mails were unusually slow that year."

"Maybe she wasn't so dull as you think," laughed Loretta, "for she may have meant males and have been intimating that you yourself were slow."

"You certainly are cruel," groaned her brother. "How can you upset my peace of mind after all this time? Now I shan't be able to sleep. I worry so about Aunt Martha's duplicity."

"You might better worry about your own," said Loretta severely. "But I was telling you about the letter I had from Cousin Harry. I'd hand it over to you to read, but I've lent it to Minnie, whom I met on the bus. She's known him always, and as I was reading the letter when she got on and sat by me I told her to take it home and read it to the family. It was mostly about the mah jong set, telling what a time he had getting it and sending it off to me.

"He bought it in Peking and put it in his suitcase to bring to me in the summer when his firm ordered him home. He had a great time keeping it from getting lost when some of his belongings went astray and when one of the stewards stole it from his stateroom he had a worse time proving his property and getting it back. He said he was so determined he'd get that set to me safely that he almost slept with it under his pillow."

"While he was about it he might as well have told a good one," said her brother. "Why couldn't he have got you all wrought up about having a duel with a half-dozen Chinamen, one at a time or all at once, or have told how he was held a prisoner in a josshouse for forty-eight hours until rescued by a charming lady?"

"You may laugh all you please," said Loretta. "You are just cross because it wasn't sent to you.

"That mah jong set was bought in Peking just as he said, for it was wrapped in paper from the store and there's a lot of Chinese printed on the bottom of the box." Loretta went on. "Anyway, he carried it to America and had it with him in Seattle. He went to the branch office of the firm to report before starting for Chicago and they gave him a telegram ordering him right back to Peking to take the place of somebody who had resigned. He had to hurry to catch the steamer that was about to leave and he didn't have time to send off the mah jong set, which went back with him."

"What a tale of woe!" cried her brother. "I wonder how many thieves he met going back."

"He doesn't say," said Loretta. "But the point is this. A few minutes ago I turned over the box containing the set and there, right above the funny Chinese characters, I found the words, 'Made in America'!"—Exchange.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

NAPOLEON, CROATS, AND APARTMENTS

The oft-told story of a conservative city which mistook letter carriers in their new gray uniforms for Confederate soldiers was outdone in Belgrade recently when a coterie of Croatians marched into Belgrade wearing the uniforms of Napoleon's bodyguard.

"The visitors were the town guard of Varasd, a community 62 miles northeast of Agram," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "The town has been proud of its guard of Burghers for many centuries. Napoleon, when he passed through Varasd was so struck by their appearance that he bestowed upon them the privilege of wearing the uniforms of the officers of his personal escort.

"Even the Austrians, the delegation explained, had not interfered with this privilege but now some efficiency bureau of the new Yugoslav government objected to such a small town having its own guard and had ordered the guard, uniforms and all, abolished. So the Burghers put on their resplendent regalia and went up to see King Alexander about it.

"Dispatches tell of the happy ending—how the King restored their rights and presented to each man a silver cigarette case.

"And the grateful Burghers went home to a region where customs, and homes, and traces of history far back of Napoleon's time, survive.

"The Croatian landscape, to be located on an up-to-date map as northwest Yugoslavia, still discloses watch towers with their wooden clappers and beacon lights—the frontier radio alarm of the days when the Turks were always coming. One still sees in rural regions ruins of the great communal 'apartments' of the Middle Ages—houses where the state bedroom was set aside for a 'House Father,' elected each year, and where rambling tiers of rooms were added as children grew up and married.

"These house communities are remnants of the Military Frontier civilization—a civilization that grew out of the area, nearly as extensive as that of Massachusetts, which was set aside and colonized as a protection from Islam raids. It was founded in the sixteenth century, reorganized by Maria Theresa, and survived, in a modified form, until 1872.

"The Military Frontier may have originated with the Uskoks, who figure both in Serbian and Croatian history. The Uskoks, or refugees, were driven by the Turks from Bosnia and Herzegovina and, after various movements, established themselves at Zengg, along the coast of Croatia. Emperor Ferdinand offered them a recompense to stay there and aid in holding back the Moslems.

"Various communities of this kind were subsidized by the government on condition that every man between 18 and 60 should be on call at any time for military duties. As in early American communities which feared Indian raids each of the groups built sturdy stockades. Their lands were held and cultivated in common, and their production was distributed equally among all families. Many of the large communal houses had a common kitchen, serving several hundred persons. It was outside these houses that torches were placed on high poles, so that the news of danger literally flew like fire when invasion threatened.

"Life was dangerous then in Croatia and it is hard today, but the women must have had 'sewing circles' in those old communal houses. For the Croatian peasants have evolved a costume which is considered one of the most colorful and beautiful in all Europe. They have only coarse cloth, and coarser thread, which by infinite stitching they combine into beautiful designs and color combinations.

"This love of design finds expression also in the old houses that dot the dry, hilly Croatian landscape, corrugated by ranges of the Karst Mountains. Coal is mined, and thousands of the Croats who emigrated to America work in the coal mines of Western Pennsylvania.

"The land is more fertile around Agram (or Zagreb) and Varasd (which also goes by the names of Verazdin and Warazdin.) The latter town has about 12,000 people, who live by their trade in timber, fruit, wine, tobacco and pottery. Then miles south of Varasd are the sulphur baths of Constantine-Bad—baths which the Romans knew."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Emile Vandervelde, summoned by the King to form a ministry in Belgium, is a former minister of justice and for many years the acknowledged leader of the Belgian Socialist party. For more than a quarter of a century he has sat in parliament, taking a conspicuous part in all its discussions. A lawyer by profession, he has held a high place at the Brussels bar, his professional ability being further evidenced by the fact that he has held a professorship in the university law school. In addition to his professional and political activities M. Vandervelde has been a frequent contributor to the leading Socialist papers of London, Berlin, Paris, Milan, and other centres. In 1918 he served as one of the three Belgian representatives at the Paris Peace Conference. Although, as a Socialist, M. Vandervelde advocates the repartition of wealth, his own personal fortune is said to be very large.

Whistler's Disputes Deterred Recognition

Brilliant in speech and of querulous disposition, James A. McN. Whistler attracted so much attention in his disputes that his merit as an artist did not win recognition until late in life.

Born at Lowell, Mass., he was taken to Stonington, Conn., then Springfield, Mass., and at seven to St. Petersburg, Russia, where his father, a major in the United States army and a distinguished engineer, was commissioned by the Czar to build a railroad. While there the boy attended the St. Petersburg Art Academy. Following the death of his father he was taken to Pomfret, Conn.

After attending preparatory school, he started to follow in his father's footsteps by entering West Point, at 17, but failed in all of his studies save drawing and was dismissed from the academy at the end of three years. Next in the United States Coast Survey, he was dismissed for drawing caricatures.

Going to Paris to study at 24, he developed an individuality, but for six years his paintings were refused at the Salon; then his Little White Girl won success in the Salon des Refuses. He also won fame as an etcher.

Having gone to London at 25, his disputes there with artists and critics overshadowed his paintings. Of his Nocturne, Ruskin wrote, "I have seen and heard much of cockney impudence before now; but never expected to have a coxcomb ask 200 guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face." Whistler sued Ruskin for libel and was awarded a farthing.

Whistler wrote Ten o'Clock, giving his artistic theories and The Gentle Art of Making Enemies that brought his disputes more before the public. And the withholding of recognition kept him poor in purse.

Adoring his mother, he cared tenderly for her and his portrait of the Artist's Mother won praise. At 51 he was elected to the Royal Society of British Artists. A year later he married happily and at 55 received honors for many countries. And at the time of his death he was recognized as one of the great painters of the nineteenth century.

THE BEST THAT I CAN

"I cannot do much," said a little star,
"To make the dark world bright!
My silvery beams cannot struggle far
Through the folding gloom of night!
But I'm only part of God's great plan,
And I'll cheerfully do the best that I can!"

"What is the use," said a fleecy cloud,
"Of those few drops that I hold?
They will hardly bend the lily proud,
Though caught in her cup of gold!
Yet I am part of God's great plan,
So my treasures I'll give as well as I can."

A child went merrily forth to play,
But a thought, like a silver thread,
Kept winding in and our all day,
Through the happy golden head—
Mother said, "Darling, do all you can,
For you are a part of God's great plan!"

She knew no more than the glancing star,
Nor the cloud with its chalice full,
How, why, and far what, all strange things were!
She was only a child at school!
But thought: "It is part of God's great plan
That even I should do all that I can!"

So she helped a younger child along
When the road was rough to the feet,
And she sang from her heart a little song
That we all thought passing sweet;
And her father, a weary, toil-worn man,
Said, "I, too, will do the best that I can."

Our best! Ah, children! the best of us
Must hide our faces away,
When the Lord of the vineyard comes to see
At our task, at the close of day!
But for strength from above—'tis the Master's plan—
We'll pray, and we'll do the best that we can.

CHILD TRAINING

TRANSFERRING ATTENTION

Minerva Hunter

"Frederick is a terror," young Mrs. Allen told her mother. "I cannot understand the change in him. From tiny babyhood he was always so sweet and friendly with strangers." He attracted attention everywhere we went and our walks in the park brought numerous compliments. Now when we go walking and any one stops to say something about the twins he kicks their carriage and screams at the top of his voice. Every airing ends in punishing him. What can be the matter?"

"Told told what is the matter without realizing it," her mother laughed. "Frederick wants the attention he used to get and now the twins get."

"That must be the trouble, but how am I to help it? Twins are sure to attract attention."

"The help should be in making Frederick able to adjust himself to the new conditions. "We must try to help him."

When Frederick woke up from his nap he was delighted to find his grandmother visiting him. It was her first visit since the arrival of the twins. Frederick embraced her, collected his Christmas toys for her inspection, got into her lap and talked to her, but not once did he mention the babies. When he went into the yard to find his dog, Mrs. Allen confided to her mother that she feared Frederick really disliked his little brothers.

"We must make him proud of them," the grandmother answered.

A little later when one of the babies woke up and cried Frederick could no longer keep their presence a secret. "Twin babies: two of 'em," he told his grandmother.

"Mother's."

"And yours, your own little brothers."

Frederick looked indifferent.

"Howard Greep across the street has only one brother," grandmother reasoned, "but you have two. Do you know any one else who has twin brothers?"

"No." Frederick acknowledged after thinking.

"You are fortunate to be the only boy on the street to have twin brothers."

Frederick smiled.

"Other boys have horns and drums and blocks and sleds, but twin brothers are wonderful!"

"Come look at 'em," Frederick invited.

Grandmother went. Not once did she mention that she had hugged and admired them while Freederick took his nap. As she stood and looked at them now, her hugs were for Frederick. "Aren't you glad you have twin brothers all your own?" she asked.

The idea took effect. Next time the mother when walking with her tria Frederick announced, "I'll show the babies. They are my twin brothers."

The mother wisely consented. Now Frederick is so interested in exhibiting the charms of his two brothers that he hardly notices the words and looks of admiration directed toward himself.

Stories That Recall Others

An Uncertain Feeling.

Dorothy, who has just returned from a sea trip, was asked by a friend how she enjoyed it and whether she was sea sick.

"The trip was very interesting but I was so sick all the way over that one minute I was afraid I would die and the next minute I was afraid I wouldn't," replied Dorothy.

More Ways Than One.

Bobby was helping mother serve at her bridge club. He brought in two glasses for the lemonade that were not as clean as they might have been.

"Why, dear, those are not the glasses mother wanted. Those aren't clean. Don't you see?"

"Mother, I should have filled them with lemonade before I brought them in, shouldn't I?" replied Bobby, in an innocent tone.

NEW BUSY BEE THEORY
BOON TO LAZY MAN

All the lazy men of the world ought to unite and do something tiptop for Frank Balfour Browne, a lecturer of the Royal Institution of Great Britain. Mr. Browne has done them a distinct service by advancing the claim that the busy bee is not busy because he is an industrious chap, but is busy because he cannot help it. Nature made him that way, and he is simply obeying the impulses that nature made inherent to him.

What a sweet piece of news for the lazy man! No more can outside scorn touch him—he is armored. He is not slothful because of any lack of ambition, but merely because nature fashioned him in that mold.

Nor can the busy bee be linked to him by any scheme of comparison. Their orbits are as wide apart as the poles. For one thing, Mr. Browne sets down the bee as "so awfully stupid." No lazy man will admit that he is stupid. He'll even spend energy to deny it. The bee won't bother. He'll just go on industriously making honey as though no scientist had ever bothered to study him and assassinate his character.—Jersey City Journal.

Puddings Explode.

Explosions of plum puddings in several Pottsville, Pa., homes were reported to city officials. In several cases women who were preparing for Christmas were much alarmed, pans and puddings went bang against ceilings. Investigation showed that the explosions were due to steam expansion in the puddings after being dished. Puncturing the top of the pudding with a fork will prevent such occurrences, officials declared.

An egotist is a man who thinks that the world thinks as much of him as he does of himself.

Miss Pasnik has been one of the most efficient members of the freshman staff and promises to become a writer. This year she has been acting as Connecticut college reporter for the Norwich Bulletin.

Miss Hazel Pendleton of New London, a sophomore, was elected president of the College Press board. This is the first time in the history of the college that a sophomore has been elected to the highest office, Miss Pendleton showed her ability as a correspondence when she first entered Connecticut college by writing for some of the larger western papers and also acting as secretary-treasurer of the board for the year.

Miss Minnie Watchinsky, also of New London, after two years' experience as newspaper correspondent and acting librarian of the board, has been elected to the office of secretary-treasurer.

Don't keep a good movement on hand put it on foot immediately.

SPORTSMEN OF NORWICH ENJOY BANQUET AND SPEAKER GUESTS

The second annual banquet of the Norwich Fish and Game Association Thursday evening at Odd Fellows hall brought together over 125 good sportsmen and lovers of the out door life, with two of the best known men in the state in the line of sport as special guests. These were Senator Frederick H. Wolcott, chairman of the state fish and game commission, and superintendent John W. Titcomb. Governor Trumbull, who is an ardent sportsman and was expected to be present, was not able to attend.

The men were seated at 7:30, Swann's orchestra furnishing a peppy musical programme during the banquet hour and J. E. Caron acting as song leader. President Arthur E. Story called upon the assemblage to sing a verse of America after which an excellent chicken pie supper was served by the committee of Hope Rebekah lodge, No. 21. The menu was as follows:

Grape Fruit Maraschino
Clam Chowder Rolls
Chicken Pie
Mashed Potatoes Mashed Turnips
Green Peas Cranberry Sauce
Apple Pie a la Mode
Coffee Cigars

In opening the speaking programme, President Story referred to the pleasing condition of the local association with a large active membership and a good balance in the treasury.

He introduced Senator Wolcott, who he said is president of the American Game Protection Association, and has done much officially as well as privately towards the conservation of game in sanctuaries.

Senator Wolcott was greeted with loud applause as he rose to speak. He remarked upon the genuine pleasure it gave him to meet such a group of sportsmen and went on to speak of Governor Trumbull, of whom he said he had never worked with a man more genuine, more hard headed in financial matters affecting the state, nor possessing more common sense, and he felt the state was fortunate in having John Trumbull in the governor's chair at the present time.

Senator Wolcott went on to speak of the growth in the expense of conducting government, which he said was felt in Connecticut, 25 millions for state expenses, 50 million for town expenses and 60 million for federal expenses. This has reached such a size that the legislators at Hartford are working night and day to see where economy can be effected and that no increase in expenses be allowed. We have reached the limit and there must be no increase, and Connecticut will never agree to a personal income tax to raise more money.

He went on to speak of the way our predecessors had neglected to protect fish and game with the result that the state was practically shot out and fished out. It is just beginning to come back under the measures that have been put into effect in the last four years under Superintendent Titcomb. Now $200,000 is needed for the purchase of lands to establish game sanctuaries and for reforestation and $50,000 to secure what are called state-acquired streams which will be stocked by the state and thrown open for public fishing. When we have reforested our uplands and repopulated our streams they should be kept for our Connecticut families and we will be proud we had a part in it.

Senator Wolcott drew a significant round of applause when he digressed from his subject for a moment with the remark that "when the judiciary attempts to pry into the legislative and give the right to enter our houses or stop us on highways for any reason, that thing has got to be stopped. And it was stopped."

A baritone solo, One More Day, was very effectively sung by George Hollingsworth for which he gave as an encore, Heart of Gold. Hugh Kinder was accompanist.

Superintendent Titcomb was the next speaker, describing the plan to get state-acquired streams which would be stocked with legal length trout. The intent of the commission, he said, was to provide places where the fisherman would know he wouldn't be ordered off and where he would catch fish. The commission's work is for the every day fellow, who can't take a vacation in Maine or Canada.

He said that reforestation is essential for the preservation of the streams and advised that a growth of trees be kept along the border of streams to keep the water cool and to provide food for the trout. He spoke of the distribution of many million smelt from the Noank and Westport hatcheries and of the distribution of perch fry in every pond in this county and around the state this spring. He was applauded when he suggested that there ought to be a 12-inch limit on bass.

In response to a question as to what was being done about game, he said that the commission had contracted for 6,000 pheasant for distribution this season. As to grouse he said that about all the state could do was in the line of protection and they were not buying any Hungarian partridges. He advised the planting or sowing seed of food bearing shrubs for grouse.

Secretary W. W. Ives of the Norwich Association, to whose efforts the success of the banquet was largely due, was the last speaker addressing the two guests and assuring them that the membership of the Norwich association did not include fish-hogs or game-hogs but they were all good sportsmen, who were interested in the conservation of game.

In closing his remarks Mr. Ives presented to Senator Wolcott and Superintendent Titcomb two Thermos bottles which had been generously donated by the American Thermos Bottle Co., of this city.

A vote of thanks to the speakers was passed on motion of Senator Lee Roy Robbins, and the flowers that had decorated the speakers' table were presented to Senator Wolcott, Superintendent Titcomb and President Story to take home to their wives.

A verse of the Star Spangled Banner closed the meeting.

Capacity houses at the Breed theatre greeted the showing of the motion pictures Thursday under the auspices of Mercier Assembly, No. 12, Catholic Ladies of Columbus, and a good sum of money was realized for the assembly for use of its charitable work in this city.

The pictures were shown in the afternoon and evening and were released through the Catholic Art association, both having a strong religious appeal, the stories being exceptionally well presented, holding the audience throughout.

The feature picture was entiled The Path of Love, picturing a man selling his soul for greed, thus costing him the loss of his wife and daughter. Years later a Sister appears before him and tells him the story of the life of St. Francis of Assisi. This beautiful story pictured in full gave a complete picturization of the sacrifice made by St. Francis for the God he loved and as the story was told, the heart of the man was touched and he found that he had won nothing through the greed for worldly goods. The picture ended with an appeal as the man was found that the young Sister telling him the story was his long lost daughter. He was forgiven and the family were united once again.

The second picture, The Sin That Was His, was a story of a gambler and self-professed atheist who had started to study for the priesthood, then gone astray. Following the death of a pal he left for his friend's home to bring gold to his mother. Upon arriving there he found the brother and mother were vile people and a fight starts, during which the son is shot and killed by the mother, who immediately blames the gambler.

Leaving the house the gambler sees a young priest struck down by a falling tree and he conceives the terrible plan of taking the priest's place in the village, as the priest was arriving only at that moment and was not known to the people. For some time he carries out his plan and wins the love of the people by his acts of charity. The young priest suffers a loss of memory because of the blow and the young gambler plans to have him tried for murder, thus escaping himself. Through his good work he himself becomes a religious man once again and when the young priest is condemned to death and the bishop arrives in the village, he admits the part he had been playing.

The story ends after the mother of his friend admits before her death that she had killed her son. No longer an atheist, but a believer and worker for God and His kingdom, the young man asks pardon for his acts and is informed by the bishop that his sin has not been against the church but was a matter between himself and God.

The pictures were impressive and their moral lessons were most effective, deeply touching the audience as the stories were unfolded before their eyes.

The success of the affair was due to the general committee of the assembly and the assistance rendered by the management of the Breed theatre, Boy Scouts of America, the Catholic clergy, many Norwich stores and the orchestra of the theatre, all of which was deeply appreciated by those in charge.

SOLD LIQUOR, NOT GAS, AT BOLTON STATION

In the Tolland County superior court at Rockville this week, in the case of Frank Blanchard of Manchester, charged with violation of the liquor laws, accused of selling liquor with the "Bolton Rum Gang," a plea of guilty was entered. Blanchard, asked a jury trial at the previous sitting of the court when he was put to plea. As Blanchard is sick as the result of service in the World War, State's Attorney Thomas F. Noone asked for the imposition of a jail sentence which he agreed to have suspended. Judge Wolfe asked Blanchard what money he had in his possession. When he replied that he had $50, the court imposed a fine of this amount and remitted the costs, Blanchard was charged with selling liquor at a gasoline station he conducted in Bolton, September 15, 1924, when the sale was made to John Smith of Manchester.

Anthony Monthany, 24, who was bound over from the Mansfield court by Justice of Peace Alexander Telfer April 16 for criminal abuse of a minor female child, was in court. He has been in jail since last week Thursday. His arrest followed the complaint of George W. Williams of the Connecticut Humane Society, who fixed bonds at $1500. Public Defender Robert H. Fisk of Hartford was appointed his counsel and a plea of not guilty was entered. It was charged that he assaulted Nellie Fuller, 15, April 12 last. This girl has since been committed to the Long Lane Farm for Girls at Middletown for an indefinite period. No date has been set for the trial of this case.

In the case of state against Fred Scherwitzsky, 21 and Thomas O'Hara, 19, charged with the theft of Elmer Bartlett's Essex coach from Burke's garage, a change in plea was allowed. They were held in bonds of $7,500 each by the city court. The change in plea followed a long conference between their counsel, State's Attorney Noone and Judge Wolfe. Judge Wolfe warned Scherwitzsky that he was on the verge of being committed to the Wethersfield state prison lot.

ORGANIZE NORWICH COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

Previous to the address by Dr. M. A. Honline at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church Thursday evening, Rev. J. Harlow Graham, speaking for the special committee appointed a week ago spoke on the organizing of the Norwich Council of Religious Education.

Rev. Mr. Graham explained the purpose of this council as five-fold; first, for leadership training; second, study of and recommendations for vacation Bible schools; third, week day religious instruction classes; fourth, church school work; fifth, finance work.

It was proposed that when the council is organized it shall be composed of pastors of all churches, church school superintendents and members of churches which affiliate themselves with the council.

In order to plan for the speedy organization of the Norwich Council of Religious Education it was proposed that pastors and superintendents of church schools be appointed to make plans for a permanent organization and the vote was taken, being unanimous. It is hoped that the council will be organized and be functioning by June 1st of this year and indications are that all Protestant churches of the city will affiliate themselves with the council for the promotion of religious education in Norwich.

NURMI'S "EXORBITANT" EXPENSES ARE QUESTIONED BY CHICAGO MAN

Chicago, April 23—Paavo Nurmi, Finland's master runner of the world, who startled America with his record-breaking on the board tracks, the cinders and traveling the railroads of the nation, is in a position to set a few records in high finance if he succeeds in getting his demands for what his management regards as expenses for racing.

The story back of Nurmi's financial demands, together with those of Willie Ritola, his Finnish running mate, broke today when Kenneth L. Wilson, director of athletics at Drake University, declared he had refused to pay $1,500 for Nurmi and Ritola to engage in races in connection with the Drake Relay carnival at Des Moines next Saturday afternoon.

Wilson characterized their demands as exorbitant and not within the spirit of amateur rules.

The price of Nurmi's appearance at the Drake relays Wilson said, was $1,000 while $500 was demanded for Ritola's appearance.

Wilson said he had been asked to pay Nurmi's expenses from New York to Des Moines and thence to Finland, but that Nurmi was to engage in other races elsewhere before his contemplated return to Europe in June. He also said that the $500 demanded for Ritola was to cover Ritola's expenses from New York to Des Moines and return, but that Ritola was in Chicago, and not in New York when the negotiations were abruptly halted.

Officials of the University of Chicago said they had been requested to pay $1,000 as expenses for Ritola and Nurmi to appear in events in connection with the National Interscholastic Track and Field meet to be held here June 6.

The two Finnish marvels had demanded $500 each as expenses, the University of Chicago officials said, but it was immediately decided to do without their services.

Under the rules of the Amateur Athletic union, athletes competing in amateur competition are allowed $7 a day as traveling expenses; that is, their hotel and other incidental living expenses, in addition to transportation, but in the majority of cases this expense has been increased to approximately $10 a day without protest because of the increased cost of traveling.

Officials of the Central A. A. U., here were unwilling tonight to be quoted on the question of the amounts demanded as expenses for Nurmi and Ritola, but insisted they were still in amateur standing.

Since Nurmi arrived in this country last winter, he has participated in more than a score of indoor races, usually with Ritola as another entrant to the meets.

Ritola and Nurmi are now en route to the Pacific coast to engage in meets there.

NURMI'S FINANCES HANDLED BY NEW YORK OFFICE

Los Angeles, April 23.—The financial end of Paavo Nurmi's track appearances have been handled through the New York office of the Amateur Athletic Union, Hugo Quist, the runner's manager said here tonight in denying Kenneth L. Wilson's charge that the Finn is asking exhorbitant expense money for racing.

If Wilson has any complaint to make, Quist declared in effect, he should take it up with the A. A. U.

"I met Wilson only once," he said. "That was on April 19, in Chicago, and the expenses of Nurmi and Ritola, positively were not discussed between us."

N. Y. U. FROSH-BULKELEY GAME CALLED OFF

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 23.—Formal announcement that Bulkeley would not meet the New York University freshmen nine at New York during the trip planned by the Bulkeley management which was to include three games was made today with the receipt of a letter by Walter J. Barry from the graduate manager at the Gotham institution. However it does not necessarily mean that Bulkeley will abandon the idea of going to the big City and Bulkeley may play at least two games as scheduled. However this arrangement is merely pending and the entire trip may be called off, if additional teams are not secured to meet the Bulkeley nine as planned.

The teams who will definitely appear against the Orange and Black are Fordham College freshmen on May 1 and Morris High on the following day. However the game with Morris High is pending, and if this arrangement falls through, the game with Fordham frosh nine would not warrant the local nine to make a trip to New York to play this game alone, for there is too much expense involved in taking a team to such a long distance as New York is from this city. But preparation which is attending the business of the Bulkeley management in this connection gives an appearance that Bulkeley will make the trip regardless of the number of games which are to be played. Even if the Fordham freshmen is the only team opposed in New York city there is a possibility that the trip will be made.

The letter which was received today reads as follows:

Mr. Walter J. Barry,
Bulkeley School,
New London, Conn.

Dear Mr. Barry: Our baseball coach, William McCarthy, has referred your letter of April 13th to me. I regret very much that there has been some mix-up as to scheduling a game here with our freshmen. However, it was necessary to close our schedule very early and the faculty committee on athletics will not give permission for any additional games.

I am very sorry about the mix-up this year and hope that we may have better luck in arranging a game in the future.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed.) ALBERT B. NIXON,
Graduate Manager.

Judging from the letter, Bulkeley will begin relations with the New York University freshmen on the next calendar year. Just where the mix-up in the schedule was made, whether it was the Bulkeley manager who was responsible or whether it was the freshman manager of New York University, the fact remains that Bulkeley was definitely scheduled to play the Metropolitan nine but an unaccountable mix-up may take a destructing hand to make Bulkeley cancel its New York trip.

WORCESTER EVENS UP SERIES WITH PROFS

Worcester, April 23—Worcester turned the tables on New Haven today and evened the two game series by winning 9 to 5. Timely hitting, coupled with errors, gave the Worcesters victory in the early innings. Goldsmith kept the Profs' hits scattered to good advantage, although they got more than Worcester. Meehan made a home run over the right field fence. Score:

New Haven	1	0	0	1	0	1	0	0	2—5
Worcester	0	4	3	1	1	0	0	0	x—9

Two base hits, Leary, Camarano, Moore, Hauk 2. Three base hits, Kirschstein. Home run, Meehan.

CHAPMAN PREPARING FOR WINDHAM HIGH GAME

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 23.—Chapman Tech is pointing towards its game with Windham High at Willimantic Saturday afternoon, after losing a closely contested game to Deep River High last Saturday. The vacation period of the students which the two coaches of the local high schools, Bulkeley and Chapman Tech have to cater to are off on a week's vacation and several of the players from both nines have taken a day off or more to visit relatives and friends in other cities. This has cut into the practice sessions which were supposed to keep the two teams busy. Chapman Tech did not begin its first practice for the game with the Willimantic High school outfit until this afternoon, being allowed three days as a vacation from all ball efforts.

In the remaining two days of practice left before the game on Saturday Chapman Tech will have to work twice as hard to get the full benefit of a week's workout. Chapman Tech as a nine does not shape up to expectations as far as the defensive and offensive ability of the team goes. There is one consolation in the fact that there are three dependable hurlers on the staff which makes it difficult to select the twirler which is to be given the assignment for a particular game. In both Morris Brown and Zip Gero the Red and Black have two twirlers who are dependable to the core. Another comer who is but a freshman is Allan Dean, no relation to the New York Giant star, Wayland Dean. In this trio the team is well fortified in this respect, but the fielding must improve, for this was the means of the Deep River victory on Saturday.

Courbois who covered short stop in the game Saturday against Deep River will be given his old post in center to patrol for the recovery of Acquillo, regular short stopper from an illness makes the Tech infield look more promising than ever before. There is a merry battle going between Streeter and Montgomery for the right to hold down the keystone sack, and who will win out is a question which will not be decided until the day of the game.

HOME RUNS FEATURE PHOILLIES' WIN OVER DODGERS

Philadelphia, April 23—Home runs were a big factor in giving Philadelphia its second straight victory over Brooklyn today by the score of 10 to 4. Huber, Henline and Mokan all made circuit clouts. The game was another slugging duel with the locals outbatting Brooklyn by 14 to 11. Score:

SIXTEEN QUALIFY AT ACADEMY FOR OLYMPICS

The junior Olympic try-outs for the Boys' Week Olympic games to be held next Wednesday took place at the Academy Campus Wednesday afternoon under the direction of William Gallagher and Coaches Aitken and Brigham. The try-outs were for two classes, those between 12 and 15 years and those between 15 and 18 years. In the older class some exceptionally fast time was made in the 100 yard dash, Jack Hinricks doing the distance in 10 1-4 seconds. Hinricks also excelled in the baseball throw with 81 yards one foot and six inches.

Those to qualify were: 12-15 years class—75 yard dash, D. Courbois and Counihan; 220 yard dash—D. Courbois and L. Foster; running broad jump—A. LaCroix and Counihan; baseball throw—Schwartz and Labinski.

15 to 18 years class—100 yard dash—Hinricks and Armstrong; 880 yard run—Gilman and Baldwin; running broad jump—Greene, 17 ft. 4 in.; Armstrong, 16 ft. 9 1-2 in; baseball throw—Hinricks and Cimikowski.

JUNIOR TWILIGHT BALL LEAGUE TO BE STARTED

It is the intention of the Norwich Playgrounds association to have a Junior Baseball league in Norwich this year and plans are already underway. Earl E. Brigham, baseball coach at the Norwich Free Academy has been appointed director of the league and is now ready to receive applications for admittance to the league. Organized teams of an age under 18, should communicate with Mr. Brigham this week or early next week. A meeting of the teams is to be held at a later date when further plans will be made.

HARD LUCK CAMPS ON TRAIL OF ACADEMY TEAM

Hard luck seems to be the fortune of the Academy squad this season. First Tombari, star shortst. of the club was injured and then Thursday Lloyd Jarvis, star pitching mainstay, developed trouble with his arm that will without doubt keep him out of the game against Bulkeley on Saturday. Jarvis tried to work for a short time yesterday but his arm was so bad that he was forced to give it up. The Academy had been depending on Jarvis to hold the Bulkeley squad of sluggers but in no manner of means is the Academy down-hearted and the slogan is "Beat Bulkeley."

Greene and Woods, the two twirlers who performed so brilliantly against the Pratt High team on Wednesday, will undoubtedly be Coach Brigham's choice for the game on Saturday. Greene with his speed should be capable of holding the Bulkeley hitters and Woods with his slow breaking curves makes an excellent relief man.

Those who saw Morris High play against Bulkeley last Saturday and then saw Pratt against the Academy, say that Morris and Pratt are about equal when it comes to baseball ability. Bulkeley beat Morris 7 to 1, the Academy beat Pratt 18 to 4. This would indicate that the Academy was fully as good as Bulkeley. Both Greene and Woods are far superior to Ader, who pitched for Morris, and Bulkeley did not do such an awful lot against him. The Academy team has a 100 per cent. better defensive team than Morris and the stick-work is also far superior. From any angles of the game it looks as though Bulkeley would have to look sharp to her laurels on Saturday.

JOHNSON WINS GAME AS A PINCH HITTER

Washington, April 23.—Walter Johnson, premier pitcher, starred in another role today when, as a pinch hitter with the bases full in the ninth, he doubled, scoring two runs, enabling Washington to beat the Yankees 2 to 1.

Until the final inning, Herb Pennock had allowed the Senators only six hits. Zachary gave up eight singles before he was relieved by a pinch hitter in the eighth, and Gregg, who succeeded him allowed 3 more. Score:

DEMPSEY SUFFERS SLIGHT ATTACK OF INDIGESTION

New York, April 23.—Indigestion scored a knockout over Jack Dempsey, heavyweight boxing champion, shortly after he arrived here today from a journey across the continent with his wife, formerly Estelle Taylor, motion picture actress. Medical attendance was found unnecessary but the champion went to bed at his hotel it was said.

The attack came after Dempsey had announced that he had not deserted the ring, as had been reported many times. He also explained that the rift "between him and his manager, Jack Kearns, was a myth."

"There are going to be a couple of good heavyweight bouts here," he said, "and one of them may produce a suitable opponent for me. Mr. Kearns still makes the matches and I will not talk about that.

"Mrs. Dempsey and I will rest for a few days before resuming work here on our picture. After that it looks as if we will go to Europe. You know I promised my wife a honeymoon in Europe and I guess I will have to make good on it.

"I feel fine and weigh about 206, and that's not much over my best fighting poundage. I expect to work out every day while here."

The champion let it be known that he and his wife are seriously considering making their permanent home in New York, where they have many friends.

IMPORTANCE OF CARE IN PRUNING TREES

Careful pruning every year has proved to be one of the most important factors in fruit production. There are about five reasons why we need to prune bearing trees; To maintain a well-balanced head; to remove cankers, and dead, interfering and crossing branches; to keep up a new supply of bearing wood; to thin out the head evenly, thus admitting sunlight to every part of the tree; to make possible an easier and better job of spraying, thinning and picking.

Many of the apple trees are too thin. To remedy this situation, the grower should have a mental picture of how the tree ought to look, remembering that every fruit spur must have sunlight. It should be borne in mind, however, that not more than 10 per cent of the top can be removed in one year with out upsetting the balance of the tree. Unless there seems to be a good reason for removing a limb, leave it on. Thin out, rather than head back. Proper pruning now will lessen the number of culls next fall.

Sugar From Artichoke

By a process discovered by experts of the Bureau of Standards, sugar one and a half times as sweet as the cane and beet varieties may be extracted from artichokes. The refining treatment necessary is so simple that it is said, the cost of manufacturing the product can be greatly reduced. Because of the low expense in cultivating the vegetable and its heavy yield when compared to other sugar-bearing plants, it is believed the artichoke may be extensively employed to provide a great part of the future crops. Lack of means of crystallising the extract has been a bar heretofore.

AN ENCOURAGING REPORT BY BETH. STEEL

New York, April 23—The progressive improvement in steel conditions which began late last year was reflected in the quarterly report of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the country's second largest steel producer, which increased its net income more than $1,000,000 in the first three months of this year over the final quarter of 1924.

Out of total net earnings of $10,999,216, which contrasted with $9,550,715, in the preceding quarter, the corporation reported net income of $4,071,516, and a surplus for the period of $3,995,879, which also exceeded that for the fourth quarter of 1924, by more than $1,000,000. The earnings, after all charges and preferred dividends were equivalent to $1.66 on the common shares, indicating an annual return of about $6.64.

Commenting on business conditions, Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem corporation, said he saw no reason to expect a repetition of the depressed conditions that existed during the summer months of 1924 and emphasized the fact that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation was entering the second quarter of 1925 with thirty per cent more orders on its books than a year ago and booking new business at a much greater rate.

"There are no indications," he asserted, "that purchasers are postponing the buying of requirements in expectation of further reduction in prices, on the contrary, it is generally recognized that the present prices for the various steel products do not return a fair profit to the producer. This condition must eventually be corrected by increasing the present margin between selling prices and cost of production. Either prices must go up or producing costs must go down."

Current operations of Bethlehem are averaging seventy per cent of capacity, approximately the same rate that prevailed in the latter part of 1924, said Mr. Grace, through the first quarter of the year the average was 77.5 per cent.

The value of orders on hand at the end of March was $85,921,289, compared with $77,049,619 at the close of last year and $49,846,308 at the end of March 1924.

Directors of the corporation declared the regular quarterly dividends on the 7 and 8 per cent preferred stocks.

ANDERSON IS EXONERATED FROM CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

Robert T. Anderson, who is employed at the Norwich state hospital, is exonerated of criminal negligence in running into Frederick Smith, 69, with his automobile last week. Smith died from his injuries on Apr. 17.

In his finding Coroner Desmond says:

The Moon car was in excellent condition and its brakes and running gear were in good order. Mr. Anderson was an experienced motor vehicle operator and was duly licensed by the motor vehicle department of this state at the time of the accident. This accident appears to be attributed to the sudden starting of Mr. Smith to cross the road when the Moon car was too near him to avoid him. It seems probable that Mr. Smith noticed the said southbound car and started to cross the road just after it had passed him without looking in the opposite direction. Immediately after the accident Mr. Anderson went to the Norwich police station and reported the occurrence.

The evidence indicates that Mr. Anderson was not guilty of any want of due care in connection with this accident.

I am satisfied and find that the death of said Frederick Smith was not caused by the criminal act, omission or negligence of any other person or persons.

SUIT AGAINST DOCTOR ON CLAIM OF NEGLIGENCE

Suit against Dr. John J. Donohue of Montville has been brought in the superior court by Mike Kononchik of Montville, for damages of $4,500 on a claim of negligence in treatment of a broken and lacerated left thumb which Kononchik suffered June 22, 1924. Attachments on a bank account and on real estate in Montville have been made by Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton who served the papers.

The complaint reads:

"The defendant so negligently, carelessly and unskillfully conducted himself in failing to set said broken thumb, in immediately sewing up said lacerated wound without permitting any drainage thereof, in failing to have an X-ray of said thumb, and in attempting to cure said lacerated and broken thumb, as to bring on blood poisoning, and make it necessary to amputate said thumb, which thumb, in consequence of said negligence and carelessness became diseased, infected and rotten.

"By reason of the defendant's negligence and the resulting blood poisoning therefrom, the plaintiff endured great pain and suffering; and his life was in consequence thereof in jeopardy; and he was put to an expense in the sum of $350 for medical, surgical and hospital bills, in an effort to be cured; and in consequence thereof was kept from attending to any business for a period of six months; and has been and still is disabled from attending to his business as a farmer."

3,775 Einstein Books.

Prof. Morris Lecot of the University of Louvain has recently been at work on a bibliography of books about Einstein and relativity. He has found the number to be 3,775, only 435 of which have been published in Germany. England has contributed 1,150, France 690, Italy 215 and Holland 126.

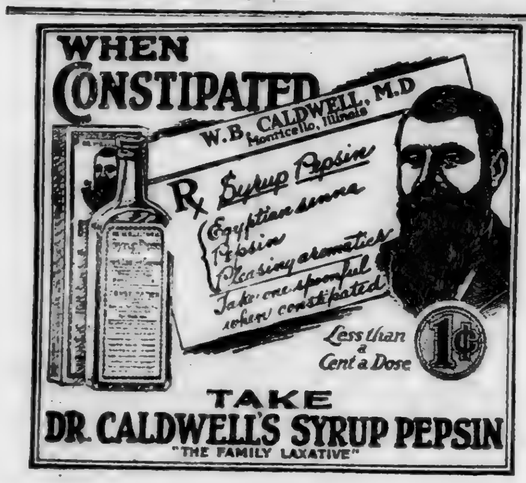
In London, it ran for four consecutive years, being given 1466 times.

The Christies of Hollywood in conjunction with Ideal Films Ltd., of London, are said to have given the farce an elaborate screen production and brought out its hilarious situations to their full worth.

In support of Syd Chaplin in the title role, is an exceptional cast including James E. Page who played in the stage production for twelve years. Phillips Smalley, Eulalie Jensen, Ethel Shannan, Mary Akin, David James, Priscilla Bonner, Jimmie Harrison and Lucien Littlefield. Scott Sidney directed.



ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

A good show gives results, and that is the kind of show you will see at the Broadway the last half of this week. Of the hundreds that witnessed the first show yesterday nothing but the most favorable comments could be heard and these of the best and highest praise.

Here is the program in order of the appearance of the fine bill at Keith acts.

The Solares opened with a high class [illegible] offering which easily won the approval of all.

Gibson and Thorne chose two different [illegible] in which their share of honors in second spot when they offered songs and humorous patter and have a distinctive ability to entertain.

The Boyd Revue of 1925 was awaited by all and proved a revelation. Eight juvenile [illegible] and each one proved to be an outstanding feature. Songs and dances are what they go in for, and we again say that it is the finest juvenile act on the stage today. There is not a dull moment throughout their entire offering.

Bob Walters, the great lover and late feature of the Follies is a monologist. He has a batch of new niftles and many humorous narratives, which went strong.

The Milton Aborn production Betty Lou enacted by three very capable artists got away to a great start and held the interest at all times with a melange of song, dance and comedy. The act is very novel in construction and has considerable charm. It scored tremendously.

Beatrice Conn and Bert Albert in On Their Way To School by Albert Livsey know their book of vaudeville and with comedy, singing, yodelling and dancing, this team provides fifteen minutes of capital fun capped with surprises.

Dunbar and Kitty rounded out a perfectly balanced program. Their unicycling affords his thrill and comedy that will hold you to the last curtain.

The photoplay is After Business Hours which is a story of New York life featuring Elaine Hammerstein and Lou Tellegen.

Next week the Broadway will celebrate its third anniversary at that theater a great show is promised and not only will it be big in respect to entertainment, but big in quantity. Watch this paper for further announcements. You'll be surprised.

Breed Theater

Life on the American prairie viewed from an entirely different angle is the promise held forth by The Prairie Wife. Hugo Ballin's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer which is the feature attraction at the Breed theater today and Saturday.

Many pictures have shown the discovery of the west the crossing of the plains, and the struggles to clear it of savages, but Ballin shows the struggles, no less noble but not as spectacular, in developing the land and reclaiming it from the wilderness, in his picture, The Prairie Wife.

With a great deal of drama, and a vein of comedy knit through it, Ballin has filmed Arthur Stringer's novel of a cultured eastern girl who marries a young engineer and goes to live with him in his prairie home.

Dorothy Devore, noted screen comedienne, plays the title role, with Herbert Rawlinson playing opposite. The supporting cast includes Gibson Gowland, Leslie Stuart, Frances Prim, Erich von Ritzau, Alphonse Martell, Boris Karloff and many others.

The eighth chapter of The Iron Man, the Pathe news and an Educational comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Palace Theatre

It is hard to judge which is the best act at the Palace the last half of this week as they are all headliners and every act made a big hit at last night's performance. The Three Kitamura Japs open the show with a whirlwind juggling act executing some artistic juggling with the feet. The Crossetti Kids follow with songs and dances and receive a warm hand from the audience. It is no dough the greatest juvenile act of its kind seen in Norwich. Next on the bill is George Wirk, billed as one of the neighbors children, he is very funny with the stuff he dishes out and goes very well with the audience. Bert Earl and his eight talented girl musicians went over with a bang, receiving encore after encore. The band renders a number played by a double quartette of banjoes. Their medley of southern melodies received hearty applause. It is no doubt the greatest band yet presented in Norwich. Ward and Bohman two clever comedians took the audience by storm they are real big timers and it certainly does show it the way they put over their act. Their parodies on "Oh How She Lied to Me," kept the audience roaring for fully ten minutes it was a puzzle as to how they were to get off the stage. Clowning is an art formed by each individual act, the fun they do is a riot. You can imagine these Japs singing "Yes We Have No Bananas." To tell you about Delilah and Sampson would not do their clever act is great and the funniest thing you will perhaps ever see on the vaudeville stage. The feature attraction is The Triflers.

Eva Novak, who appears as Beatrice Noyes, the devoted sister of Peter Noyes, the blind professor in B. P. Schulberg's Preferred Picture, "The Triflers," now showing at the Palace Theatre, proves that stage experience is not essential to screen success. Unlike her charming sister, Jane, who was known to theatregoers before she entered motion pictures, Eva has devoted her time to pictures only.

M. P. Villey, a blind professor of the faculty of letters of [illegible], France has invented a stenographic machine which makes [illegible] employment of hand clicks. The inventor claims that the business [illegible] and blind stenographers, [illegible] and with the [illegible] may lack in rapidity [illegible] will make up in strict attention to their work, producing the same result as others. Eighteen months' training is required for proficiency at the new machine.

Half the world is half asleep

You cannot stay the hand of time. But time can steal youth gracefully, and leave a person still attractive. It is the vicious work of constipation that robs a sufferer of beauty, personality, and even of an interest in life itself. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings sure and safe relief from this disease.

"I'm sorry.. but I'm just dead tired"

THERE'S tragedy. Often invited. Seldom able to go. She is out of the things she loves. Day after day that tired, listless feeling forces her into an exile she loathes. Yet there is pleasant, safe, permanent relief from her trouble—for it is constipation which is sapping her strength.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings certain relief from this dread disease. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN travels through the system without changing its fiber. Its bulk sweeps the intestine clean, driving out the poisons of constipation, stimulating the flow of digestive juices. It induces the system to act as nature intended. . . . How different from the action of irritating, habit-forming pills and drugs, which become less than useless unless the dose is increased.

Eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily with milk or cream, sprinkled over cereals, or cooked with cereals; in soups, or made into the many recipes given on the package. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring relief or the grocer returns the purchase price. In chronic cases, eat ALL-BRAN with every meal. Delicious with fruits, baked apple, etc.

KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT BRAN

To be effective, bran fiber must go through the various digestive processes without submitting to any of them. It must pass through the entire alimentary tract without its form being changed.

What happens when a bran food is eaten?

After the saliva has acted upon it, it passes through the stomach and into the intestines, where every part which is not fiber is absorbed.

In ALL-BRAN the quantity of fiber is so great that it furnishes bulk enough to prevent and relieve constipation.

In a part-bran food, the quantity of fiber is so small that there is only a puny amount to do a herculean task.

ALL-BRAN brings sure results. Demand it.

Warning! Be sure to get Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Only ALL-BRAN brings sure results. A part-bran product can, at best, be but partially effective.

Kellogg's is the original and only ALL-BRAN. Doctors recommend it. Accept no other. All grocers sell it. Leading hotels and restaurants serve it.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Fat and Independent

I eat and sleep, and come and go,
Just when I please I'd have you know.
—Jimmy Skunk.

In other words, Jimmy Skunk was independent. He had no one to think about but himself. He slept when he pleased and where he pleased, with no one to ask questions. If he wanted to remain out all night he remained out all night, and didn't have to explain to any one. He rather liked it now that he was used to the fact that Mrs. Jimmy preferred to live by herself in the home she had made under the henhouse. It had upset him a little at first, but only for a short time. Then he began to enjoy his independence.

For a while he wandered about and didn't bother to go home to sleep.

For a while he wandered about and didn't bother to go home to sleep. He simply curled up in the nearest comfortable retreat and slept until he felt hungry again. But as he grew fat he grew lazy and less inclined to wander about. He discovered what Mrs. Jimmy had discovered before him, which was that a very good living was to be obtained around Farmer Brown's dooryard and in his garden. So, because he was too fat and lazy to travel far, he took to sleeping under the barn. Thus he was near Mrs. Jimmy and sometimes joined her when she was looking for food, but at the same time he was wholly independent.

Soon after Jimmy took to sleeping under the barn Farmer Brown's Boy noticed that seldom did he see a Rat or a Mouse in or near the barn, whereas before that the Rats had been very troublesome, too smart to be trapped and growing bolder and bolder. It was some time before he knew that Jimmy was sleeping under the barn and he wondered what had happened to the Rats. Jimmy could have told. Some had helped to make him fat and the rest had moved away. They didn't like his company. You see Jimmy didn't sleep all the time he was under the barn.

Once or twice Jimmy started to look into Mrs. Jimmy's home under the henhouse. But he only just started to and then he hastily begged her pardon and explained that it was all a mistake. It puzzled him a little to have her so cross, for she was pleasant enough when he met her outside.

But after a while he kept away from the henhouse and didn't even wonder why he wasn't wanted there. He was quite satisfied with life. He was fat and this made him good-natured. He was wholly independent, and this also made him good-natured. And never once did it pop into his head that he was wholly selfish.

Of course, any one who thinks of no one but self, who has no cares, is selfish. So Jimmy was selfish. All he thought about was having a good time. A good time means to Jimmy Skunk eating and sleeping. So he grew fat and lazy and was altogether happy. And he didn't even wonder what Mrs. Jimmy was doing or where she was when for several days he would not see her at all.

Perhaps if he hadn't been so near her home he would have felt at least a wee bit lonesome. As it was he didn't feel lonesome even a teeny weeny bit. Anyway, that is what he would have said. Perhaps down inside he was a wee bit lonesome and that is why he had chosen to live near Mrs. Skunk, but he didn't know it.

But Jimmy's independence wasn't to last always. No, sir, it wasn't to last always. So perhaps it was just as well that he made the most of it.

Governor Smith denied an application from the state of Massachusetts for the extradition of Mark L. Gilbert on a charge of larceny. The charge grew out of Gilbert's alleged sale of a cargo of leather, and his causing the ship to be burned at sea so that insurance might be collected.

STATE TREASURER SPEAKS AT CHURCH'S 150TH ANNIVERSARY

State Treasurer Ernest E. Rogers of New London made the principal address Wednesday evening at the 150th anniversary of the founding of the First Baptist church of Stonington. A turkey supper was served and was followed by a programme of exercises, including the address by Mr. Rogers.

A brief sketch of the church history is given as follows:

The members of the church are proud of the maintenance of the church property in Main, Church and Union streets, centrally located in Stonington borough.

Many notable weddings have been held and several of the honored of Stonington have been laid to their rest from this church.

The First Baptist church of Stonington was formed 50 years ago by about 20 or 30 delegatse, although no records appear until ten years later, which embraced the American Revolution. But in 1785 the scattered members renewed the order of church life and in 1781 it had a membership of 32, the services being held in a room near the corner of Grand and Union streets and John Rathbun being the first pastor. He served for four years, being succeeded by Elder Benson from Rhode Island.

In 1784 Valentine Wightman Rathbun was ordained pastor and remained 11 years. The first meeting house was built between 1787 and 1793 on land given by Thomas Robinson. It was built in Puritan style of architecture and was about 40 feet square. The fourth pastor was Elder William Gardner, who gave one year of service, followed by Thomas Spooner, Deacon Elnathan Fellows was in charge of the church for a long period. On May 30, 1810, Elihu Chesebrough was ordained to the pastorship.

A revival, conducted by the Rev. Gideon B. Barry, who continued for three years, added a goodly number to the church roll. In December, 1826, the Rev. Jabez S. Swan accepted the pastorship and remained three years, being followed in 1830 by the Rev. Asa Bunsin, who was in turn followed by the Rev. Jerome S. Anderson of Newark, N. J. During this time a new meeting house was built.

The Rev. A. G. Palmer entered upon his duties April 1, 1843, and continued for nine years, and was followed by the Rev. R. J. Wilson of New Britain. The Rev. A. G. Palmer returned in five years and did good work. He was succeeded by the Rev. H. W. Webber after which the Rev. A. G. Palmer again became pastor and remained over 20 years, until his death.

In 1887 sufficient funds were raised and the present church was built at a cost of $18,000. The corner stone was laid in July 1889, and was completed in July, 1890, and today is one of the most modern church in this vicinity. In 1891, the Rev. Henry Clark of Rochester, N. Y., became pastor and was ordained by the church on Oct. 1.

He served several years and on many occasions has preached in his old pulpit. Succeeding pastors were the Rev. T. D. McClymouth and George B. Marston.

The present pastor is the Rev. Henry M. Thompson, D. D., who came here from Hartford. The church has many societies which are doing good work, mission branches and Sunday school. The old church which for many years was in use, is now owned by the Stonington Community Association, Inc., and does not resemble its former religious appearance.

WILL BROADCAST NEWS OF STATE ROAD CONDITIONS

A plan for the broadcasting of Connecticut highway conditions every week has been arranged between the state highway department and the Boston Motor club. For the benefit of commercial trucking interests, and the pleasure vehicle drivers as well, the department's weekly detour bulletin will be broadcast over Station WNAC of Boston every Friday at 7:45 o'clock.

This arrangement, which will supplement the publication of the same reports in the papers of the state, should prove of service to users of the state's highways now that the road-building season has been started.

With the advent of the annual spring road activity, when heavy repairs, as well as entire new roads, are being carried out, motorists will find this information of value.

The department's practice of issuing regular weekly bulletins showing roads passable and those where heavy repair work and re-construction is being carried out, has gone a long way towards removing the uncertainty that formerly existed when a week-end motor trip was contemplated. With the detailed information that is thus made public through the newspapers, and now by radio, the state is in a position to keep the public informed and to suggest proper routes to be taken to avoid traffic delays.

EARLY SPRING PICNICS ARE DANGER SOURCE

"March winds often blow in April and make of early spring a dangerous season from a standpoint of health," says Dr. J. Allen Patton, of Newark, N. J.

"The official opening of spring means to many the time to leave off heavy winter clothing, under and outer," comments Dr. Patton, who is medical director of the Prudential Insurance company of America. "But the calendar and the thermometer are not always reliable. For it may be past March 21st and the thermometer may say that the temperature is right for a change of wardrobe, and yet a raw biting wind may make such a change inadvisable."

"The old fashioned mother always keeps her eye peeled for any sign of her offspring's emergence from the cocoon of red flannels, the full glory of summer cottons; she not only watched the recesses of the closets for the despised garments but she made open inspections to see that they were still in use. She may have been old fashioned, but she was wise, and she guarded her children from needless exposure."

"Spring brings with it a desire for the open road and the picnic on the ground. But care should be exercised that the lunch is not spread on a damp, chilly spot where colds are easily contracted. In fact lunching on the ground should be restricted to summer rather than early spring.

"The large number of colds prevalent at this season can, to a considerable degree, be attributed to the too enthusiastic reception of spring on the part of those who have contracted them," the doctor asserts.

PRESENT TENDENCY AWAY FROM THAT OF JEFFERSON'S DAY

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

It is likely that about 101 per cent. of the self-styled "Jeffersonian democrats" of the north really believe that Thomas Jefferson was an advocate of undiluted democracy, i. e., of direct and unchecked rule by "the peepul."

In a sense he was a profund believer in popular government, as the only one inherently just and prospectively permanent. His doctrine that all governments obtain their powers from the consent of the governed applies, in fact, to all forms of government, whether in a republic like ours, a constitutional monarchy like England, a feudal empire like Japan, an absolute theocracy like Tibet or, lowest and worst of all, a sovietized tyranny like Russia. Even the most autocratic government which assumes wholly to ignore popular opinion is amenable to assassination and revolution. If a people "stand for" despotism and injustice it is because that people is unfit for anything better.

Jefferson was in no sense the discoverer or particular apostle of this truth. That he should have come to be apotheosized as such is simply another instance of the curious tendency of uninformed and credulous minds to put the superstition of zeal above the practice of reason.

As a matter of fact, while he believed, as all of us do, in popular sovereignty, he joined heartily enough with his constitution-making compeers in providing checks and balances which should, at least, tend to prevent popular ignorance or popular intolerance, or popular tantrums from doing irreparable damage, till popular intelligence had had time to take its sober second thought, and gusts of temporary passion to die down. He was no apostle of mobocracy, as some of his modern worshippers want us to assume. People who do not take him at second-hand but go to his own recorded opinions for information about his beliefs do not have their estimate of the intelligence of these late devotees enlarged by their discoveries.

For instance, take the extract below from a letter which he wrote to a French diplomat:

"Generally speaking, the proportion which the aggregate of the other classes of citizens bears in any state to that of its husbandmen is the proportion of its unsound to its healthy parts and is a good enough barometer whereby to measure its corruption. The mobs of great cities add just so much to the support of pure government as sores do to the strength of the human body."

There is abroad a great and pitiful misunderstanding of the form of government which the wise men who won our independence sought to secure for

It is assumed by millions that they planned a democracy. Yet that was the very thing which they took almost infinite pains to avoid and prevent. What they contemplated and tried their best to construct was a republic.

What's the difference between a republic and a democracy? Well, it's about the difference between a roomful of house-flies, buzzing and brangling in anarchic confusion, bumping now into each other, now into your eyes, and now into the lamp-flame, towards whichever their incomprehensible orbits may carry them, as compared with a hive full of honey-bees working steadily each one on its appointed job and all towards a common and wisely purposed end.

Or between a caucus of crows, quarreling and squabbling and cawing to beat the band over the bones of a dead horse, and a steady flight of wisely led wild fowl, winging its wedge-shaped way north or south as prudence dictates, but always keeping up its formation and preserving its order.

If you want lexicographer's definitions of the difference between a republic and a democracy, take these from Funk and Wagnall's new standard dictionary: "Democracy. The political system in which government is directly exercised or controlled by the people collectively." "Republic. A state in which the sovereignty resides in the people and the administration is lodged in officers elected by and representing the people."

That last is what Jefferson and his associates in the foundation of our republic had in mind. That is why he called himself a "republican" and was elected president by a party taking that name.——Please bear in mind that modern party names have very little to do with political principles. A present day "republican" isn't necessarily a believer in a republic as opposed to a democracy; nor is a present-day "democrat" necessarily a believer in a democracy as opposed to a republic. In using the words I have no idea of confining them to popular partisan definition.

As a matter of historical fact the imbecile assumption that "the voice of the people is the voice of God" has been definitely disproved innumerable times. The two most outstanding exercises of the unrestrained and unguided popular will in all human chronicles, the two which will occur first to almost every mind, are the cases of Jesus and Socrates; one doomed to the cross by popular clamor against the dissenting judgment of the Roman proconsul; the other condemned to the poison cup by the democracy of Athens. Both absolutely innocent and both deserving public applause rather than punishment.

No one denies that public approval and popular consent are the only bases on which any government can be permanently built. But history and the study of human nature combine to prove that such approval must be a reasoned one and such consent deliberate and based on impartial judgment. It must not be the result of ignorance or misinformation or blind prejudice. It must not be a temporary gust of popular passion, whether of worship or of condemnation.

Horatio Seymour of New York, who belonged all his life to the party which calls itself "democratic," and was once its candidate for president, said to Andrew D. White that the most outstanding and important thing about our fundamental constitution was the extent to which it went in providing checks against too rampant democracy. Don't accuse me of "partisanship," if you please!

Now why am I writing in this way about this sort of thing to farmers? Well, go back to that extract I have quoted above from Jefferson's letter and you'll see why. Jefferson and the other fathers of the republic contemplated a government which should be based on agriculture and eventually controlled by men engaged in husbandry. They planned a machine which should be managed and controlled by farmers. They hoped for, may, they expected to build up a great agricultural empire, which should rest firm based on the will collected from untold millions of farm homes. They did not plan a government to be managed from hordes cities and controlled by city mobs. Jefferson simply spoke the thought of all his contemporaries when he said: "The mobs of great cities add just so much to the support of pure government as sores do to the strength of the human body." It almost seems as if, in writing that sentence, he foresaw Tammany-robbed New York, ring-ridden Philadelphia, crime-bossed Chicago, graft-governed San Francisco, and all their smaller imitators.

The present tendency, it cannot be denied, is squarely away from the ideals of such men as Washington and Jefferson and Adams and the other founders of the republic.

The electoral college, which we have come to look on merely as an outworn and cumberous form, was really planned as wisely as finite men can plan anything, to check the manifest dangers arising from a direct election of the president by popular vote. It was taken for granted that the great mass of voters, engrossed in private business or work and unable, in the very nature of things, to obtain full information as to the needs of the government or the qualifications of aspirants, would be likely to be swayed in their selection by prejudice or misinformation. Therefore it was provided that the people of each state should choose, —presumably from their wisest and best informed citizens, electors who, meeting at their respective state capitals, should look the field over and decide who, in their expert judgment, and unfettered by partisan "nominations," was the best man in the country to act as the country's president.

We have travelled a long way from that idea or plan. When we compare such presidents as Washington and Jefferson and Adams, who were chosen in this way, with some of their successors, it may give rise to a question whether we have started on a better road or not.

And the dream of Jefferson of a republic which should be managed and controlled, eventually, from its farm homes, has been dissipated.

The urban population of the country is today greater than its rural. What the cities say goes, any time they choose to make it go. We of the country must recognize that we are no longer the controlling factor.

Instead of being the engine which supplies the power, we are more like the balance-wheel. We can spin only when the crank revolves, but it is still possible that we may exercise, as is the function of a balance-wheel, some sort of modifying influence.

Or, to come back to Jefferson's own figure of the sores on the body politic, to which he compared "city mobs," we can, perhaps, act as doctors in, to some degree, alleviating the pain and limiting the infection. We may, possibly, be able to prevent a few pimples from developing into abscesses or cancers.

There is one running sore, especially, which is sapping our very lifeblood, and to which we must give special attention. The cities seem to have gone crazy over spending money for improvements, whether they can be afforded or not. If their income isn't sufficient, they pour out bonds by the bale, thereby doubling the ultimate cost and imposing unjust burdens on an innocent but helpless posterity.

Now, it isn't stinginess nor old-fogyism to say that what we can't afford to pay for we can't afford at all: it is simply ordinary thrift and common sense. Everybody knows that we want better roads and better schools and better other things by the dozen. We could afford most of them, too, if it didn't take so much of our taxes to pay interest on the bonds already outstanding. We want fresh meat, but we are having to pay so heavily for "dead horse" that we can't afford it.

Even in the worst of the cities there is a minority which is opposed to this sort of wastefulness. Perhaps we can, somehow, play Aaron to this minority's Moses, and help hold up its hands.

The city wants what it wants, when it wants it; never mind what it costs or who pays. And the "city mob,"—Jefferson's words, not mine, if you please!—will tear hair and scratch out eyes to get it.

Perhaps it can lick us to a frazzle on a show-down. But the first showdown does not always foretell the result of the combat.

Sometimes the man who doesn't know when he's licked and won't accept defeat but climbs right back into the ring again after each knock-out,—sometimes he is the chap who gets the champion's belt. Such things have happened.

WOMAN'S JURY BILL IS KILLED IN HOUSE AFTER PROTRACTED DEBATE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Hartford, April 23—As an index of the condition of business in the assembly at this time but two committees had hearings today, judiciary and cities and boroughs, the latter committee having before them an act amending the charter of the city of New London concerning the construction, repair and maintenance of school buildings. The judiciary considered an amendment to the act concerning the enrollment of voters.

It is reported that reports will be made next week upon the appointment of the judges of the minor courts of the state.

Woman Jury Bill

The judiciary committee made an unfavorable report this morning on the woman jury bill that was interjected early in the session by Mrs. Elizabeth Coe, representative from Waterbury.

It was stated that the bill will again be introduced in the next general assembly. The same bill was up in the 1923 session, and through the efforts of Senator Samled C. Doty of Hartford, was passed in the senate but was rejected in the house. A committee of conference failed to agree and the bill was killed. Today Senator Doty said that two years ago he had acted under a misapprehension and would make no effort to secure its passage in the senate this year.

A spirited debate participated in by most of the women members took place in the house this morning on the woman jury bill. Mrs. Nevins of New Fairfield, supported the adverse report of the committee. The bill was rejected by a vote of 148 in favor of rejection and 60 in favor of adoption.

The committee reported adversely on six of the pollution bills that have been introduced. It is understood that the bill introduced by Wheeler of Stratford will receive a favorable report from the committee and will probably be made next week.

THE HOUSE

At 11:30 the house was called to order by Speaker Darbie. Prayer was offered by Chaplain Lewis.

Unfavorable report was received from the Finance Committee on H. B. 722, increasing the tax on gasoline, the funds to be devoted to the care of the state highways. A substitute bill will be reported later.

The judiciary committee reported on three petitions for salary increases in Meriden. The matter will be taken care of in a bill to be reported later.

Six bills concerning the pollution of waters were rejected. The bill introduced by Representative Wheeler of Stratford was not included in the report. The report of the woman jury bill was reported unfavorably by Mr. Johnson of Manchester. Mrs. Hodker regretted that the committee had made this report saying that members of the committee had told her that women did not want this bill, as they did not want to serve on juries. She would like to serve. It had been asserted in the committee that two women members would not dare to speak in the favor of the bill. She had accepted the dare and more than that had stood up and again she accepted the dare and would advocate the measure.

Mrs. Alsop of Avon said she too accepted the dare and was in favor of the bill. She considered it was a proper place for women to serve. The juries of the state would be improved if women were eligible to serve.

Mrs. Nevius of New Fairfield was in favor of the report of the committee, and wanted it accepted. She considered it no place for a woman to be on a jury.

Mrs. Nevius was frequently applauded for some of her witty remarks.

Mrs. Coe of Waterbury said that the hearing had been attended by several hundred women representing thousands of the women voters of the state. All of them with one exception, advocated the passage of the bill. Miss Greene of Granby thought that women should be granted this privelege.

Miss Weaver of New Milford said that while she was not anxious to sit on a jury, she was willing to allow those who did to do so. Mrs. Chapman of Rome thought the bill should be passed.

It would eventually have to be done, why not now? Mrs. Townsend of New Haven asked that the committee report be rejected and the bill passed.

Miss Ryan of Ridgefield said that while for a time she was not in favor of a bill of this character but careful thought had convinced her that women had shown their fitness for this work. They had shown a special adaptability in other civic duty, and they would in this. E. H. Woodford of Farmington saw no reason why women should not serve.

Miss Cheney of Manchester said that it had been said that women were not good enough to serve on juries, but it was said that it would be disagreeable but women had never yet shrunk from disagreeable service when it was for the good of all.

Women are not children, they know how to think and act. The sentiment is growing that women are peculiarly fitted for such services. She moved that when the vote was taken by rising vote form she would like to see if there were any men in the house who would stand up for the women.

Durant of Guilford said that women had shown their qualifications for legislative work and they would in this work. It was significant that of the sixteen women members of the house only one was opposed to the bill. He considered it time that the women of the state be permitted to perform jury duty. Mrs. Lewis of Stratford said she would like jury service but she was of the opinion that this privilege belongs to women and it should be given them. Mrs. Vinton of Mansfield endorsed all that Mrs. Lewis had said and if she was called upon to serve she would not shrink from the duty.

Representative Averill of Branford said that when the women of the state desired to serve on juries, they would get the privilege, but he was not yet convinced that they desired it. The place of women was in the home and not in the jury box. Can we ask the women to sacrifice this home work?

Mrs. Emery of Stamford said women are not asking for this law as a privilege but as a right. Miss Cheney said she was constrained to ask the gentleman from Branford (Averill) if he had read the bill. Wheeler of Stratford said he was a bachelor, and that he was probably as well acquainted with women as the average old maid was with men. He had learned to let women have their own way and to give them whatever they wanted. He was in the house to represent the women voters of his town as well as the men. A largely attended meeting of women in his town was opposed to the bill and he would have to oppose the bill. Kinney of Glastonbury was in favor of the bill. Mrs. Coe of Waterbury was convinced that the women of the state desire jury duty, assertions to the contrary notwithstanding. Mrs. Nevius of New Fairfield moved the previous question.

Leader Alling said he would not be met with a fond reception if he should go home, if he should support this bill. No one in his town had asked him to support it. He had been asked by a great number, a great majority of whom were women, to oppose it. When the majority of women wanted this service he would favor it. He did not think any woman would enjoy a possible ten days service and being locked up over night.

By a rising vote of 148 yeas and 60 nays the report of the committee was accepted and the bill rejected.

Favorable reports were made on a large number of bills which were ordered placed on the calendar to be printed.

An emergency appropriation bill for $200,000 to provide a water supply for the state college at Storrs and the training school at Mansfield was passed under suspension of the rules. At 1:25 house adjourned till Tuesday at 10:30.

SENATE

The senate was called to order at 11.15 by Lieutenant Governor Brainard. In his prayer Chaplain Ayer prayed for the recovery of Assistant Clerk Harry Nowicki, who has been operated on for appendicitis at the New Britain General hospital.

The committee on the judiciary reported unfavorably on senate bill No. 432 concerning the pollution and conservation of waters and creating a state water commission. Senator Shaw in explaining the committee's report, stated that the committee had before it another bill on the same subject on which it would report favorably. The bill was rejected.

Sword for Lieutenant Arnold

The committee on appropriations reported favorably on a bill raising a committee to be appointed by the governor, for the presentation of a sword to Lieutenant Leslie P. Arnold, of New London, in commemoration of his participation in the first circumnavigation of the earth in the air and appropriating $250 for the purpose. The bill was tabled for calendar.

In reporting the unfavorable report of the committee on the judiciary relating to an increase in the salaries of state's attorneys, Senator Shaw said that the committee had before it another bill on the same subject. The bill was rejected.

Calendar

Tabled: Directing the highway commissioner to take charge of the Chester Hadlyme ferry, to maintain it and that the rate of fares shall be fixed by the board of control.

Passed—Amending the charter of the city of Torrington relating to building lines, and authority to borrow money in anticipation of taxes; establishing a firemen's pension fund in the city of Willimantic; establishing a firemen's pension fund in Norwalk.

The senate concurred with the house in passing the bill for the distribution of one-half the tax on unincorporated mercantile and manufacturing business among the counties of the state. In the discussion it was brought out that by this bill the counties would be indemnified for the loss occasioned by depriving them of the proceeds of the "admission tax."

The senate adjourned to Tuesday next at 10.30 standard time.

LEGISLATURE WILL CONTINUE UNTIL LIMIT DATE IN JUNE

Hartford, April 23.—After today's session of the general assembly it was indicated by many of the committee chairmen that there was little hope of final adjournment of the session before the constitutional limitation date in June.

The house today gave up almost its entire time to discussion of the bill which was drawn to give women the right to serve on juries and which the judiciary committee reported adversely. For the third day this week the house disposed of but a single bill each day leaving a calendar which has been growing larger untouched. After the jury bill had been rejected 115 to 60 and the body was about to adjourn House Chairman Alling gave notice that next week it would be necessary either to hold a Friday session or sit afternoons. He said that Tuesday there would be an afternoon session as a starter.

The legislature will meet the incoming daylight time next week by meeting an hour earlier by standard time, or 10.30 a. m. on the clocks in the capitol.

Except the bill of Representative Wheeler all the anti-pollution of stream bills were reported adversely today, it being announced that the judiciary committee is at work on a substitute bill to cover the entire subject using the Wheeler bill as a foundation.

The banks committee has in hand a bill under which savings banks may invest in bonds of corporation engaged in making and sale of electricity, and another bill would give the right to the same institutions to invest in bonds of telephone companies. Both bills set up many qualifications as to the companies and the bonds, but both are expected to meet what had been called a demand that bonds of certain public utilities corporation be made legal investments for banks. The bills probably will be reported next week.

A New System.

Soon we shall no longer compute distances in inches, feet, yards, rods and miles, and ounces and pounds will be no longer used as units of weight. This was the confident prediction made unanimously by the members of the Metric association, who met in conjunction with the Association for the Advancement of Science. It is only a matter of time, declared Dr. George F. Kunz of the American Museum, expert in precious stones and president of the Metric association, before this country will officially and generally adopt the simple and easily handled system of measurements now current on the continent of Europe. Centimeters and decimeters will replace our inches and feet, the yard will be superseded by the meter, the mile by the kilometer, the ounce by the gram and the pound by the kilo. The number 10 will be the common multiple for all the tables and school children will no longer have to remember that a mile contains exactly 1,760 yards. They will only have to learn that 10 milligrams make a centigram, and that 10 centimeters make a decimeter. Our money is already standardized by this metric system, making accounting far easier here than it is in England, where they still stick to their antiquated farthings, pennies, shillings, crowns, sovereigns and guineas.

Automatic Distress Signals

A device which sends out distress signal from ships automatically has been invented by M. Pasaquin, a young engineer in France. The instrument consists of wheels with projections around the edges corresponding to the signal S O S, certain numbers of which will give the latitude and longitude of the vessel and the radio call of the ship. An ordinary electric motor operates the machine which is set running when any unit of the apparatus is out of order. Then the signal is flashed again and again until the motor is forced to stop running, since no materials equipped with this type invention is not likely to have a full operator in order to send out messages of distress. A special dial on the transmitter may be set every day with the exact location of the ship, and the motor may be turned on to operate the set whenever an emergency arises.

One of the latest relics received by the Tennessee state museum is an old-fashioned wooden lock from one of the doors of the first house occupied by Andrew Jackson when he came to Tennesee.

WETHERSFIELD WARDEN INQUIRES ABOUT NEW LONDON ROOMING THIEF

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 24—State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown, Norwich, has received a communication from the warden of Connecticut State prison, requesting information as to the status of Theodore Lusta, now serving an indeterminate sentence of not less than three years, nor more than five years, having been sentenced from New Haven for lodging house thieving. At the time of Lusta's commitment to the prison, he was wanted here for jumping his bond of $1,000 for the same offense, but since that time a bonding company has paid the city the amount of Lusta's bond. The local authorities do not want Lusta, but it is possible that the bonding company will seek his arrest for jumping his bail although this course, it is believed, will not be taken. Lusta was taken into custody at New Haven following his robbing lodgers at the home of Margaret Dorsey of Tilley street, among Lusta's victims being James Kirby, who suffered the loss of a watch valued at $200. Lusta made a practice of securing lodging accommodations and then robbing the rooms of other lodgers.

Thefts from automobiles continue here and at present there is more thieving of this nature being perpetrated than has been the case in many months. Today Manuel Sidman of Boston salesman complained to the authorities that while his car was parked in front of the Hotel Mohican, State street, two boxes of children's and misses' coats were stolen from inside the car, the coats being of sizes 7 to 17 and about 25 in number. For a number of weeks crooks have loitered in the vicinity of State, Washington, Meridian and Church streets, where they watch automobiles left unguarded by owners and watch their opportunity to pilfer.

George W. Smith, of the crew of the barge Irene, moored at the lumber wharf of the F. H. & A. H. Chappell company, complained to the police last night that a thief had boarded the craft and had stolen a pair of trousers. This forenoon Smith informed the police that he had recovered his apparel.

The authorities of Philadelphia have communicated with the New London police requesting assurance that John O'Neill, 248 Connecticut avenue, under arrest here on a warrant issued by the Philadelphia authorities charging the accused with abandonment and nonsupport, will return to Philadelphia without the necessity of requisition papers being issued. O'Neill, who will appear in the police court within a day or two on continuance so that he can be turned over to a Philadelphia officer, has signified his willingness to return to Philadelphia at any time and when he does so he will be accompanied by his attorney.

Edward N. Beebe of 28 Brooks St., was committeed to the Norwich state hospital today under observation. He was taken to the institution in the police automobile. Mr. Beebe was formerly proprietor of a meat market and latterly was employed by several proprietors.

James Ferrello of about 38, was arrested this noon at the residence of his parents, 16 Woodbridge street charged by the Boston police with bastardy. He was locked up and will be returned to Boston for trial. The New London police received a warrant for Ferrello's arrest last January, but at that time, the accused could not be located here. This forenoon Ferrello, who had but just arrived in New London, engaged in a quarrel with his mother and younger brother, and created such a disturbance that the mother, not knowing of the warrant for her son's arrest having been issued, appealed to the police to take her son into custody. Patrolmen John Sullivan and David Nagle went to the Woodbridge street house and finding Ferrello there arrested him. When the parents of the accused ascertained that a warrant was held by the local police chargeated a smash that was not intended the father and mother attempted to gain their son's release, but were unsuccessful. The Boston authorities upon being advised of Ferrello's arrest stated that officer would come to New London tonight and take the prisoner back to that city for trial.

Policeman Ernest Opperman, while patrolling at Ocean beach last night, heard the crash of glass that indicated a smash that ws not intended. He investigated and discovered James Patrick Rogers, a sailor of the crew of the coast guard steamer Beale, in the cottage known as "Snug Harbor." Officer Opperman yelled to the sailor, but the latter only grunted, so the policeman took him into custody, as Rogers could not explain. The sailor had a load that he couldn't carry. He was brought up town and locked up. In the police court today he made known that he was drunk, all right, but as to how he came to be at the beach he said he didn't know. He remembered that he was cold and sought to get under cover. He knew he was not in the ship's forecastle, but he believed he was safe so he went in for a snooze and a sleep. The story was such as might have been probable, but it was not one that gave him permission to damage private property. He was prosecuted for intoxication only. That brought him a fine of $10 with attending costs, so that Rogers' drunk was a costly one. He was not punished for injuring property nor for trespassing, as he promised to make good any damage he had occasioned. Rogers has been in the service a year, but he has been aboard the Beale but two months. His record in the service is a good one, which fact was taken into consideration in disposing of his case.

Patrick Morgan, until yesterday employed on the New London line steamer Maine, as deckhand, was committed to the Norwich state hospital, this forenoon, following the insane man engaging three police officers in combat. Morgan, who is about 28 and possessing the strength of a giant, went to the New London line pier about 8 o'clock and there by his acts evidenced clearly that he was of unsound mind. He abused the crossing tender on duty at the union station and then went to the police station, where he further displayed symptoms of insanity, insisting upon wholesale arrests being made and being allowed to wear a sergeant's hat. Desk Sergeant James C. Sullivan, who was acquainted with Morgan insisted that the latter go to his home and instead of doing so Morgan went back to the pier, where he created such a disturbance that his arrests was sought. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman David Nagle and John Sullivan went to the pier and when they attempted to take Morgan into custody, he engaged them in combat. A crowd of about 200 had been attracted to the pier by the trouble and the mob formed a ring while the officers battled with the maniac. Morgan was finally overpowered and landed in a cell at the police station, after which he was taken to the Norwich asylum.

Arthur Miner of Groton; Mrs. Charles Bosworth, Mohegan avenue; Mrs. Myra Stenter, Groton, and Mrs. Sarah Winslow, East Lyme, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

William E. Faitoute has sold a house and lot on Fowler court to Wesley M., and Ina Belle Faitoute.

An automobile owned and operated by Frederick Meyers, of New York, was badly damaged this afternoon when the machine was in collision with a five-ton truck owned by Contractor Michael J. Doyle and operated by Samuel Onupak, of Waterford. The pleasure car was being operated northward on Bank street, and as it reached the intersection of that street with Golden street, the truck emerged from Golden street and before either driver could bring his car to a stop the truck collided with the touring car causing a fender and running board to be ripped away.

Three soldiers, Privates Hersaux, Mallory and Baker, stationed at Fort Wright, Fishers Island, are locked up at the police station tonight for the three were detected in the act of attempting to desert.

The soldiers boarded one of the government transports at Fort Wright late this afternoon and two of them had suit cases, something that is unusual for soldiers to have in their possession, excepting when on a furlough. Besides having the suit cases that attracted suspicion, one of the soldiers made it known to a member of the crew of the transport that they were going to desert. When the transport reached port the soldiers were taken into custody by Provost Sergeant McCormick as he had been tipped off that the soldiers were deserting. Sergeant McCormick then lodged the soldiers at the police station and they will be returned to the post tomorrow, where they will be given a court martial.

City Manager William A. Holt and Director of Law Frank L. McGuire were in Hartford today and attended the session of the legislature, when favorable action was taken on the teachers' pension bill.

Frederick D., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin H. Walker, 15 Walden avenue, died at Home Memorial hospital this morning.

Miss Louise R. Jeffray, of Howard street, a teacher in the public schools, is spending several days in Washington.

Miss Helen Austin, clerk in the office of Assessor Frederick C. Burrows, is confined to her home on Huntington street, by a severe attack of tonsilitis.

Patrolman James McKenna resumed duty tonight after having spent two days at Roxbury, Mass., to which place he was summoned by the serious illness of his brother.

William Clark, 22 Howard street, was arrested this evening by Patrolman Frank Philopena charged with operating an automobile without having his license. Clark was ordered to appear in the police court Saturday.

Stanley Bielowski, 34, of New York, who was taken into custody last evening by Sergeant Clifford Gorgas of the Groton state police on a warrant issued by the New York authorities charging Bielowski with rape upon a 16 year old girl, was taken to the Groton barracks this afternoon by State Police Officer Henry J. Albright. There he will be held awaiting the arrival of a New York officer to take him back to that city for trial. The girl, who was also arrested, was delivered to her parents, who came here from New York today. The young man and girl were arrested at Montville, at the home of the girl's sister, where the latter had gone to visit.

PATRICK SAUNDERS DEAD, FATHER OF 13 CHILDREN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 23—Patrick Saunders, 43 Jay street, died this morning at a local private hospital, where he had been under treatment but a short time, having had to suffer the loss of a portion of his leg by amputation. Mr. Saunders is survived by his widow, who was Bridget Garvey and by thirteen children, Walter Saunders, New York; Mrs. Albert Howard, New Haven; Mrs. John Finnishy, Lyme; Mrs. Willard Oakes, Providence, and Joseph, James, John, Albert, Elizabeth, Catherine, Veronica, Dorothy and Winifred Saunders, all of New London. A sister, Mrs. Jeremiah Shea, of Norwich, and two brothers, James and Charles Saunders, also survive.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

PREVENT COWS FROM EATING GARLIC

One minute after garlic is eaten by a cow the disagreeable flavor and odor of this pungent plant may be detected in the milk. This is one of the facts brought out in an investigation carried on by the bureau of dairying, United States department of agriculture, and reported in department bulletin 1326, Effect of Garlic on the Flavor and Odor of Milk, by C. J. Babcock. The only practical way to prevent the appearance of this flavor and odor in milk in regions where the weed infests pastures is to keep the cows from eating the plant.

In the tests, which were made by giving to several persons samples of milk from cows milked at different periods after having been fed garlic and from check cows, it was found that the intensity of the bad flavor and odor increased until it reached a maximum at ten minutes after feeding the oderous ration. Bad flavor and ordor were present to an objectionable degree when the cows ate one-half pound of garlic tops four hours before milking. As the time between the eating of the garlic and milking time increased the bad flavor and odor diminished and in seven hours practically disappeared.

Not only were the garlic flavor and odor taken in by eating, but it was shown that inhaling garlic for ten minutes gives strong flavor and odor to the milk. Milk drawn 90 minutes after inhalation of garlic was practically free from objectionable flavors and odors.

PREVENTIVE TREATMENT FOR COCCIDIOSIS

No cases of coccidiosis in chicks have yet been reported; but, judging from past experience, it will soon be here, reports B. W. Ellis of the Connecticut Agricultural college. This disease appears in flocks of chicks that are from 4 to 12 weeks old. The first symptoms of an infected flock is a loss of yellow color in feet and shanks. The chicks appear "faded out," their plumage becomes rough, and they do not grow. They may show a bloody discharge. The mortality is usually quite heavy. The post-mortem appearance is generally very definite: The caeca is distended with a hard core of bloody or cheesy matter; the digestive tract usually shows distinct signs of irritation, and may be filled with a bloody mucus. The liver may be spotted in severe cases. When the disease has developed to this stage, drastic treatment is necessary. It is advisable to starve and physic the chicks in order to remove the infection, and relieve the irritation in the digestive tract. Decrease the amount of grain; feed Epsom salts in a wet mash—at the rate of 1 pound to each 400 pounds of chickens. Add one-half wheat bran to the dry mash and feed sparingly. The chicks should be kept decidedly short on rations for two or three days. Dissolve 1 ounce of Bluestone (or copper sulphate) in 10 gallons of drinking water; or use powdered catechu in the drinking water at the rate of 1 teaspoonful to each 3 gallons of water. The copper sulphate or catechu treatment should be continued for a week or ten days. All houses and equipment should be thoroughly cleaned and kept clean. Better results will be obtained if the birds can be moved to new houses and clean ground directly after the physicing.

Preventive treatment for coccidiosis is worth far more than cure, as any affected flock is bound to suffer considerable mortality, and when they do recover, are delayed from two to four weeks in maturity. With the widespread prevalence of coddodiosis, every flock should receive preventive treatment. This preventive treatment is a definite sanitary program. Clean the brooder house thoroughly at the end of the first 10 days and clean thoroughly each five days thereafter, up to about eight weeks. It will be advisable to spray the brooder house with some good disinfectant following each cleaning. Better yard sanitation may be maintained if the chicks are kept in the brooder house for the first ten days or two weeks. The chicks may then be allowed to run out in the small yard, constructed either to the right or to the left of the opening in the house. At the end of five days, the yard may be moved to the opposite side of the opening and the area close to the door covered with fresh soil, so as to prevent any infection from the chick droppings. At the end of this time, the chicks may be allowed to run free. The reason for this particular system of cleaning is that coccidiosis is serious where constant re-infection is allowed to occur. The disease cannot be transmitted through fresh droppings from an infected chick. It is necessary for the organism to have time to pass through its normal life cycle outside of the chick's body. We believe this time is something in excess of five days under average brooder house conditions. Thorough cleaning at five-day intervals will therefore prevent re-infection until the chickens have become old enough to have a natural resistance to the disease.

LIMING IS IMPORTANT FOR VEGETABLES

Because many soils are naturally acid, the certain need for liming to secure best results with some crops is generally understood. There is danger of overdoing the matter in connection with our vegetable gardens unless the lime requirements and reactions of the various plants are understood.

As a general rule the application of lime at the rate of a ton of ground limestone an acre, or four-fifths of a ton of agricultural lime an acre every two or three years, will be justified. Twelve and one-half pounds a square rod is equivalent to one ton an acre.

Lime should be applied after plowing and worked into the soil by harrowing or raking. It may be applied in the fall after the crops are harvested or in the spring before they are planted. If you lime your soil you can judge of the value of liming by the response of the vegetables that do not grow well in acid soils.

Strawberries want an acid soil. Liming will be a detriment in their case. Beets do not grow well under acid conditions and spinach is similar in its reaction. Parsley has been a failure in many gardens because the soil has been limed.

Grouping the more common vegetables according to their response to liming, we have:—

Good response to liming: Asparagus, beets, eggplant, lettuce, onions, parsnips, spinach.

More or less indifference: Beans, carrots, chard, corn, cucumbers, peas, rhubard, tomatoes.

Preferring acid conditions: Parsley, potato, radish, squash, turnip, strawberries.

To discover if lime is necessary, or to find out if the soil is acid and to what degree the soil may be tested, litmus papers can be secured cheaply and, if the blue paper turns decidedly pink after being in contact for a few minutes with moist soil, the soil is decidedly acid. No change in color indicates a neutral condition. An even better testing outfit may be secured which will give a reaction promptly and indicate in definite degrees the acidity of the soil.

SEED POTATOES IMPROVE UNDER DISEASE CONTROL

Seed-potato improvement is largely a matter of disease control, says the United States department of agriculture according to the evidence at hand. Recent experimental findings with the group of so-called virus or degeneration diseases of potatoes, including mosaic, leaf-roll, spindle-tuber, streak, and curly dwarf, show that the so-called running-out, deterioration, senility, etc., of the potato is caused very largely if not entirely by these virus diseases. Reductions in yield ranging from 15 to 70 per cent or practically a total loss in severe cases may result from these maladies.

The growers of seed potatoes should know, among other things, that certain potato maladies are carried by insects, that degeneration of potatoes is largely due to these insect-borne diseases, that it is not wise to try to develop and maintain healthy stock by planting it adjacent to diseased lots, that tubers from diseased plants propogate the disease, that bin selection of tubers without field inspection will not lead to the production of disease-free stock, and that certain practices of isolation of seed fields or plants coupled with special field inspection and the removal of diseased plants have been helpful in reducing the percentage of disease.

These factors in the improvement of seed potatoes are discussed in Farmers' bulletin 1436, Why Potatoes Run Out, just issued by the United States department of agriculture. A copy may be secured free of charge while the supply lasts by writing to the department at Washington, D. C.

SEASON'S PROBLEMS AMONG THE POULTRY

The season for the broody hen is with us again. Make sure that you have a supply of celluloid leg bands on hand. Place a few in each house, so that the birds may be leg-banded each time they are taken out for broodiness. This practice causes very little extra labor and it is well worth while writes B. W. Ellis of Connecticut Agricultural college. When a hand gets three or four hands, meaning three or four broody periods—it is usually time for a tip to market. Some poultrymen, looking for still further information, have used a different colored leg-band for each month. This at a glance gives a complete history of the bird's broodiness for the season. Occasionally birds will go broody three or four times and still make a good record for the year; but this is the exception rather than the rule. Such birds would, however, show evidence of high production in spite of the broodiness, which would identify them the ordinary broody. Broody hens should be confined as soon as they show definite evidence of broodiness, and should be fed liberally on dry mash with milk or water to drink. As soon as weather will permit, a small yard outside is by far the best place for this purpose.

Breeding stock will give best results in fertility and hatchability if allowed free range. From the standpoint of an all-season supply of green food this is not always the wisest practice as the hens will kill back the grass over a large territory during the early part of the season, when the growth is just started. Limited range at this period will mean much better range during the latter part of the season. This applies particularly where yard room is at a premium. The birds will give equally good results if held in the houses until noon, or until about four o'clock—and then allowed to run during the remainder of the day. A small yard can thus be made to go much farther. The birds will eat more mash if kept confined near the mash hoppers and water dishes and the eggs will be kept cleaner. Pens of laying birds that are kept confined continually but kept provided with an abundance of green food seem to give as high egg production as the flocks that have free range. Pens that are to be kept over the breeding season should have range [illegible] the fall, before going into winter quarters.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR.

New York, April 23.—The main body of stocks fluctuated irregularly within a narrow trading area in today's market, but bullish operations were successfully conducted in a number of public utilities, motor, chemicals and specialties. Trading was in reduced volume, today's total sales running slightly above one million shares.

Standard industrials showed relatively little change on the day. U. S. Steel common closed 3-4 lower at 114 3-8 on total sales of about 12,000 shares. Baldwin recorded a net gain of 1-2 point at 112. American Can and Studebaker showed slight fractional gains at 172 3-8 and 45 7-8 respectively.

The oils displayed a firm undertone despite reports of an enormous increase in crude oil output. Atlantic Refining advanced 3 points to 105 and Colorado Fuel moved up 2 points to 86, while Royal Dutch, Associated Oil and California Petroleum preferred moved up a point or two.

There were several strong spots in the public utility list. Western Union was bid up to 135, the highest price in 40 years, in anticipation of a capital adjustment favorable to stockholders. BOND MARKET

New York, April 23.—Bond prices worked into higher ground today under the vigorous leadership of the railroad issues. Gains of a point or more were scattered throughout the list of a buying movement which was broadened to include a number of dormant bonds.

The prevailing ease of money rates was reflected in the continued investment buying of many high-grade obligations. Accumulation of the rails, however, was not confined to the gilt edge class, many semi-speculative liens joining in the upward movement.

Union Pacific refunding 4s advanced in the face of less favorable March earnings, while gains of one to two points were registered by Baltimore & Ohio 4s and 5s, Missouri Pacific 4s, International Great Northern adjustment 6s, Iron Mountain 4s, Florida Western & Northern 7s, Denver & Rio Grande consolidated 4s and Frisco 4s "A". The only outstanding exceptions to the general trend were the Norfolk & Western and Virginian Railway issues, which reacted on opposition to the proposed lease agreement between these roads.

Despite further increases in crude oil production, Pan-American, Skelly, Sinclair and other petroleum issues moved ahead, while Virginia-Carolina Chemical obligations continued their advance on prospects of an early termination of receivership.

United States and foreign government bonds worked irregularly higher.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, April 23.—General rains in the southwest together with indications of additional moisture over that section did a good deal to bring about lower prices for wheat. The market closed unsteady at 2 to 2 1-4c net decline, May 1.53 1-4 to 1.53 1-2 and July 1.41 to 1.41 1-4. Corn finished at 3-8c off to 1 7-8c gain, oats at 1-8c down to 1-4 and 3-8c advance, and provisions showing setbacks that varied from 15 to 30 cents.

Wheat market weakness due to rains benefiting the winter crop in the southwest was accentuated by the fact that Liverpool quotations failed to reflect yesterday's sharp advance in prices on this side of the Atlantic. Furthermore, export business in this country was small, only about 200,000 bushels. Domestic demand for flour was also described as slack. Under such circumstances, notwithstanding that selling pressure was light and was from scattered sources, the wheat market received virtually no support except from previous sellers who were in a position to collect profits.

Higher prices for the May delivery of corn were associated with active buying of May for cash interests. Corn receipts in the west were scanty. Oats were steadied by removal of hedges against 2,000,000 bushels of oats destroyed in an elevator fire here.

Provisions went lower, in line with hog values.

CURB MARKET.

New York, April 23.—Price movements in today's curb market were extremely narrow with the general list displaying a firm undertone. The oils were unaffected by reports of a huge gain in crude output. Standard Oil of Kentucky advancing 2 5-8 points to 118 1-2, Anglo-American crossing 26 for a gain of more than one point and most of the others improving fractionally. Humble was the only heavy spot, falling back a point.

A break of nearly five points in Middle West Utilities, about half of which was later recovered, was the only feature of the public utility list. Lehigh Power securities and United Light and Power each moved up a point on a small turnover.

"Nickel Plate" fell back 1 5-8 points to 84 1-4 in sympathy with the heaviness of the rails on the "big board". Chrysler corporation closed fractionally higher at 79 1-2 after selling as high as 81. Serv-El crossed 11 to a new high on the movement and Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Coal advanced 2 1-2 points to 121 1-2.

Snow Extinguisher.

After three years of research Dr. Charles L. Jones, fellow of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, has perfected a method of extinguishing fires with carbon dioxide in the form of snowflakes. The method, it is declared, will be particularly effective with fires in inclosed spaces, such as mines, ships and so on.

Dr. Jones explained his method as follows:

"When liquified carbon dioxide is passed from cylinder pressure to atmospheric pressure the liquid boils, its latent heat of vaporization being supplied by the cooling of the gas and the residual liquid until the liquid is solidified to snow. The snow continues to sublime until its vapor pressure becomes equal to atmospheric pressure, after which further sublimation can take place only through the addition of heat from an external source.

"When the carbon dioxide is employed at this temperature it carries in suspension very fine divided carbon dioxide snow, and the flame is literally chilled out of existence."

The carbon dioxide causes no damage to surrounding objects as do water and chemicals.

THINKS ERICKSSON TOUCHED VIRGINIA

Students of the sagas are devoting a great deal of attention to the theories advanced by the late M. M. Mjeide regarding the explorations of Leif Erickson. Mjeide died recently after a journey to America aboard a freight steamer on which he tested out through astronomical and geographical observations his belief that Erickson's "Vineland" was on the mainland of America—what is now the Virginia coast. This new interpretation of the cabalistic reckoning in the saga upset an older Norwegian theory, advanced by Prof. Gustav Storm, that "Vineland" was the coast of what is now Nova Scotia. It would explain Leif Erickson's insistence upon the fact that the climate in "Vineland" was remarkably mild, and that grapes grew wild.

Historical Rod.

The Longmeadow Historical Society has a queer hollow rod, about five feet long, which was a "courting stick" of the Puritan days of 1700 when etiquette was precise and chaperonage was omniscient. When the young people of Pastor Williams' home at Longmeadow gathered about the big fireplace and chaperons kept vigil' lest words too sentimental be passed from youth to maiden, the lovers calmly outdid the chaperon by using the courting stick. There was license for its use when privacy for engaged couples was impossible in a large family circle. If your sweetheart sat across the hearth and you wished to whisper "sweet nothings" into her ear, the courting stick came to the rescue.

If the sun had nothing to do but shine on the truly good it wouldn't have to get up so early.

CLEANLINESS, COURTESY, GOOD SERVICE AND EXCELLENT QUALITY FOR THE PRICES QUOTED ARE FOUR FACTORS THAT KEEP THIS BIG MARKET CROWDED FROM MORNING TILL NIGHT.

LAYS DOWN GENERAL PRINCIPLES FOR THE TEACHING OF CHILDREN

Before an assembly representing all Protestant churches of the city, Dr. M. A. Honline concluded his series of addresses on Teaching, at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church Thursday evening.

Dr. Honline opened his address by mentioning that he had previously stated that Christ of Nazareth was the greatest teacher of all time and that it would be well to study His methods of teaching, His aims and the materials He used, remembering that it was only the influence they had with others that counts. It is the pupil, not the material which is all important, was the thought brought out by Dr. Honline and he proved this statement by a series of interesting proofs full of instruction to teachers of any kind of subject.

Education, he said, rests on a threefold process, the first being study.

Study, he said, is meant for the teacher as well as the pupil for both must know and study before education is gained. The pupil must know the lesson but the teacher must know the subject, things directly bearing on the subject being studied by the pupil.

Second is the teaching process. A teacher teaches, said Dr. Honline. The teacher must know the subject and must know how to teach it to the pupil. Teaching causes your pupil to know, to do and to be—the greatest of these being, to be. You cannot save people by simply having them know, for knowledge must be carried out. They must know it so as to be able to live it and the teacher should present the subject in a way that will cause the pupil to have a desire to drink it all in and remember it.

The third important process is Learns. The new way to spell education is "Changed." If human beings were as they ought to be there would be no need of education. Education is to change them from what they are to what they should be. Religion is spelled "Changed" for a person is not religious until he has been changed from what he is to what he ought to be.

Education further rests on a four-fold process. First, Aims of education; second, materials of education; third organization of material; fourth technique of presentation. In organizing material is where most teachers fail, not only in church work but in grade school work and even in higher schools. The mistake they often make is when they think that because they know their materials they are ready to teach it. They forget that they are not teaching material but are teaching pupils. They should therefore organize their material for the pupils they are to teach so he will be able to get it.

All this is important but education rests on something further, all that I have covered rests on another thing, and that is, the child or pupil. No matter how much a teacher knows of all the other things I have mentioned, unless she knows her pupil everything is lost. There is a need for studying the child or pupil.

Man is of dual nature, the spiritual man is related to God, the physical man is related to his ancestors. Man was created out of dust—that is the physical. The breath of life was put into his body—that is the spiritual and makes man a dual creation. The pupil must be understood first or all other education is lost.

Dr. Honline then called out many questions asked of high school students to determine their characteristics, likes and dislikes, habits and ideas of life in general, used to make up charts to be forwarded as they progress, thus giving the teacher a chance to give the student the proper studies.

In closing he mentioned the names of many great men who were called dunces, slow minded or weak minded while in schools, who afterwards proved to possess wonderful minds. The greatest day coming is when every child is given the right to find himself and be directed along the proper lines of education to best fit them for what nature intended them to be. A child is too costly to experiment with, said Dr. Honline, we should aid them by giving them the proper studies. No two children are the same and it is folly to believe that they can all be forced to study the same subjects and make good. Minds are different and children have different studies they are particularly interested in. It is our duty to assist them in going far in their chosen line, giving them the studies which will best fit them to become "changed," bring them from what they are to what they ought to be.

At the conclusion of his address Dr. Honline was presented a Thermos bottle by Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of the church, on behalf of friends in Norwich. Dr. Honline responded briefly thanking his Norwich friends for their courtesy and expressing a desire to return to Norwich for further talk was along educational lines.

ACADEMY STUDENTS PLAY FOR LIONS' CLUB MEETING

With a number of guests present and a good attendance of members the weekly meeting of the Norwich Lions' club was held Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel. President Edward Carpenter presided and William O'Neil was the song leader. The meeting opened with the singing of America, followed by grace said by Rev. R. B. Day. Club and group songs were enjoyed.

President Carpenter appointed the following to serve as the entertainment committee for May: Dudolph Henschel, Tyler Stanton and Benedict C. Pullen.

The club voted a sum of money toward the Duwell Athletic Association's new athletic field. The following were named a nominating committee for the coming election of club officers:

C. Edward Carpenter, William O'Neil, Joseph Panek, Abner Schwartz and Dr. Clarence G. Thompson. A delegation from the club will attend the flag raising at the Elizabeth Street school building today (Friday) in connection with the Boys' Week programme.

At the conclusion of the regular business meeting the session was turned over to the entertainment committee, J. B. Caron, chairman, who announced that a fine musical programme had been arranged by Lion Koppie Marioff. The programme was given by the following Academy students: Henry Brynan, violinist; Robert Otis and John Dischyshyn, pianists, and Frank Steinke, vocalist. They gave the following numbers:

Violin selection, Henry Brynan, accompanied by Robert Otis; piano solo, Nocturne, John Dischyshyn; violin selection, An Irish Folk Song, with piano accompaniment; vocal selection, Smile Through Your Tears, by Frank Steinke.

A short current topic talk on the automobile business was given by William R. Frisbie. The attendance contest prize, a box of cigars, was awarded to Jean Keiffer. The meeting closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

PROPOSING TO BUY SWORD FOR ARNOLD

The committee on appropriations of the state legislature has reported favorably a bill which would authorize the governor to appoint a committee of three for the purpose of purchasing a suitably engraved sword to be presented to Lieutenant Leslie P. Arnold of this city. The sword would hold of New London. The sword would be presented in recognition of Lieutenant Arnold's participation in the 'round-the-world flight.

The bill reads as follows:

"The governor is authorized to appoint a committee of three persons to purchase a sword and to cause the same to be suitably inscribed and presented to Leslie P. Arnold of New London, first lieutenant of the United States army air service, in commemoration of his participation of the first circumnavigation of the earth in the air.

"The sum of $250, or so much as may be necessary, is appropriated for the use of the committee in carrying out the provisions of this act."

NORWICH WOMEN GOING TO MISSIONARY MEETING

Several Norwich women plan to attend the annual meeting of the Woman's Congregational Home Missionary Union of Connecticut, in Centre church, Hartford, on April 29th. Mrs. Charles Snow Thayer, the president, has arranged a most interesting programme which includes a luncheon, a program of Indian songs, illustrating "The Indian's Day," by Phillip Frazier, the talented young graduate of Oberlin college, and of Chicago Theological seminary. Phillip Frazier, whose Indian name is Humyanmani (Buzzing Walker), has a beautiful baritone voice and has had training at Oberlin Conservatory of Music. He has a thorough acquaintance with Indian folk-lore, having been born and brought up on the Santee Indian reservation. He represents the third generation of Christianized Indian—the evolution from medicine man to college man. His program will include Indian legends as well as songs.

THE BOY OF YESTERDAY AND THE BOY OF TODAY

In connection with the observance of Boys' Week an address upon the Boy of Yesterday and the Boy of Today is of interest as it was given by John Melpolder, executive manager of the Community Welfare association of Springfield, Mass.

Mr. Melpolder spoke as follows:

The boy of yesterday and the boy of today are not the same kind of a boy. They are no more alike than a horse-drawn carriage and an automobile are alike, or a kite and an aeroplane, or a jewsharp and a phonograph, or a grind organ and a radio, or gospel hymns and jazz syncopation, or a quiet, serene country place and a hustling, bustling metropolis, of a farm house and an apartment house, of a little red school house and a large city school plant, or an old-fashioned mother of from six to twelve children and a new-fashioned mother of one or two children, or a farmer father and a business-man father. The boy of today is not what his father used to be and, somehow, father is having an awful time to adjust himself to that fact.

The average father of a modern grown-up boy is, on the whole, a sorry-looking spectacle. If he puts the screws down on his boy and tries to have him conform to his own previous boyhood mental attitude and code of ethics, then there remains no bond of sympathy between them and there may be even rebellion. If, on the other hand, father is inclined to the other extreme and lets the boy run his own course along the broad white ways, preferably in Dad's super-six with girls and pocket-flasks thrown in for good measure, then there is another story to tell. That between these two extremes there lies a middle course is discovered only by the father who will study his boy carefully in his relationships to the modern changed environment. But how many fathers with exacting business responsibilities are taking the time to study their boys and their environments? How many simply delegate such responsibilities to indulgent mothers who, in turn, are deeply engrossed in their own social affairs?

But what about the modern boy's understanding of his father and the environment in which he has been thrown? The boy didn't ask to come into this world. He was brought into it more often by accident than by design. If he had had any say in the matter, do you think that most of them would have chosen their father for their father? Would the boy choose for his father a man who works away from home all day long and often at night, year in and year out, and this at a task beyond the boy's comprehension and appreciation? A man who comes home tired and nervous, who simply wants to be left alone to pour over his newspaper or his accounts? A man who can't swim, hunt, fish, or trap? Who can't make and paddle a canoe? Who can't ride a horse? A man who has never fought in a war, or licked a bully, or saved a life, or faced a bear, or busted a broncho? A man who has never done a valiant deed in his life? Who never has done anything more strenuous than lift a fountain pen? Who never even takes a hike, but must ride in a street car or an auto to his place of business a few blocks away? Who never pitched a tent and lived out in the open? Who knows little or nothing about wild flowers? Who knows even less about flowers Who knows even less about the stars in the firmament? Whose only stock story with which to enchant his boy is —"Son, Dad is very tired tonight." Do you think that if a boy had had his choice of a father, he would have selected that grub?

And do you think that he would have selected Springfield, or any other city for that matter, as the place in which to live, move, and have his boyhood being? A city where he must always keep still—at home because the baby is asleep, in the backyard because a neighbor is eccentric, sick, or nervous, in school because of good discipline, and in church because God is there? If God has a sense of humor as he has a sense of justice, He would have the walls of our churches ring with the chatter and laughter of his boys and girls. But our God is any adults' God, a being interpreted by adult minds, and this notwithstanding the warning uttered by Jesus—"Unless ye become as one of these little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom."

Do you think the boy would have chosen the city for his abode where all property is private property upon which he must not trespass? Where he must not step on the grass, climb trees, cut branches off of trees, or pick flowers? Where he must not throw stones or snowballs, build a bonfire, or use a beanshooter, a slingshot, a bow and arrow, an airgun, a rifle, or a shotgun? Where he must not slide down a snowy, icy hill, or roller-skate or ride a bicycle on the sidewalk, or play ball, cat, or caddy in the street? Where his river of pure water has been polluted, his creek covered up, and his swimming hole filled in? Where the most hazardous of all occupations is just to be a real healthy, active, careless boy? Where his elders may rush in their death-dealing machines through the streets in front of his home, but where he must stay on the sidewalk quietly watching the world go by? Where, when he must cross the street because it is the only way provided for him to get to the other side, he must carefully cross that street only after having deliberately, judiciously, and with a fine sense of speed discrimination, measured the distance between himself and his approaching speed-privileged elders, and then often only between two white lines which fix legally his narrow zone or irresponsibility, providing only if and when a traffic cop is so condescending as to pay some attention to him rather than to the influential or attractive automobile occupants by stopping them long enough to give the boy sufficient time to reach the opposite curbstone? Do you think the boy would have selected the city where there is nothing but dirt, cement and asphalt? Where he finds ugly telephone and trolley poles instead of trees and shrubbery? Where he hears grating, rasping, rumbling noises instead of the soft rustling of the leaves, the sweet melodies of the birds, and the subdued murmurings of the brook? Where his boyhood activities, most of them perfectly natural and harmless in themselves, have been converted into crimes? Where he has been robbed even of the last vestige of space, the public street, and where he is held responsible for his injuries and death when he stays out into that street? Do you think that if the boy had had any say about it, he would have permitted himself to see the light of day in such a Dante's Inferno? No more, my friends, than you would now select hades as the place of your eternal abode.

It was inevitable, therefore, that a conflict should arise between the social ideas of the modern boy and those of his elders; between the natural boy psychology and the man-created artificial city environment. Parents and children, alike, are victims of circumstances which they cannot control or alter to any appreciable extent. Like a flood have come the forces and influences that tend to drive apart the children from their parents and youth from the conventional. A modern worker with boys, therefore, is not equal to his opportunities and responsibilities when, at the same time, he is not a worker with men. He may be a boy specialist, he may be so peculiarly endowed as to enable him to influence the lives of boys, but he must also be an interpreter of the boy to men, of the boy environment to the community, to be not merely a fifty per cent. but a hundred per cent. worker with boys. He must be a human engineer among men as well as boys, he must be a social statesman, a social strategist, an interpretive, positive, constructive force, or he will do only half of the job entrusted to him. Handling boys means practically handling every kind of a social problem in the community. It means bringing fathers and sons together and getting each to appreciate the other. It means getting public authorities, church authorities, school authorities, employers, and neighbors to look at the boy in true perspective, in relationship to his unfavorable artificial city environment. It means adjusting boys to that environment as far as possible without suppressing every natural instinct that cries out for opportunity to exercise, develop and express itself. It means adjusting that environment to the boy, by substituting for his natural God-given possessions of which he has been robbed by a commercial, industrial, and mechanical age, such opportunities as are offered in playgrounds, social, athletic, and industrial club rooms, and in summer and winter camps.

The worker with boys must be the genius that brings into play the real thing—God's own out of doors, the fragrant country, the mysterious woods, the placid lake, the murmuring brook, the beautiful sunrise and sunset, the melodious day, and the soothing, balmy night. He must show the camp as a place where pure ozone fills our children's lungs, where the sun enters their pores, where the sight the touch, and the sound of nature becomes familiar to them, where they see things sprout and grow, where they can gambol like kits and calves in the meadow, where they can roar like beasts and sing like birds, where they can climb trees like squirrels and swim in the lake like ducks, where they become hungry and eat like bears, where they sleep like logs, and where they learn to discover something new within themselves as well as outside of themselves, that which artificial city life may stunt but never can kill so long as youth lasts—the love of nature, pure and undefiled.

But while "To him who in the love of nature holds communion with her visible forms, who speaks a various language," the ideals of a Scout training camp are not summed up in all that nature does for our city-bound youth during their short visitation. For, to be sure, the stay at camp is all too brief, and soon these boys must return to their old environment which will be, in consequence, even more unattractive than before. You are thrown in contact with these boys at a camp not just for an hour or two per week, but you live with them, you are in complete possession of them day in and day out, you have become for the time being even more than parents to them, and here is your opportunity to be what you wish father would be to their sons.

You have the opportunity to insinuate yourself more and more into the minds and the hearts of these boys, to establish confidential and intimate relationships between yourself and them, to learn the innermost thoughts of their minds, to sound the deepest feelings and yearnings of their hearts and to understand the stronger and the weaker tendencies of their natures. If you are equal to those opportunities, if you aspire to be the leader of these boys in spirit as well as in letter, in fact as well as in outward appearance, then you will be able to influence them, to guide and direct them at the most critical period of their lives, and to leave an impress of your own character upon their characters that will carry them through moments of temptation and rebellion when others not so influenced and fortified yield and fall by the wayside.

Camp life, therefore, is something far more significant than simply living in the open and under a regular regime, than rising and retiring at the bugle call, than course and wholesome food minus dainties, than swimming at stipulated hours under the supervision of life-saving guards, than attending drills and nature study classes, than playing games and telling stories and singing songs around the campfire, than earning credits, making beds, washing clothes, and acting as kitchen police. Camp life is a retreat with its moments for quiet repose and reflection, for the exchange of personal intimacies, for getting to the roots of personal problems, and for building up moral stamina to resist temptation as the other things promote physical health to resist disease. This, my friends, is to me the highest ideal of a Boy Scout training camp, and considering the handicaps of the modern city particularly as they affect the lives of our youth, I feel that with the interpretation of that ideal brought to the parents and to the community, a Boy Scout camp will be recognized as a Godsend to them.

If, therefore, you have a struggling camp, if there seems to be little enthusiasm for your camp on the part of your boys or their parents or the community at large, may I be so bold as to advise you first of all to shake off the deadening effects of an exacting daily routine, to idealize your job, and to grasp the larger opportunities that lie before you? Then go before your council, your individual troop and the community at large, inspired by your ideal. And finally, go into your camp and be in fact the ideal leader of your boys, and through your boys you will become the ideal leader of their fathers, and through your boys and their fathers, you will be recognized as an ideal leader in the community. The greatest creative force in the world is the power of the ideal developed through faith in ourselves and in the highest use of the opportunities placed at our disposal by an all-wise Providence.

SOCIAL WORKERS COUNCIL HELD PUTNAM MEETING

The Social Workers council of New London and Windham counties, held its April meeting in the high school library, Putnam, last Tuesday afternoon. About 40 members and guests attended the meeting. Mrs. Kathryn Brian, president of the council, presided while the brief business of the afternoon was transacted. The meeting was then turned over to Miss M. Joyce Crosby of the state bureau of child welfare, who is chairman of the meetings on delinquency.

Judge Mahlon H. Geissler of the Putnam city and juvenile courts, who gave an interesting talk on the work of the juvenile court as it functions under the present law, was introduced by Miss Crosby. A general discussion of the advantages which would be gained by creating juvenile courts to cover the rural districts, where there are no town courts, was started by his talk. The extension of probation work in the small towns was also considered.

The second speaker was Miss Betsey Mitchell, psychiatric social worker of the Norwich neuro-psychiatric clinic, who gave a most enlightening talk on mental hygiene and its relation to the problem of delinquency. She cited several very interesting cases which the Norwich clinic has treated.

Although the council has been organized nearly two years, this was the first meeting held in Putnam. The following committee of Putnam people served tea and acted as hostesses for the meeting: Miss Cecelia Lessard, Miss Viola Snyder, Miss Clara C. Larned, Mrs. Ernest C. Morse, Miss Ellen M. Wheelock, Miss Elizabeth Child.

A motion of the defendants, John Quinn and Virtune P. A. Quinn for a more particular statement in the $7,500 damage suit of the Norwich Amusement Co., et al., vs. Abraham Davidson, et al., of Norwich has been denied by Judge Edwin C. Dickenson of the superior court.

The motion reads as follows:

"The defendants, John Quinn and Virtune P. A. Quinn, hereby move that the plaintiffs be required to amend paragraph two of the first and second counts of their complaint by stating, 1. The nature of the association, connection or conjunction between the defendants, John Quinn and Virtune P. A. Quinn; in the operating of the theatre of which the said Davidson is alleged to be the lessee; and in the publication of the words alleged in said complaint to have been published; and in commission of any or all of the acts alleged in said complaint to have been performed by them in conjunction with the said defendant, Davidson."

The second paragraph of the original complaint reads as follows:

"The said Davidson in conjunction with the defendants V. P. A. Quinn, John Quinn and Max Levine, operate said (Broadway) theatre and publicly display motion pictures and vaudeville acts at said theatre."

OLD LYME BOY OF 11 IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Enoch Noyes, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Noyes of Old Lyme, was seriously injured Wednesday night when a revolver with which he was playing was discharged, causing a deep flesh wound in the boy's left thigh. The boy was attended by Dr. J. G. Ely of Old Lyme and later brought into the Lawrence and Memorial Associated hospital at New London by Dr. S. J. Lawson of New London.

Upon examination at the hospital it was disclosed that there are no shattered bones and no arteries are severed. It is expected that the boy will recover if complications do not set in to cause blood poisoning.

Young Noyes was examining the firearm when the accident happened. It seems that the boy had been eager to secure a revolver, but his parents objected and in an effort to satisfy his desire, the boy made an exchange with another boy for the gun. Believing the gun to be unloaded the boy pulled the trigger with the gun pointing towards his leg, inflicting the wound.

GASOLINE TAX INCREASE FAVORED BY COMMITTEE

Increase of the state tax on gasoline from one to two cents a gallon is provided in a bill which the finance committee of the legislature has voted to report favorably. As in the present law, gasoline sold for use in motor boats will not be required to pay the state tax. It is estimated that the increase in the tax will increase the revenues of the state about $1,000,000 a year, all of which will be expended on highway work.

While the roads, bridges and rivers committee has not yet taken final action, it is claimed by members that the committee will not favor the proposal of Motor Vehicle Commissioner Stoeckel for a flat rate license fee for automobiles, but will recommend his compulsory insurance plan by which he could order automobilists whose record indicated they were reckless drivers to either post a bond or take out insurance.

POSTPONEMENT IN TRIAL OF $175,000 SUIT

The case of Stuart, et al., trustees of The American Potash Co., of Nebraska vs. The American Agricultural Chemical Co., which has occupied the attention of Judge Edwin C. Dickenson in the superior court at New London for two days was continued Thursday because of the illness of Attorney Day of Hartford. The plaintiff in this case, represented by Attorney Carl Foster of Bridgeport, alleges unrightful cancellation by the defendant of an order of 10,000 tons of potash salts and claims $175,000 for loss of profits. The defendant is represented by Attorneys Day and Berry of Hartford and Charles B. Whittlesey of New London.

The cases of Dorothy R. Lyon vs. Herrup, et al., and of Nelson J. Lyon vs. Herrup, et al., which were assigned on the calendar for Wednesday were not presented, both cases being in process of settlement.

JACOBIK FOUND AT HIS GARDNER LAKE HOME

Early Wednesday evening John Jacobik, escaped patient at the Norwich State Hospital for the Insane, was captured by hospital attendants at his home at Garder Lake and returned to the hospital. Jacobik is the man who was arrested some time ago on a charge of burglarizing several cottages at Gardner Lake. After his arrest he was committed to the state hospital having been adjudged insane. He escaped from the hospital last Saturday.

Jacobik willingly accompanied the attendants back to the institution. It is expected that his mental condition will improve in time under the treatment received at the hospital.

JURY OUT THREE HOURS ACQUITS SENATOR WHEELER

Senator From Montana Vindicated of Charge of Unlawfully Using His Influence as a Senator Before the Department of the Interior—Government Charged His Appearance Was a Violation of Section 113 of the U. S. Penal Code.

Great Falls, Montana, April 24—United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, was acquitted of a charge of unlawfully using his influence as a senator before the department of the interior by a jury in federal court here tonight. The jury was out about three hours.

The Montana senator was charged with appearing before the department to prosecute oil prospecting claims of Gordon Campbell, Montana oil operator, after his election to the senate. The government charged his appearance was a violation of section 113 of the United States penal code.

The accused senator received two pieces of good news simultaneously—his acquittal and the birth to Mrs. Wheeler of a daughter in Washington.

Judge Dietrich told the jury it should act on the facts "as proved" but that reasonable inferences from the facts as presented might be drawn.

He advised the jury that after election to the senate, a member does not lose the right to practice his profession for gain, and that anything done on behalf of Campbell or any other person by Senator Wheeler in the interior department could not be construed as a violation of law unless it be found that he accepted compensation for it.

He declared that the jury must decide whether the agreement between Senator Wheeler and Campbell on a $10,000 retainer fee, which the accused senator said was made for appearances in the state courts of Montana, extended also to any government department as charged and if it was not specifically found, a verdict of acquittal must be returned.

Evidence of a conversation between Campbell and two of his associates in a Great Falls hotel with Senator Wheeler, in which one of the associates was quoted as saying if Wheeler fixed up a certain permit with the interior department they could afford to divide the proceeds with them, would not warrant a conviction, Judge Dietrich said.

A statement by District Attorney John L. Slattery in his closing argument, in which he criticised the defense for its failure to call Campbell to the stand, was made the subject of one of the instructions at the instance of the defense.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, chief of Wheeler's counsel, asked Judge Dietrich to instruct the jury to construct Mr. Slattery's remarks on this phase of the case as applying to the government as well as to the defense since the government had the privilege of calling Mr. Campbell. Judge Dietrich granted Senator Walsh's request.

Senator Wheeler only smiled when the verdict was announced. Judge Frank S. Dietrich, before the verdict was read, warned spectators against any demonstration.

Senator Wheeler said he would issue a statement for the press later. His chief counsel, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, declared, however, that he had regarded the case merely as an offshot of the Teapot Dome investigation which he started nearly two years ago and said he had felt it his duty to appear as counsel for his accused colleague.

John J. Slattery, United States district attorney, who prosecuted Senator Wheeler, said:

"It was just a case for me. I am the district attorney and had no choice other than to prosecute. There is no ill feeling."

Exactly two hours and thirteen minutes elapsed between the time the jury retired to deliberate and the time the verdict was returned. Out of this time the jury took one hour to dine. The actual time for deliberation was but a few minutes, according to court attaches.

But one ballot was taken. In spite of Judge Dietrich's order against demonstrations there was rush toward the bench when the verdict was read. Friends of Senator Wheeler crowded about him and offered double congratulations—on the birth of a daughter and acquittal.

WAILING BABY WAS FOUND NEAR SLAIN MOTHER'S BODY

Portsmouth, N. H., April 24.—The body of Mrs. Thomas Mannion, with her throat cut from ear to ear, was found this evening on the Coast Road boulevard near Little Harbor road. A passing automobile driver heard the the wails of her baby which was in a carriage near the mother's body.

The police tonight were searching the woods and surrounding country for the woman's husband, who was a native of Fairview, N. J., married two years, the couple had been separated for six months and Mrs. Mannion was to have begun a suit for divorce in court here next week.

The baby carriage when found was covered with blood from the handles to the wheels. Following back along the bloody trail an eighth of a mile the police found in a clump of bushes a short distance from the little harbor road signs of a struggle and, about 200 feet away, a razor case. They believe that the woman pushed the baby carriage this distance after the assault, seeking aid.

FIVE JURORS SELECTED FOR TRIAL OF OLYMPIA MARCI

New Haven, April 24.—Five jurors were in in the box of the twelve needed to try Olympia Marci for the killing of John Bagnano, alleged to be the father of her child, when Judge Avery ordered the noon recess of the New Haven county superior court. Throughout the forenoon Mis Marci's counsel plied questions to talesmen as they were under examination and from among whom only two acceptances were made. Opinions formed and opposition to infliction of the death penalty were the chief reasons for rejection of thirteen talesmen.

The five jurors who have been taken are: Frank Leach, Milford, S. D. Bartlett, East Haven, D. B. Perry, Milford, W. J. Candee, Seymour and C. M. Ferry, Southbury. The last named was the 65th talesman.

The attendance of spectators fell off today and there were vacant seats in the court room. The proceedings were without striking incident.

BRITISH MAJESTIES HAVE BUSY TIME IN PARIS

Paris, April 24.—King George V. and Queen Mary of England, making their first official visit to Paris since 1918 had a brief but busy time here today. They were returning from the Mediterranean where the king went in March by a physicians orders after an attack of influenza.

The king and queen arrived at 10.45 this morning and left for London at 3 o'clock amidst a vernal hail storm and the cheers of members of the British colony and about five hundred Parisians, massed at the Porte Maillot station.

The royal visitors had lunch with President Doumergue at the Elysee Palace after which they drove to the Arc De Triumphe where the king placed a wreath upon the tomb of the unknown warrior. Sympathetic cheers came from the crowd as the king saluted the shot-torn flag of the regiment which furnished the guard of honor at the tomb.

Parisians, who according to an old adage, "worship everybody else's kings," paid George V. due homage, but one or two stray shouts, "Long live Ireland!" and "Long live Egypt!" were heard in the outskirts of the crowds.

The king received the return call of President Doumergue at the British embassy where both chiefs of state took tea together and talked in an intimate and friendly fashion until time for the king to leave.

Queen Mary, accompanied by Lady Crewe, wife of the British ambassador, visited the Louvre and the Carnavalet museum.

After a ride through the Bois Du Boulogne, the queen rejoined the king for the homeward trip. These train will remain during the night somewhere in the northern countryside and will proceed to Calais tomorrow morning. The king and queen are expected to reach London about noon.

The king conferred upon Premiere Painleve the insignia of a knight grant cross of the Royal Victorian order.

SARGENT STRESSES NEED FOR OBEDIENCE OF THE LAW

Washington, April 24.—Allegiance to the constitution without mental reservation and exertion of women's influence to make some of those of wealth and refinement realize that in wilfully disregarding the law they are leading the nation to anarchy, was urged by Attorney General Sargent tonight in his first public address since he entered the cabinet.

Addressing the Daughters of the American Revolution, the new chief law officer of the government laid down in emphatic language the double duty of women and participate in world affairs and told the descendants of those who fought to establish this country that they should not rest content solely because their forebears were great.

Mr. Sargent said there was an evident laxity of thought with regard to law on the part of a section of the wealthy classes, which the descendants of the founders of the country 150 years ago could correct in the coming generation by spreading the lesson to mothers not to forget while participating in politics, that duties at home and to their children.

The women of America can and will make or break the nation by what they teach their children before the age of ten," he declared.

Press of Athens Aroused

Athens, April 24—The newspapers of Athens today editorially denounce the decision of the council of ambassadors in Paris to allow Bulgaria to increase her military strength by 7,000 men. They take the ground that Bulgaria's present difficulties are the direct result of the Bulgarian government "terrorist policy."

SLIGHT EARTHQUAKE FELT IN SOUTHEASTERN MASSACHUSETTS

Boston, April 24. — Southeastern Massachusetts, including Cape Cod, the islands of Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket, was shaken early today by a slight earthquake, thought by Prof. K. F. Mather, Harvard seismologist, to have been caused by a readjustment of the earth's crust along the northern shore of Long Island sound. The tremors, lasting from 10 to 30 seconds, were felt as far northward as Boston and as far west as Worcester. The shock was faintly recorded on the seismograph at Harvard college, Cambridge, at 2.56 a. m., approximately the time the tremors were reported elsewhere.

In the vicinity of New Bedford, along the coast of Buzzard's Bay, the tremors were reported to have been accompanied by a rumbling sound as of thunder or a quarry blast. Dishes and window panes rattled. Many persons were awakened by the trembling.

The shock, the third to jar Massachusetts since early in January, was felt in varying degree along Cape Cod and was reported distinctly felt in Worcester, Middleboro and the vicinity of Brockton. Night police officers in Boston said that they felt the shock. In all instances the tremors were noticed at about 3 a. m.

Had not it been known that a shock had occurred, it was said at Harvard, the slightly accentuated tracing of the seismograph needle would have been attributed to heavy street traffic.

"It was a very local disturbance," Prof. Mather said. He explained that three of the four regions in the vicinity of New England subject to earth shocks have seen action already this year. The Gulf of Maine, he said, was shaken in January, the St. Lawrence valley was visited in February. The next earthquake, he said, may be reported in the Connecticut valley.

Referring to today's tremors, he said: "The whole thing was confined pretty closely to the region right around New Bedford.

"It's too early to come to any conclusion as to just what occurred, but my guess is that there was a slight readjustment of the earth's crust along the northern shore of Long Island sound. You know earthquakes of slight intensity are common there, I don't suppose there has been a period of ten years during the past 100 years in which there hasn't been an earthquake of slight intensity there."

"DAPPER DON" COLLINS BOOSTS CHAPMAN'S ALIBI

New York, April 24.—"Dapper Don" Collins today was ordered turned over to the federal authorities in Jersey on New Jersey where he is wanted on charges of conspiracy to smuggle liquor into the United States. Commissioner Cotter, however, deferred signing the order until April 27 to give Collins aan opportunity to bring habeas corpus proceeding to secure his liberty.

Collins fought extradition to southern New Jersey on the grounds that such action would be contrary to the terms under which he was extradited from France. Collins asserted to reporters that he was blamed for many crimes "just as Gerald Chapman was." Drawing a parallel between his case and that of the notorious criminal who is now in Hartford, Conn., under sentence of hanging for shooting a policeman, Collins said:

"I know people who known that Chapman was not in Connecticut at the time of the crime."

MARRIAGE RESULT OF LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT

Chicago, April 24.—It was love at first sight, Samuel Goldwyn movie magnate, and his bride, Francis Howard, the actress, who were married yesterday in Jersey City, declared today when they stopped here en route to California. That first sight occurred a month ago at a dinner party, they explained.

"I never proposed, really," said Mr. Goldwyn. "It wasn't necessary. We both knew the minute we met that we would be married."

Mrs. Goldwyn said that she may make one more picture, but she emphasized she was more interested in domestic affairs now. She has a new home to look forward to, at Beverly Hills, California, presented by her husband.

TO INQUIRE INTO THE MENTAL STATE OF ROGERS

New Haven, April 24.—An inqury into the mental state of Thurlow H. Rogers, of Waterbury, who is held in connection with the death of his one-month old child, was put under way today when Coroner Eli Mix and Dr. May Mallhouse questioned the prisoner. Rogers made a statement to the coroner but it was apparent that the prisoner was physically unable to stand the strain of a long examination and he was sent back to the county jail. The examination will be continued on Monday morning.

It was said that no fair picture of the mental state of the man could be obtained because Rogers was suffering from lack of sleep. Since an attempt at suicide in a Schenectady hotel, Rogers has slept but little.

CONTROVERSY IN GERMANY OVER AMERICAN CREDITS

New York, April 24.—With a controversy raging in Germany over reports that American credits and loans to German industries were being withheld pending the outcome of the German election, it developed today that if an embargo on loans exists, it is by no means complete.

Officials of the Chase National bank of New York announced that negotiations virtually had been concluded for a $2,000,000 credit for the Kali Industrie Gesellschaft, a member of one of the large potash producing groups. The loan, which is in the form of a private banking operation, will run for nine months and bear interest at the rate of nine per cent.

Torrid Weather In National Capital

Thermometers Hovered Around 110 on the Street Yesterday.

Washington, April 24—With the thermometer hovering around 110 on the street here today, President Coolidge's thoughts turned to the advisability of retreating to cooler parts.

Plans were made for the president and Mrs. Coolidge to take a week end cruise down the Potomac on the Mayflower, probably leaving Washington tomorrow afternoon.

The oppressive heat also had led the president to make more definite plans with regard to a summer vacation in New England. While no date has been set for a departure from Washington, the president expects to visit his boyhood home at Plymouth, Vt., during the summer and to extend his stay in New England to a month or more. It has been indicated that a summer "white house" will be established at Swampscott, Mass.

PUTNAM HIGH SCHOOL GIRL AWARDED THIRD PRIZE

Hartford, April 24.—Bringing to a close the oratorical competitions held in the high schools of the state for several weeks past, the contest among the winners in the eight counties was held today in the Broad street high school auditorium with Richard T. Higgins, chairman of the public utilities commission, presiding at the trials and awarding the $225 in prizes given by the "Hartford Courant" in the state finals.

Erich Pam, of Norwalk high school, representing Fairfield county, with a forceful and well-delivered oration, took the first prize of $100 and will represent Connecticut in the northeastern zone competition to be held in Brooklyn, N. Y., Friday evening May 1, at which will be chosen one of the seven entries for the second national oratorical contest.

The second prize of $75 was awarded Miss Lois Ransom, of Putnam High school, representing Windham county. The third prize of $50 went to Miss Mildred Davis Litchfield country representative from the Gilbert school, Winsted. All the contestants gave orations of excellence and the choice of winners was made difficult for the three judges, Franklin E Fierce, state superintendant of secondary education, Louis P. Slade, principal of senior high school, New Britain, and B. W. Harriman, principal of the William H. Hall high school, West Hartford.

The other county champions entered in the competition today were William Berenanckoff of the Hartford public high school, Miss Mildred D'Annunzio, of Middletown high school, Miss Oleita Garin, of Rockville high school Edward R. Henkle, of Bulkeley high school, New London, and Merriman Friant, of Hillhouse high school, New Haven.

14 ENTRAPPED MINERS WERE RESCUED ALIVE

Wallace, Idaho, April 24—The fourteen miners entrapped last night by a fire in the lower workings of the Hecla mine at Burke, seven miles from here, were rescued alive late today.

A rescue crew which went into the mine found that the entrapped miners using a pump which was in the tunnel, had so successfully battled the flames in the mine that they had it extinguished.

H. R. Uhtoff, an old time miner, who directed the fire fighting operations beneath the ground, said:

"Shortly after the fire broke out the men in the star tunnel were informed by the smoke fumes which rolled into the workings. We saw at once that it was impossible to go to the mouth of the tunnel, so we moved back. About 1 o'clock this morning, we succeeded in getting the pump into operation.

"We found in a short time that we would be able to get the fire under conrtol. The station on the 2,000 foot level was destroyed."

GOV. FULLER EXPLAINS TO GOV. TRUMBULL

Hartford, April 24. — The way in which Governor Trumbull and Connecticut military organizations were received at Lexington at the sesquicentennial celebration of the beginning of the Revolutionary war, Monday, was the subject of an exchange of letters between Governor Fuller, of Massachusetts and Governor Trumbull, of this state which were given out today at the office of the latter. Governor Fuller wrote that he was "distressed to note from newspapers that you were not accorded the courtesy due the governor of a neighboring state," but explained that it was unintentional. Governor Trumbull's reply gave assurance "that we of Connecticut have overlooked the incident" and "that the cordial feeling of the people of this state toward those of Massachusetts remain undisturbed."

FIRE THREATENS OIL TANKS IN OGDENSBURG, N Y.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., April 25—The city's entire fire department and all available volunteers were called out tonight to fight a fire which had destroyed the Katzman warehouses in the New York Central freight yards and was threatening the Texas company's gasoline storage tanks and structures adjoining.

A high wind was carrying the flames toward the railroad property and the Standard Oil company's plant adjoining. Railroad officers expressed fear the property was doomed. The four fire companies and the volunteers turned their attention to saving the tanks and other buildings after it was seen the Katzman warehouse could not be saved. At 8:30 o'clock the loss was estimated at more than $30,000.

Laughed At His Murder Indictment

James N. B. O'Mahony Charged With Murder of Beatrice Donnelly.

Bridgeport, April 24—A grand jury returned to Judge Newell Jennings in superior court this afternoon true bills indicting for murder, in the first degree, James N. B. O'Mahony and Max Miller and Harry Bogozes, all of New York City. They were immediately placed under arrest on order of the court on first degree murder bench warrants.

O'Mahony is charged with the slaying of his sweetheart, Beatrice Donnelly, in Greenwich, Miller and Bogozes are charged with the murder of Joseph Slifekin, in Norwalk, following the frustration of a safe robbery in the Palace theatre.

O'Mahony laughed aloud and said "that suits me to a T" when, refusing to let a deputy sheriff read to him the bench warrant, he himself had finished reading it.

He has been under observation at the county jail by physicians. State's Attorney William H. Comley, Jr., said today that there was no indication that the prisoner was insane.

Having studied law in England, O'Mahony is said to be convinced that he cannot be tried for murder unless the state "proves a motive" for the slaying. For that reason, it was stated he has refused to tell his counsel why he did the shooting. The state's attorney declared that it was his opinion that Miss Donnelly had refused to marry O'Mahony and that he shot her for that reason. He added "while it may have been a crazy thing to do," a man who commits murder cannot be let go "just because it is later claimed that no sane man would commit such a crazy act."

Miller and Bogozes were obviously worried when bench warrants charging them with first degree murder were read to them.

FRENCH COMMUNISTS ARE BLAMED FOR AMBUSCADE

Paris, April 24—Communist members of the chamber of deputies today were blamed in the chamber for having engendered class hatred which culminated early this morning in an ambuscade of a meeting of the national republican league in the Rue Damremont. Three persons were killed and forty-three wounded, nine of them dangerously.

The charges were made during an interpellation of the government by the opposition members M. Taittinger and M. Ybarnegaray. M. Taittinger warned the communists that "it is you who will be the hostages and the first to be executed" if the government fails to preserve order and the people have to defend themselves.

Replying, Marcel Cachin, the communist leader, said: "Patriotic youths forming part of the 'iron battalion' provoked the trouble." He declared that the members of his party would continue to protect themselves against fascist attacks.

M. Taittinger, who, with a number of friends, was shot last night in two smaller attacks which he attributed to the communists, told the minister of the interior that it had been denied that there was a communist peril. "But here is proof that it exists," he exclaimed.

DEAN INGE CONCLUDES THE LYMAN BEECHER LECTURES

New Haven, April 24—Delivering the last of the series of Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching here today, the Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, dean of St. Paul's cathedral, London, preached a sermon which revealed his deep grasp on the spiritual essence of Christianity, in the opinion of clergymen and divinity students alike who heard him. At the conclusion of his address the "gloomy dean" received a demonstration such as was never before given a preacher in this city, and which brought a pronounced smile to the face of the famous ecclesiastical scholar.

In no unmeasured terms the "gloomy dean" denounced what he called the "secularity" of modern socialism. Again and again he insisted during the course of his talk which was delivered especially to the preachers and those preparing for the ministry in his audience, that the love of God must hold the first place in their teaching and also that which means devotion to goodness and beauty.

EXPERIMENTAL MARRIAGE CULMINATED IN DIVORCE

New York, April 24.—Mrs. Adrienne Morrison Bennett, actress, today was granted a divorce from her husband Richard Bennett, actor, by Supreme Court Justice Mitchell.

The divorce is the culmination of an experiment which Mr. and Mrs. Bennett initiated in 1923 by "being friendly enemies and living apart." They termed their separation "a six blocks divorce."

Testimony was introduced to show that Mr. Bennett and a friend found the husband in his apartment with a young woman and that a second young woman entered his rooms as they left.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett are the parents of three daughters, Constance 20, a motion picture actress; Barbara, 18, a dancer, and Joan 14. Under the terms of the divorce Mrs. Bennett is given alimony of $50,000 payable $10,000 annually for the next five years.

LOFT DENIES MERGER WITH SCHULTE STORES

New York, April 24.—George W. Loft, proprietor of a chain of candy stores, today denied reports that his business was to be merged with the Schulte Retail Stores Corporation.

Mr. Loft said that Mr. Schulte, a personal friend had not broached the subject of purchasing Loft, Inc., and that the only explanation he could make of the merger report was that he recently had been told that Mr. Schulte had purchased a large block of Loft stock.

BULGARIAN SITUATION IS REPORTED EXTREMELY GRAVE

German Foreign Office Has Been Advised That Conditions Are Far From Being Within the Control of the Bulgarian Government—The Insurrection is Said to Represent a Determined Effort of Bolshevists to Capture Bulgaria—Rome Dispatch Says the Streets of Sofia Present a "Civil War Aspect."

Berlin, April 24.—(By the A. P.)—The German foreign office was advised today that the Bulgarian situation is extremely grave and is far from being within the control of the Bulgarian government.

Professor Methody Popoff, Bulgarian minister to Berlin, gave a statement to The Associated Press declaring that conditions are now quiet in his country. However, the optimism reflected in his statement did not find confirmation in private reports received by the German foreign office.

The present insurrection, according to those advices had been planned long in advance and is said to represent a determined effort of bolsheviists to capture Bulgaria, which would afford communism a strong operating base in the Balkans, the original plans, it is reported to the foreign office, intended the assassination of King Boris, and was to be followed with bomb plots and attempts upon the lives of other leaders.

Newspaper dispatches from Sofia say the military courts are proceeding ruthlessly with persons suspected of connection with the plot. They are said to be invariably executed within 24 hours of conviction.

Theatres, movies and public amusements of all kinds are prohibited until May 15, according to reports received here. It isunderstood that the Little Entente conference which has been postponed until May 8 no objection will be made to the increase of the Bulgarian army, upon the assumption that this increase will only remain effective until ordre is restored.

CIVIL WAR ASPECT IN THE STREETS OF SOFIA

Rome, April 24.—In a special despatch to his newspaper tonight, the Sofia correspondent of the Giornale D'Italia says that the streets of the Bulgarian capital still present a "civil war aspect," and that the atmosphere indicates the possibility of a recurrence of violence.

He says that severe police measures are in effect, including a ban against pedestrian and vehicular traffic in the streets, and the closing of all shops. After eight o'clock in the evening the city presents an ominously deserted appearance. No one is about, except squads of troops, heavily armed, patrolling the streets.

The police, according to the correspondent, are making many arrests in their search for terrorists, who, when cornered are making desperate resistance. Describing the death of Dimitri Tehountouloff, secretary of the Communist Leader Ninkoff, the member of the communist military committee, the correspondent tells how he had barricadted himself in his house, throwing bombs for several hours at the soldiers who were trying to capture him. He was finally killed, and when his body was removed from the house, which he had set on fire when he realized further resistance was useless, it was found to be riddled with bullets.

Another battle between the police and terrorists, when an alleged Secret meeting-place was surrounded as the communists were attempting to burn incriminating documents, is told of by the correspondent. One arrest was made and quantities of documents were saved from the flames. It is asserted that thes documents show the details of a complete communist plot, under which it was intended after the bombing of the Svati Kral Cathedral to destroy the foreign ministry, the sobranje (parliament), and the Bank of Bulgaria.

The discovery of these documents has been followed by a new series of arrests. The bitterness of the feeling which has been aroused, the correspondent adds, is illustrated by the fact that a number of communists officials have been killed, their bodies being left in the streets with pieces of paper pinner to their clothing, inscribed "Thus Dies a Traitor to His Country."

GOV. TRUMBULL PILOTED PLANE OVER CAPITOL

Hartford, April 24.—Governor John H. Trumbull today achieved the distinction of being the first state governor to pilot a plane over his own capitol. Taking off from Brainard field at 3.20 in the 450 horse power De Haviland plane, known as the "Red Carrier," from its owner, Lieutenant Louis N. "Hod" Eller, the regular army instructor now stationed in Hartford, who piloted the governor in the first flight, the plane sped off at 130 miles an hour for Wethersfield, circled around the outskirts of Hartford and was back at the field in about twenty-five minutes. Landing in a far corner of the field, the governor and Lieutenant Eller held a five minute conference and the plane took off again in the direction of the capitol. Taking the plane at about a thousand feet, the governor piloted it over the city, flying above his office in the capitol at three thousand feet, and well over a hundred miles an hour.

"It wouldn't take two weeks to make an aviator of the governor," was Lieutenant Eller's remark on landing again at the field, while the governor said he would fly all the time, if it were not for his other duties, and suggested a trip to New York in the near future, which the lieutenant assured him would take the De Haviland forty-five minutes or less from Brainard field.

Edward L. Kelly, the governor's secretary also flew at the same time, piloted by Major Talbot O. Freeman, in a 150 horse power "Jenny" training plane, but because of the difference in the speed of the two planes they were together only once, when the governor's plane tried to start a race which was declined by the slower machine.

You are doing the real constructive work that lies in with civilization," Governor Trumbull told more than 300 boys and girls, leaders and members of the V-H clubs of Connecticut after the second annual banquet at a hotel here tonight. "Out of your ranks may come the successor to the office which I now hold," Governor Trumbull remarked.

WIRELESS OPERATOR A "HERO OF THE SEA"

New York, April 24—M. Hiwatari, wireless operator of the Raifuku Maru, was called "a hero of the sea" today by the New York Marconi manager, H. De A. Donisthrope. Hiwatari remained at his post in the wireless room of the sinking Japanese freighter while the White Star liner Homeric was coming to its aid, Donisthrope said, and continued to send messages to the last.

Captain Roberts, of the Homeric was defended by Sir James Charles, commander of the Cunard liner Aquitania, docking today, for his decision that a rescue of the thirty-eight Japanese sailors was impossible in the stormy seas last Tuesday when the Raifuku Maru sank.

"There are times on the seas," Sir James said, "when it is impossible to make a rescue. There is no use talking about putting out rafts in a gale of wind. No one could hold on. I am under the impression that Captain Roberts did all that could be done."

Thomas J. Regan of Lowell, Mass., an organizer of the United Textile Workers of America was the speaker among the striking operatives of the American Thread company, at the Gem theatre, Monday morning. The meeting was well attended, Miss Amy Hooker, president of the Willimantic Textile Council, presiding. Announcement was made Monday afternoon that the speaker (yesterday (Saturday) will be Thomas J. Regan, and that Monday morning of next week the Hon. Horace Reviere, of Manchester, N. H., will speak. Miss Mary Ketleher, who has been speaking for the past two days before labor organizations in Pawtucket and Woonsocket, R. I., was here for the meeting.

The two parties in the Boys' Week election met in numbers Friday afternoon to formally adopt their respective platforms and arrange for the big campaign. The Willimantic Good Government League met in the Town hall with Frank P. Fenton as moderator, while the Windham Non-Partisan League met at the Chamber of Commerce rooms with Edwin J. Donnelly as chairman.

The conventions were highly successful and the interest in the elections is now keyed to such a pitch that there is no doubt of its being caught by the elders of the city. The campaign promises to reach the dimensions of an official election and the balloting will be lively.

Wild rumors have spread among the younger set of a "third party" looming up for the Boys' Week Election. Party leaders in the two already adopted platforms have set themselves to ward off any such proposed disruption in their ranks and every effort is being made to nullify this dark horse project. The major parties are out to ride their respective candidates into office with big majorities. The rumors have it that a third party has sprung up at Windham High school where the more grown-up boys have cooked up a platform all their own and that they plan to advertise themselves as the Independents. There is little likelihood of the success of that party, however. The third party scheme is going against the grain. It is even too late for the Independents to appear on the ballot, which is already in the hands of the printer.

At the meeting of Freshman Lyceum, at Windham High school, Friday morning, Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, pastor of the First Congregational church, spoke on "Unlocking the Kingdom of the Mind." He compared the average young (and older) person to the strange creature in "Alice in Wonderland" that had a lock for a head and couldn't find anything until he first found the key to unlock himself with. Mr. Wheelock said that one key very likely to be overlooked is the reading of good books. The right kind of books unlock the mind, and a tragedy of most homes is that they do not have enough good books. Mr. Wheelock attributed the success of Abraham Lincoln, whom he quoted as the greatest American that has ever lived, to the fact that he learned early to read good books. He told of Theodore Roosevelt's habit of reading one book every day, and said that he continued this practice during the African hunting expeditions. He told the story of the little boy in the front seat, who was listening to a certain senator talk on "Les Miserables," a great audience hung breathless on his words. "I think 'Les Miserables' is the greatest book that ever was written," exclaimed the senator, in a burst of enthusiasm. And "So do I!" shouted the little boy. Mr. Wheelock said that one must learn to discriminate between real reading and cheap stuff; it takes practice to get the habit of reading, but that it is one from which one gets pleasure that will last him all his life. One should get the habit of buying and of reading good books.

Miss Dorothy Weeks sang "A Dream of Paradise," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. F. J. Williams; a reading was given by Mrs. A. S. Muirhead, and an instrumental duet by Misses Dorothy and Alice Davis. A violin solo was given by Miss Florence Jones, accompanied by Mrs. Williams, and there was a vocal duet by Miss Ruth Nye and Mrs. Emma Perkins. Cake, sandwiches, and homemade candy were on sale.

Gaetano Bianchi of Shady Lane, off the south side of Pleasant street, was arraigned on the complaint of having in his possession, April 18th, liquors containing more than one-half of one per cent. alcohol. He entered a plea of guilty. For the town, Attorney Ferguson told the court that at the time of the recent raid by the Westerly police officers they found five men drinking in the place, some of them being notorious frequenters of such places, who give the police officers much trouble. From the evidence it appeared that an extensive business was carried on there. For these reasons, together with the complaints received that men were coming from the place in an intoxicated condition, the town solicitor suggested "more than a substantial fine."

Judge Turano said that notice had been taken recently of the fact that in similar cases which had been taken to higher court, the higher body had cut the fines down one-half. "In this matter," said Judge Turano, "the district courts had not been treated fair or right. Fine of $50 and costs imposed." Continuing he said, "When cases with fines of $100 had been taken up to the other courts, these courts cut it down."

Cyril C. Duprey was presented on two complaints, being a fugitive from justice in the state of New Hampshire and the other transporting a woman for immoral purposes. Town Solicitor Ferguson asked that the latter complaint be dismissed and that the first complaint be continued. Attorney Roche asked that he be heard on the continuance, to which he objected, and asked for an immediate hearing, as the man had been held over a week at Kingston jail. Counsel said that uncharged unless there was a reason by order Sec. 6 the man should be discharged of the executive of the state and claimed for the man that no hearing had been held, only a preliminary one, also that there was no warrant of authorization from any executive, but the statute provided that the man could be arrested as soon as there were grounds. Judge Turano said his court had no jurisdiction in a hearing for extradition.

For the state, Attorney Ferguson said he was not ready to go on, but the state has sufficient evidence, known to exist."

Judge Turano granted a continuance to next Friday, May 1st.

The judge, after asking if there was anyone to claim the liquors found on the place of Gaetano Bianchi at Shady Lane, and receiving no response, declared the following forfeited to the state: Thirty-five quart bottles of beer, five gallons of alcohol, 11 4-4 gallons of whiskey and over a quart of gin.

Medora Larrott was dainty in the solo dance as a French doll. The next number, Babyland, was given by little Frances McKenna and Barbara Pickett and received an encore. Caprice, by the entire class, was followed by Blowing Bubbles, cleverly executed by Esther Portelance. The Pony Trot made a hit, with all the ponies and prancing given by Elinar Kilbourey. Margaret Tracy, Alice Jones, Margaret Moran, Pauline Wilson, Dorothy Dinneen, Marie Connelly, Barbara VanZandt, Lucille Hanna, Blanche Gantic, Dorothy Ahearn, Alice Costello, Pearl Wheeler, Doris Bill, Agnes Sugrue. The flower waltz was very prettily executed by Gertrude Danahey, Anna Cooper, Gertrude Sternliebe, Marion Pickett, Ruth Ide, Gladys Morin, Velma Brown, Ora Brouseau, Clair Gagnon, Barney Google was danced in solo by Arthur Racicot. Another big hit was well scored by the dancing of Jean Crowley, Gladys Morin, Dorothy Jones, Ruth Ide, Medora Merritt, Clair Gagnon, Gertrude Sternliebe, Ruth Morin, Doris Moran, Frances McKenna, Edith Taylor, Barbara Pickett, Evelyn Prue, Anna Cooper, Velma Brown, Ora Brouseau and Edna Brouseau Sun-Bonnet Sally and Overalls Jim was given by Dorothy Dinneen and Master Connolly. This was followed by the Dolly Waltz by the babies of the class and the French Tango, excellently given by Teresa Danahey, Irene Nolan, Marion Bailey, Elizabeth Webster, Girard Ahearn, Jack Costello, Harry Jones, Tom Costello, Arthur Bergeron, Walter Sullivan, Howard Sanstron, Earl Potter, Edward Bailey and Bernice Grimley. Miss Barbara Pickett, aged 4, danced the Powder Puff. Jennie Kirby did a very good solo dance to Humoresque. One of the best numbers given was La Cindara, by Clair Mathieu, Irene Nolan, Teresa Danahey, Ruth Costello, Margaret Colgan, Ethel Mathieu, Marion Bailey, Elizabeth Webster, Margaret Connolley and Olive Connolley. Wooden Shoe, a very quaint little dance, was given by Bernice Grimley, W. Sullivan, and How Do You Do? by Eleanor Killourey, Pauline Wilson, Dorothy Ahearn, Margaret Tracy and Alice Costello, received an encore. A clever exhibition of toe dancing was given by Margaret Colgan. The acrobatic dancing by little Cleo Wheeler, a group of boys in black hats and white cotton gloves, impersonated tin soldiers. Walter Sullivan, Tom Costello, Girard Ahearn, Harry Jones, Howard Sanstron, Earl Potter, Jack Costello and Arthur Bergeron. An interpretative dance, The Pipe of Pan, was given by the Misses Costello, Nolan and Grimley, and the Argentine Tango by Girard Ahearn and Miss L. Turner. Kreisler Waltz, given by Lucille Sullivan, Catherine Hanna, Mildred Hughes, Clair Lombardo, Juliet Lamoureaux, Ruth Casey, Mary Mathieu, Bernice Grimley, Ruth Yeomans and Alice Carey. Eleanor Connor danced Jazzmania. The Connolly sisters danced Turpentine and Cotilion figures and a grand march closed the program. Several waltzes and fox trots by the whole class were included. The queen of the march was Josie Lombardo. On behalf of the class Mrs. Racicot was presented a handsome floor lamp by Edith Taylor and a basket of flowers by Louise Sullivan. After the intermission the pianist, Mrs. Eileen Dubreuil, was presented a basket of flowers in which was a purse of gold from Mrs. Racicot.

TEXAS SOLDIER FINED FOR THEFT OF CIGARS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, April 24.—A fine of $25 and costs, amounting to $30.75 was imposed Friday morning in police court by Judge Foss, upon Private E. Vincent Annini, 21, of Forth Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas, who pleaded guilty to the charge of theft of $25 worth of cigars from John Bruyere. This also clears up the mystery of the theft of $26 worth of cigars and cigarettes from the show case of the Park Central hotel, one night in December, 1923, when Annini was staying there, and was missing the day following he theft. He acknowledged the theft, after which, he said he went to New York. It developed that Annini had been in this section during the past year, and according to his story had been associated with Mrs. Josephine Marino, of Flanders, in violations of the liquor law. Once he drove a "rum car" for her, was captured by the police, assumed the responsibility and was sent to jail for nine months by the federal court in Hartford. Annini said that he enlisted in the U. S. army last October and was assigned to Fort Sam Houston. He said he came north on a thirty day furlough which dated from April 3 and expressed a desire to get back to San Antonio. He said he had just a week before his furlough expired and he would head south if the court would be easy on his. His fine was paid by a local friend and Annini was released.

JEWETT CITY

On her Centennial anniversary, Rev. John P. Richardson, pastor of the mother church, the first Congregational of Pachaug, has sent the following letter of greeting to her 100-year old daughter, the Second Congregational church, of Jewett City.

In the Conference of Six Churches you are the youngest of all, and so in a sense are the daughter of the regiment. It is for Griswold alone to say that you are her very own, her only and well beloved daughter. Hence her joy on this Centennial day, when her daughter has come to years, and having passed safely through the sea of the first century, finds her ready to venture out upon the great ocean of the second.

The mother church wants to bid her Bon Voyage. It is an unknown sea, this sea that stretches out a hundred years ahead; but, there is no cause for fear, so long as the same captain and pilot is retained. With the Lord for your pilot and captain you will come through in safety over the long voyage before you, just as you have over the sea you have left behind. So now the mother church would say, "Thank God for such a daughter," you have been uniformly kind and helpful in your ministrations to the —"Old church under the oaks."—With a past beyond reproach, with a present that is peaceful, and a future that is bright as the promises of God, you have our confidence and our love, and may God bless you.

In the conference you have been one of the six candle-sticks, always your light has been brightly burning, and you have cheered the other churches greatly.

May our daughter church always be able to say, like Paul.—"I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

A vote of thanks and appreciation for this letter was unanimously adopted by the conference, and sympathy was extended Mr. Richardson and his family, on account of his illness.

Manager Barnett has been able to secure the Harry Ingalls Checker Girls for a couple of future dates, this is doubtless one of the finest circuit shows on the road today. Mr. Barnett is aiming with popular amateur nights, new screen plays and snappy travelling entertainers to please his patrons in all lines.

Friday was another grand day in this section, similar to Thursday, but with less humidity, and with 10 degrees lower temperature. Within the 48 hours just passed, foliage has made a record advance. Plum and cheery trees in blossom that two days ago were hardly in bud. On a bank in Sylvandale, Adder's tongue, spring beauty and dutchman's breeches are in full bloom. One school girl, picked Friday in the woods at Tadpole a fine bouquet of wood anemone, also known hero years ago as wind-flowers. This beautiful spring flower is not nearly as common in this section as it used to be, yet if one comes upon it, it is just as delicate and fair. The common wind-flower in bloom today in the Tadpole woods is no ordinary member of the local flower. Pliny says it was so entitled, because it opened at the wind's bidding. Greek stories claim that it sprang from the passionate tears shed by Venus over the body of the slain Adonis. The Persians adopted this flower as the emblem of sickness, because it was believed that the wind passing over a field of anemones was poisoned, and that disease followed in its wake.

The new advance in postal rates have become pretty well straightened out in the minds of the patrons of the local postoffice. There semes to be two items that still give a little trouble. The private mailing card, the sort that one sends home when on a visit to the cafe or mountains, and which bears a picture of the hotel where one is stopping, with a cross in the window of "Our room" and which invariably reads, "Having a fine time, wish you were here." This sort takes a 2-cent stamp. The remailing of daily papers gives some bother. To illustrate. The Bulletin of Thursday Apr. 23 weighed over two ounces. Under the old postal rates, one cent would pay its postal fare to Alaska. Today 4 cents is necessary. On the other hand, if four Bulletins were remailed in one bundle, weighing half a pound, the parcel-post rates become effective and a nickel will land the bundle in Skagway. Locally, there being no carrier service in Jewett City 1 cent is enough for a sealed drop letter, if unsealed, circular rates apply and 1 1-2 cents are due.

Alpheris LeClaire is a patient at Backus hospital, where he was operated on Friday. Reports to his family here Friday evening were to the effect that the patient was comfortable.

Medieval Cage Abolished

There still exist in corners of the British isles customs and laws left over from the Dark Ages. Usually these have fallen into disuse, but occasionally some ancient practice is evoked that seems even more cruel against the background of enlightened modern civilization. For example, last August, in Jersey, a woman convicted of a minor offense was publicly exhibited in an iron cage in accordance with an ancient law. Her sadness caused an investigation to be made into the practice, with the result that Sir William Venables-Vernon, bailiff of Jersey, has announced that the cage has been abolished.

CONTROL BEE SWARMING FOR MAXIMUM PROFITS

Does it pay to control swarming? Most emphatically it does claims H. D. Hopkins of Missouri. He says, "One year I made a careful test and found that my hives of bees that did not swarm produced an average of 150 pounds of honey while those that did swarm produced an average of 90 pounds."

Successful honey producers believe that a crowded condition in the hive is the most important cause of swarming. In the production of either section box comb honey or extracted honey, the part of the hive in which the young bees are reared may be crowded before the main honey harvest starts. The reason for this is that the good beekeeper will see that the bees have plenty of honey in the spring. This honey, together with what the bees gather from the flowers before the main honey flow, may occupy comb cells that should be available for the queen to lay eggs in. There is not enough room for food, eggs and bees in either the single story eight or ten-frame hive. In fact, if ten frames of a standard hive were completely filled with perfect worker cells and every cell was available for an egg, there would not be sufficient room in a single story hive. The average queen with all the cooperation she needs from the worker bees in taking care of the eggs and brood can lay enough eggs to fill twelve standard frames with brood.

Therefore, on that basis the first step in the control of swarming is to give each hive of bees another hive body several days before there are enough bees in the hive to cover all the combs. This ought to be six to eight weeks before the main honey harvest.

Good combs in the hive are also a primary consideration in swarm control. Hives of bees that are permitted to rear a large force of drone bees are among the first to contract swarming fever. Drones present in a hive tend to congest it and the drone cells occupy space that should be utilized by worker comb cells. This can be overcome by replacing combs that contain many drone cells by frames containing full sheets of wired foundation. The foundation should be given only at times when the bees are able to gather honey. The bees need the incoming honey to stimulate them to make wax with which to build their comb cells. Without incoming honey the bees will gnaw holes in the foundation comb and ruin it for later building of good comb.

To sum up the outstanding features of swarm control methods are: 1—To see that each hive of bees has a vigorous queen preferably introduced the previous fall; 2—good combs; and 3—plenty of room for egg laying and honey storage early enough.

GARDEN HELPS AND HINTS

Clothespins have never been mentioned as garden accessories, but here is where they are listed as a very handy and convenient article in the garden. They are not to hang up plants but to peg them down. For sprawling, running and trailing plants, the clothespin is an excellent guide and director. Branches may be pegged down neatly and unobstrusively by sticking a clothespin over the branch to be regulated and forcing the prongs into the soil. If the clothespin is too noticeable the knob may be sawed off.

This is a good season to start collecting broomsticks from all your neighbors. They are ideal stakes for dahlias and other heavy-growing plants. Grab anything that looks like a neat stake and store it, for stakes never come amiss in the growing season and usually there is a dearth of them when they are most needed.

A good garden line to lay out beds and rows will be necessary. Masons' lines are strong and ideal for the purpose. Hardware stores carry them. Lay in 100 or more pot lables to label the rows or the individual plants. See that you know where the trowel is and if it isn't there get a pair so you will be sure to have one. The narrow-bladed angular trowels are ideal for transplanting.

Good strong shears for the garden should be provided. Cutting flowers or faded blooms and seed pods does the shears you use to cut cloth no particular good. You will need garden shears in addition to pruning shears, now generally labeled with their French name, secateurs.

A few rolls of three-foot chicken wire will be ideal for the early peas, even the shorter ones are better for something upon which to climb and the new large-podded half-dwarfs are too long to grow as dwarf and not tall enough for the regular support for the brush peas.

See that there is a supply of fertilizer on hand to start with the first breath of spring when the plants are greedy after a winter sleep.

THE INDOOR SEED BOX

Boxes in a south or east window are the mainstay of thousands of gardeners each year and a reliable aid to good gardening if properly handled. The preparation of the seed box is a simple matter but one that needs to be well done to be reasonably certain of bringing the seedlings to planting size. First and foremost is the question of drainage. The seed box, whether it be a cigar box or larger flat box, needs to have holes bored in the bottom, about six inches apart in larger boxes and three inches in the cigar box. Over the bottom of the box spread broken flower pots, crockery or small pebbles, then coarser soil and last of all fine sifted soil.

For the finest seeds it is an excellent plan to cut burlap to fit the box and lay it over the coarse drainage and then place the soil upon it so that the box may be watered by setting it in a pan of water and there will be no danger of washing the tiny seeds or seedlings. Firm the soil and sow the seed thinly in rows. This is better than sowing broadcast as it will be appreciated when it comes to transplanting.

Then sowing is economy. Quantities of seed are wasted by too thick planting. The tiny plants crowd each other and none of them has a fair chance when they come up thick as fur. This necessitates early transplanting before the seedlings are strong enough to be handled.

Cover the seed boxes with a damp cloth or piece of paper until germination starts, and set a pane of glass over the top. Remove the paper or cloth as soon as the first tiny humps of the little plants break the soil. Wipe off the glass as water collects on it from evaporation so it will not drip on the plants and cause them to damp off.

Keep seed boxes moist but not wet or water-logged. Good drainage will take care of this proposition but do not deluge the seed boxes. Sprinkle gently and water fine seeds from below which are only to be sprinkled on the surface and pressed into the soil.

Keep in as even temperature as possible and if a cold snap comes do not keep too close to the glass.

BEST WAY TO PREVENT COLDS AMONG POULTRY

Colds among poultry should be prevented rather than cured. To prevent colds the birds should be kept in good condition, be free from drafts, have plenty of fresh air and kept in dry quarters. Most of the moisture taken into the body of the hen is expired from the lungs and for that reason the house should have good ventilation to keep the air dry and plentifully supplied with oxygen. The birds should be kept in good condition by being supplied with sufficient green foods, laxative roughages or epsom salts. Colds will spread quickly in poultry if the intestinal tract is not kept open and in good working condition. If birds act sluggish or inactive take away the feed from them for a day or two, make them hungry supply a good deep litter and scatter the scratch grain in it to make them work. This is a good precaution for preventing colds.

The minute a bird is found to have a cold, take her out at once, put potassium permangenate in the water to help prevent the spread throughout the flock. Give the flock a dose of epsom salts, putting one pound of salts in the water for each 100 birds. The affected birds' heads should be treated twice each day with kerosene, a 2 per cent potassium permangenate solution or a 10 per cent solution of baking soda.

Birds that are infested with lice, mites or worms succumb to colds much more quickly than birds that are free from them. This is true also of many other diseases amongst poultry. It pays to keep the henhouse and birds clean of these pests.

TIME FOR PLANTING EARLY POTATOES

It will be time to plant early potatoes from April 15 until May 1. To get the potatoes to mature quicker than normally, it is best to green or sprout them before planting. To do this satisfactorily there are three things to keep in mind.

1. Keep the potatoes in the light.
2. Prevent them from chilling.
3. Prevent them from sweating.

This means they should be spread out thin on a board floor preferably, with bags or canvass to cover them up nights if the weather gets below 36 degrees. They should be turned over every day or two to give each eye a chance to sprout. The advantages of this sprouting or greening process are:

1. It enables the planter to throw out any potatoes that do not start to sprout or that show weak sprouts.
2. It changes the starch of the potatoes to sugar, which is more quickly available for plant food when peeled.
3. It saves about 10 days of growth. The chemical changes take place in the light that would take place if the potatoes were planted.
4. The potatoes will come up more even and without many skips.

TIME TO THINK ABOUT EARLY SPRAYING

Fruit trees now indicate that "spring is come." With three or four days of real warm weather the buds will be out and the time for spraying is right at hand.

The delayed dormant spray should be applied just as soon as the aphids have all or nearly all, hatched out. An inspection of certain apple orchards shows that the green aphids are hatching out rapidly. Thus it seems certain that before the buds have opened much more the aphids will be hatched out so that they may be destroyed when the first spray is applied.

Do not delay getting the spray machine into readiness. Many fruit men will begin spraying next week if the weather remains satisfactory. Peach trees should be sprayed right away as in many places the buds are large and green leaf tips are already in evidence.

There are many orchards which are very free of aphis. Oyster shell scale is active and can be readily found in some orchards, but on the whole the orchards of the county are quite clean and in good condition.

To Save Crusader's Tomb

An appeal has been addressed by Sir Ronald Storrs, governor of Jerusalem, to the governor of the channel Islands for funds to safeguard the only remaining crusader's tomb in Jerusalem. The tomb is that of Sir Philip Daubeny, formerly governor of the Chanel Islands. Daubeny went to the holy land in 1222 and died there in 1236.

Until they are up to grand standards in spelling and penmanship pupils from the ninth grade up in the Lake Odessa (Mich.) high school are required to continue these studies. Tests are given every six weeks.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Time of Deliverance

In the G. A. R. hall, at 3:00 p. m. Sunday, April 26, Mr. W. T. Knight, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a lecturer for the International Bible Students association, will give a free Bible lecture on the above topic.

The speaker takes for his theme the Permission of Evil. He does not deny, but frankly admits, that the Almighty not only knows of the existence of evil in the earth, but permits it and even designed to permit it. Some of the evils that abound will be touched upon. It will be shown that evil had a definite time of beginning. There was a time here on earth when it was non-existent. That condition might have continued forever but for one thing—disobedience. The Scriptures show that those conditions will be restored, and that obedience will again be possible and be seen to be very desirable by a race that has had a bitter experience with evil, and that will be glad to be released from its control.

As evil had a definite time of beginning, so it has a definite time of ending, a time called in the Scriptures the Time of Deliverance. The speaker will show that that time is here and will produce the proof from the Lord's great prophecy.

Broad Theater

The screen version of the internationally famous farce Charley's Aunt, by Brandon Thomas will be the feature attraction at the Breed theater for four beginning Sunday. Syd Chaplin has the title role and the supporting cast is composed of wide repute.

As a stage play Charley's Aunt has already grossed over three million dollars and holds the money-making record for the stage. It has produced in every civilized country in the world, which, in addition to giving it an international reputation, has established it as a play with the basic qualities of farce comedy that can be appreciated and understood in any language.

Charley's Aunt was first produced at Bury St. Edmunds in Suffolk in 1892 with W. S. Penley starring, and was then brought to London, playing first at the Royalty theater and then at the Globe where it ran continuously for four years a total of 1466 performances. The fame of Charley's Aunt spread far and wide and seven touring companies started out through the provinces. Several companies are still touring with it in England, and each year it is put on in London where it is one of the "draws" of the holiday season.

Some of the great stage stars who have played in Charley's Aunt were the original W. S. Penley, who is said to have a million and a half dollars out of it; Lyn Harding, Brandon Thomas, Miss Nina Boucicault, Julian Royce, Reeves Smith and A. E. Matthews. It was first played in America by Girardot.

The Christie gave this picture an especially elaborate production and it is said to be the funniest feature that the screen has offered this season.

Broadway Sunday Night Only.

A picture which is described as a thriller, with a liberal mixture of romance, comedy and suspense, comes to the Broadway theater on Sunday when Vitagraph's Fear-Bound, produced by Will Nigh will be shown for one day only.

Fear-Bound includes in its cast a host of screen favorites. Marjorie Daw is at her most appealing best as a care-free Faith Tumble, who believes herself fatherless until the head of the family turns up and proves to be a bandit and highwayman.

Will Nigh has the role of Faith's timid brother—timid, that is, until his devoted sister convinces him he is as much a man as anybody else. Then he turns wild-cat and whips a whole crew of desperadoes in the fiercest fight ever filmed.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Plainfield officers would like to get in touch with a man known at Moosup as Frank O'Neill, wanted in three states for passing worthless checks. During a stay at a hotel in Moosup, O'Neil said to have passed three checks for $175, $150 and $85, respectively, which have since been established as worthless, and on leaving, April 13, failed to pay a board bill of $43. O'Neil is described as of the smooth operating type, dignified and aloof in his bearing. It is understood that O'Neil is also wanted for passing worthless checks in several Connecticut cities, in New York and in Newark. A warrant has been issued in Plainfield for his arrest.

Another evidence of the nearness of the good old summer time is the announcement elsewhere in this issue of the Sheridan dance palace at Wildwood park this evening, for the first time this season aside from the recent annual concert and ball there under the auspices of Cargill council, K. of C., of Putnam. Manager Sheridan is opening his second season in the new dance palace, the finest of its kind in this section of eastern Connecticut.

Opening this afternoon, Mrs. Lathrop's Cozy Corner tea room and gift shop, 221 No. Main St.—Adv.

Eighteen little guests gathered Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr and Mrs. George J. Heneault on Ithaverson for the fourth birthday observance of Maurice Heneault. There were games and favors and refreshments and joy unbounded for all the little people. Among the guests was Richard Marland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney F. Marland, pal of Maurice and incidentally also observing the fourth anniversary of his birth. Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Heneault for the day were Mr. and Mrs. Omer Champagne and their children, from Woonsocket.

It has occurred to many Danielson people that the state of Connecticut might do something for the benefit of Danielson, while incidentally doing something for its own benefit. The suggestion has to do with improving the approach to the state armory, hidden away over back of the freight house of the New Haven road and approached only over a stretch of street that is either sand or mud the year around.

The state armory is not a mere monument. There is history attached to it. Out of its doors marched the boys in blue who went forth in Danielson's name for service in the Spanish-American war. In another more recent period there again marched out from under its roof the boys of the Thirteenth Coast artillery, a company that later saw hard, active service during the World war in France. Today the armory is the headquarters of one of the best national guard units in the state of Connecticut, ready for any emergency that may summon them to their country's defence.

The armory has meant as much, or more, to the state of Connecticut as it has meant to Danielson. It stills means a great deal. Unfortunately located, it would appear that the approach to it might be made impressive enough to compensate for this handicap. There may be questions of jurisdiction involved, as to improving public highways. There may be other handicaps to receive consideration.

But the fact remains that in all probability the state has ways and means of seeking and obtaining the accomplishment of a worthy end.

A fine paved square and roadway to the armory approach would be a credit to the state and a joy to Danielson. It would brighten the general aspect of the particular central locality to be improved and be a great convenience to everyone passing that way and no less so to the state.

Possibly something will be done about this particular thing in the not too distant future. It would be well worth while for Danielson's boosters to try for it.

And the effort might be seconded by improving the area in the rear of the Exchange block and in the vicinity of the passenger station of the New Haven road. The whole job could be done at very reasonable cost. No great fortune is involved in carrying out one or both proposals.

While there has been some rain since the state fire commissioner issued his instructions that all fire permits be revoked and no others issued, the rain has not been sufficient to eliminate the danger of forest fires. Yet almost nightly one may see outdoor fires burning, consuming rubbish accumulated during the winter. There is a heavy penalty attached to this disobedience of an order of the state fire commissioner. It so happens that fire wardens have orders to cause the arrest and prosecution of any person found guilty of such disobedience. Over and above that is the extreme danger of a fire getting out of control and doing untold damage. Undoubtedly there are many property owners who so feel the urge of spring that they can barely restrain themselves from clearing their property of worthless accummulations by burning such refuse. But in so doing they must sense the fact of the risk they assume, both of punishment and of damaging the property of other people, as well, possibly, as their own.

Today, April 25th, is the last day of grace for those who have not as yet paid their personal taxes. Three days ago there were 200 people in this town who should have paid such taxes, but had not attended to the matter. In the meantime Attorney Louis A. Woisard, collector of personal taxes, has issued a warning that all such taxes not paid by today would constitute a ground for turning the names of the delinquents over to Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill of the town court with a request to proceed against them. This action will be taken. Some of the delinquents have heeded the warning. Others, as usual, have let it pass unnoticed—or have not heard of it. Others were prompt to come across after the "last call" warning and are safe from further disturbance. Attorney Woisard expects a busy period of collecting today. After that he should worry.

A rather rheumatic pony that followed his owner around much after the fashion of a devoted dog, attracted attention in the business section Friday. There was an excuse for the pony being a bit stiff jointed. He is 31 years old, and doesn't even show a bit of interest in a flapper. But he is a show pony just the same—a well trained and very intelligent one and continues, even in his advanced years, to help get a living for himself and his master. The pony was featured in a comedy sketch on the vaudeville bill at the Orpheum theatre at Friday's shows. Making it snappy, it may be said that a married man who has had a night out and is customarily sick the following morning is found in bed at home with someone. The Mrs. is outraged until she discovers the pony is her husband's sleeping companion. Then the pony is introduced to the audience and does his stuff. He's a great pony for such an old fellow.

Stress is placed on the fact that very capable leaders have been obtained for the season at Camp Woodstock this year—this being the tri-county Y. M. C. A. camp in the town of Woodstock, at Black pond. All of the men who have been secured as tent leaders and counsellors are of excellent character as well as versatile in special lines of activity.

The Bulletin must acknowledge an error this morning relative to the pet deer with a bell around its neck that ran away from a family fireside near Oneco and is now running with a wild herd in territory near that place. The deer called up Friday afternoon to say that the statement that it was sitting on a log smoking a cigarette while watching a forest fire was a canard. The deer admitted starting the fire, but not with a cigarette. It was chewing some home-grown tobacco. It said, while pondering deeply over its illfated association with man, and in a moment of indiscretion spat out violently a mouthful of tobacco juice. The crash against a nearby rock caused a spark—and the fire was on. That's all there was to it. The cigarette is hereby exonerated for this particular instance. But a news bulletin Friday afternoon says that anti-tobacco agencies are not paying a cent for items like this.

Says a Rhode Island paper: A few farmers in southwestern Rhode Island are unduly alarmed over the Rose milk bill, according to County Agent Francis Madison of the Southern Rhode Island farm bureau, who states that the recent activities of the Connecticut milk inspection department has caused producers in Greene and Moosup Valley sections to fear that the same condition might prevail in this state, if the measure passes.

No! There is Nothing Just as Good!

"I KNOW because we have used Resinol Ointment ever since our physician first prescribed it years ago. It has never failed to stop itching and relieve skin irritations at once, and usually clears away the trouble in short order."

In thousands of homes Resinol enjoys this same enviable position because it soothes its way into the skin and attacks the real root of the disorder. It works quickly, yet its action is gentle. It costs little and goes a long way. Ask your druggist for Resinol when you want a safe skin treatment.

All rubbish in yards or around property should be at the curbing and will be carried away without cost.

All houses on the east side of the city will be visited Wednesday, April 29.

John Jarvis of Putnam has moved into the Phillips house at Woodstock, which has been vacant for some time. The premises are being improved.

John Kenary retired Thursday from the employ of the Putnam Woolen Company after sixteen years of service as overseer of the weaving department. The employes of whom he has been head held a farewell reception for him, told him in what high esteem he was held and presented him substantial testimonials of their regard. Fifteen minutes before closing time, machines in his department were slowed down and the weavers, numbering more than one hundred, assembled to say goodbye. Charles Price, one of the overseers, told Mr. Kenary that every person in the mill regretted that he was leaving and all hoped that his remaining years would be filled with happiness and pleasant memories. He presented him a purse of $75 to which, he said, every one in the department had contributed. It took some time for all of them to shake hands in farewell, to tell him of their regard and friendship and then came friends from other departments with parting gifts and good wishes.

Mr. Kenary, who is 68, has been a resident of Putnam for 20 years coming here from Worcester, Mass., in 1905 as an overseer for the Day State Worsted company, which occupied the mill where the Waterman Worsted company is now located. After four years he was advanced to overseer under Silas M. Wheelock, then as now, agent of the Putnam Woolen company. Last week he took a vacation of a week but for the remainder of the time he has been on duty whenever a loom was in operation. During all of that time he has won the regard of everyone connected with the mill. He was loyal to the interests of the employes, was fair and considerate to those under his direction.

ASHFORD

The Y. M. C. A. minstrels from South Willington are coming over to Knowlton Memorial Hall, Warrenville, next month to give a lively program. The minstrel show will be followed by three dramatic sketches, "Sense and Nonsense," by John Richard and Walter Mather; "The Battle of Atwoodville," by John Lewes and Fred Rokoony. "The Three O'Clock Train," by John Edwards and George Reynolds. The entertainment is for the joint benefit of Ashford Grange and the Boy Scouts of Willington.

The open grange meeting at Knowlton Memorial Hall, Wednesday evening was largely attended, and proved very interesting and helpful. Mr. B. W. Ellis, head of the Extension Work of the State Agricultural College, Storrs, outlined different plans adaptable to community conditions, and showed many lantern slides of work actually doing in many smaller towns. He said that it was up to the local people to decide what was best adapted to their conditions and opportunities. There were brief addresses also by Prof. A. J. Brundage, and Miss Estella Sprague of the college of special interest to the young people. County Agent Frank A. Davis of Putnam talked about poultry clubs.

That much interest was aroused was shown by the fact that after the addresses many persons remained to ask questions about particular plans. It is understood that the poultry industry is the chief point of interest, and it is felt that by cooperation with the local exchange a market for poultry and eggs could be developed to good advantage.

VOLUNTOWN

Union Hall proved too small Friday evening for the crowd that attended the fourth annual ball of Unity Circle, No. 1256, Companions of the Forest. The affair proved the social event of the year. It was opened with a well rendered concert, vocal and instrumental by the Cranfield and Sutcliffe Orchestra of Westerly, R. I. Companion Miss Irene Magrey and Fred Gilbert of Jewett City who were followed by the officers of the circle in regalia and eighty couples. The regalias and the many colored and handsome gowns made a very beautiful effect as the marchers moved through the intricate evolutions of the march. Near the close of the march Little Miss Arlaie Downing and Master Davis, both in costume, presented the programs to the marchers. The march was followed by twenty dance numbers. The hall was very prettily decorated in the national colors which are also the colors of the order. Lunch was served during the evening. The affair was one of the most successful ever given in Voluntown, and may be summed up in the declaration that the crowd was the largest, the decorations the prettiest, and the music the best.

Credit for the success of the affair is due the following committees: Arrangements, Miss Irene Magrey, chairman, Mrs. Veda Downing, Miss Doyena Dupont, Mrs. Elsie LaChapelle, Mrs. Frieda Downing; floor director, Fred Gilbert, aides, Ernest Dupont, Charles and William Downing; luncheon committee, Mrs. Rose Davis, Mrs. Harriet Dupont, Mrs. Celia Kitchotte, Mrs. Kate Straight.

The new Voluntown brass band held its first rehearsal Monday evening and gives promise of developing into a very successful organization. There are a few veteran band men and several recruits and it looks as though there would be a home town band for Memorial Day. There will be several rehearsals weekly until that date. The old band room in the Kinne block is being used as a band room.

The Voluntown Schools opened Monday morning after a week's vacation.

The Pawtucket Y. M. C. A. track team was recently winners of the two-state championship between Rhode Island and Massachusetts for the third successive year. John P. McDonald, formerly of Voluntown and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McDonald, is manager of the team.

THEATERS IN COPENHAGEN HAVE SUFFERED THIS YEAR

In Copenhagen this year the theater season has been very bad. There have been very few successes and most of the directors have lost money. There is only a small amount of cash among the people and the majority of the population are saving rigidly. They spend money for only the most necessary purposes. A very famous theater, the Betty Nansen, owned and directed by one of the best Danish actresses, will have to close soon because the owner cannot carry on for lack of money. Her friends have started a public collection in an effort to save the theater, but are not expected to succeed. Betty Nansen is known to America, where she was connected with a film company years ago. She played at that time in an Ibsen drama.

NEWLY RICH ARE BLAMED FOR TOKIO CRIME WAVE

A "crime wave" has inundated Japan. There was a time when one was considered safer by far on the streets of Tokio at night than in any other city in the world. Those days have gone and Tokio newspapers have been loudly lamenting their passing.

Furthermore, it is pointed out that crime probably will increase because there is more and more unemployment, and less and less respect for law. Among the influences toward lawlessness is the class known as "narikin," or newly rich. Members of this class openly disregard the laws and express their contempt for the police.

Among crimes which have become prevalent is that of highway robbery the bandits usually extracting their victim's pocketbooks by threatening them with a club.

Italy's Artificial Silk

Manufacture of artificial silk, an industry virtually created since the war has become one of the most important in Italy. In 1922 Italy was seventh in production of artificial silk. This year it is second, producing more than half as much as the United States. It is confident of continued strides. A Turin corporation manufacturing artificial silk has raised its capital from 600,000,000 to 1,000,000,000 lire. (A lire is worth a little more than 4 cents.) It proposes to increase its gross output fourfold. Artificial silk sells at about one-third the cost of real silk, but this price represents between two and three times the actual cost of manufacture. Hence there is an extraordinary profit. The fabric is based on wood fiber. The celluloid element, which formerly made it inflammable, has been rendered innocuous. The better qualities are to the naked eye indistinguishable from real silk. Artificial silk has almost entirely conquered the Italian domestic market. Real silk is now a luxury.

Grapefruit

Just where grapefruit acquired the name by which it is now generally known is a mystery. The fruit is believed to have been called grapefruit because it grows in bunches, somewhat similar to grapes, with as many as four to eighteen fruit on a limb. Pomologists and horticulturists call the fruit "pomelo." The United States department of agriculture, and the American Pomological Society have recognized this latter name as the proper one to describe it. Nor is there any authentic record to show how this name originated. One authority suggests that "pomelo" is derived from pomum melo, the melon apple, while another believes the name is a derivation from that of the Dutch town of Pompelmousses in the Mauritius, near which the fruit was supposed to have been first found many centuries ago.

THE DAYLIGHT SAVING PERIOD

That season of the year has again been reached when it is possible to make a saving of daylight. In keeping with the law in Massachusetts, which the people have refused to change, and in accord with the sentiment of New York City and the large centers in other states through which it operates the New Haven road alters its schedule so as to go on a daylight saving plan commencing Sunday.

This means that throughout southern New England the cities for the most part will be doing business on the same daylight saving basis, which has found so much favor in the past and for which there is the same desire for its continuance. With the railroads running their trains an hour earlier communities will get to business that much earlier instead of denying the best part of the day.

With industries, stores, schools and transportation lines operating under the daylight saving schedule there will be a common participation in the utilization of the longer days. It will be a case where communities may decide for themselves what they prefer to do. They have done so before and they can expect to do so now, but in the interest of uniformity those who follow the larger number will experience the advantages without inconvenience.

Out of respect for the Connecticut law the public timepieces will remain on standard time. Trains will run on standard time but an hour earlier for the accommodation of the daylight savers. With daylight saving going into effect and with a general participation therein there will be a pushing ahead of the clocks one hour Saturday night or Sunday. That being done there need be no further concern for the remainder of the daylight saving period, except to wind the time pieces at regular periods and give heed as to whether they are keeping good time, all of which would be done under any condition.

In going on to daylight saving next week we shall be doing what France and England did some weeks ago.

SECRET AGREEMENTS

Whether it concerns nations or individuals it is an unfortunate situation when stories are given widespread publicity when they are without foundation, or even when half truths are grossly distorted and made to infer something which is not so.

It is therefore an important statement which is made by Amoassador Tsuneo Matsudaira of Japan in a public address this week when he denies that there is any secret treaty between Japan and Russia. He was speaking before organizations as a representative of Japan. He was conscious, as well as others, of the fact that there had recently been circulated the story that a secret understanding had been reached between his country and soviet Russia. He appreciated what the effect of such a statement would be, the light in which it would place Japan and he saw the advisability of branding the incorrect statement as such while it was still fresh in mind. That he had said the same thing to the authorities at Washington, previously, is most probable.

But while he was denying the truth of the claim, he also took occasion to point out that Japan recognizes its responsibilities under the Washington agreement. This he made plain when he said: "Secret diplomacy, gentlemen, is a thing of the past. It is an idea repugnant to the spirit of the treaties made at the Washington conference in which we are a party. I am happy to be able to assure you that Japan has no secret treaty or agreement with Russia or with any other country."

That puts the story in a nutshell. It dissipates the suspicion which would naturally fall upon Japan if the story concerning the secret agreement was permitted to go unnoticed or without answer. It was a timely statement for the purpose of spiking what would appear to be an attempt to throw more fuel on that fire which some are constantly stoking for the development of friction between nations which are and have been friendly and which intend to remain so.

EXAMINATIONS ABROAD

With the holding of a conference of representatives of government bureaus relative to the perfection of a plan for the examination of immigrants at points of embarkation, it can be expected that a long needed change will soon be put into effect.

The purpose is to relieve the congestion that repeatedly occurs at the immigration stations in this country and to overcome the necessity of the round trip across the ocean by those who are not able to meet the conditions which are called for by our immigration laws.

The plan involves no change in our immigration restrictions, but they will be applied before reaching these shores. In this connection suggestions have been made to the effect that the examinations could be made abroad, or they could be made on the steamers while crossing the ocean. In either case this would relieve the situation at the immigration station, but it can only through the examination before setting out that the greatest benefit would accrue to the would be immigrants. Examination on the steamers would not overcome the expense and hardships of the double ocean trip, though it would prevent the waits and congestion at the immigration stations.

Examinations abroad will mean an additional expense in connection with immigration, but it is to be realized that to a large degree such expense applied abroad will eliminate much that goes for the same service on this side of the water. Secretary Davis is even so enthusiastic about it that he believes the change will eventually result in the elimination of immigrant stations at the port of entry, since those who are permitted to sail would carry certificates authorizing their entrance.

It has been a long time coming but progress is being made in the right direction. We are applying restrictions and enforcing our immigration laws at the right point when the examinations are made before sailing for this country.

THE PUBLIC PEN

For the accomodation of those who go to the postoffice to address their envelopes, write their cards or their letters, the post office department has arranged for the pruchase of 6,000,000 pens, which are expected to serve for the year. Considering the amount of matter handled, or perhaps the amount of writing done in a postoffice, that doesn't seem to be extravagant, and certainly not when the usual condition of a postoffice pen is considered.

You probably have been numbered among the disgusted who have had to work with the pen that is found at a post office writing desk, and you may admit to yourself that there is need for the millions of pens that have been ordered. But on the other hand how much consideration does the user of a post office pen have for the others who may want to use it? Some are considerate, but others are not. It can be appreciated that the Postmaster General knows what he is talking about when he says "It is almost impossible to overcome the tendency of some patrons to use pens for punching holes in blotters and papers, spearing desks and using them for miniature hammers." Probably you have witnessed the post office pen being put to all kinds of uses, from a lever to a plaything, except that for which it was intended.

The public pen is very likely to receive such treatment, but much more so in the case of the postoffice pen than those in banks, for it is a different crowd that assembles there. Different use is made of the writing apparatus and it is not improbable that different care may be given to the writing desks and their equipment. The reputation of a postoffice pen is long established, but there may be some question whether the provision of twice as many would actually mean the availability of a satisfactory post office pen.

RREMOVING COLLINS' BODY

The removal of the body of Floyd Collins from the cave where he was trapped and died has been attended with much less publicity than the effort at rescue. When it was found that he could not be gotten out alive, that death had occurred before rescuers reached him, the decision to permit his body to rest where he had been trapped was regarded as a wise one, and the case in which he had risked and lost his life was made his tomb.

Although all thought of the affair being a hoax was eliminated by the finding of his body and the establishment of the fact that death had preceded his rescuers, there appears to have been a revival of the story that there was nothing to the affair at all, that the deceased was not in the cave and that the whole affair was a publicity stunt. Proof against any such claim seems to have been possessed beyond any doubt, but that seems to have been an important reason for the removal of the body from what was regarded as the final resting place.

The efforts of the brother to accomplish this shows that what was put forth as a dangerous undertaking at the time of his death was accomplished without any difficulty, even to the removal of the stone which held his foot.

The removal of the body eliminates the unusual in regarding to the Collins burial place, but it seems to have been a bit far fetched to have resorted to the exhumation solely for the purpose of settling the question that Collins actually was in the cave and died there. That was established and varified by the authorities at the time, and no amount of gosaip and talk would have changed it.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Life is everywhere full of contrasts: some of them are very tragic. It may not be a daily experience, but time and again it has been known to happen that where there is a wedding, at same time and at the very next house there is a funeral. A little child has been known to enter a home at the same moment that another has been called home. Think of a boy graduating with valedictory honors at college at the same hour that his brother was hung in a penitentiary! This once happened but it was not known till long afterwards. On March 4 of this year, Washington was in a blaze of splendor during the inauguration of President Coolidge. It was a time for general rejoicing. It was a season of happiness. At that very hour Berlin was draped in black as a token of their sorrow in laying away their beloved president. He had risen from saddle-maker to be chief executive by dint of ability. His death was a national calamity.

In these days there is not only much violation of the prohibition laws, but much greater violation of the laws of truth in regard to the greater amount of intoxicants made and sold since the Volstead act came into vogue. No one questions the widespread breaking of this act, but the violation is greatly exaggerated. The greatest damage lies in the fact that these wild statements are accepted by the uninformed as accurate. In view of this extensive and baseless propaganda it is refreshing to hear so sane and competent an investigator as Professor Carver of Harvard university show that the total consumption of alcoholic drinks in the United States is so greatly reduced that profound economic effects have resulted. His great address last month before the New York Academy of Political Science made a profound impression according to the public press.

Everything considered is it bane or blessing that we cannot see eye to eye in so many matters? Of course you will say that it is a blessing if the question at issue is clearly a bad one. The communist may whip himself up to believe that stealing is all right because the world's wealth has been largely acquired by unjust methods. Pagans are tremendously in earnest in carrying out their idolatrous rites in the holy name of religion. They will defend those rites and ceremonies to the last atom of their strength. They may be perfectly sincere though benighted. But many of them have seen the light by having the other side presented. There are, however, many questions that admit of argument on both sides and fair-minded people will be perfectly willing to hear what can be said on the other side. Controversy, rightly conducted and in the right spirit, may be helpful because informing.

Is it not amazing that our Lord in those last 40 days said so very little about his second coming in bodily form if it is a matter of prime importance! Clearly some of the disciples wanted more definite information on the subject, but He very kindly warned them against pinning their faith to definite times and places, and the little knowledge we have in the matter is due to the kenly logical and argumentative mind of Saint Paul. But, a kindred matter did Jesus make clear in those last hours and that was their waiting in Jerusalem until the Spirit came. Here was a real transforming power. Take Peter during Passion week. How he quailed before the accusation of a young damsel that he was "this man's disciple!" He denied it with an oath which showed a cowardly streak. But when the Spirit got hold of him the coward left and never came back. From this time on he was a hero.

Speaking of the development of the heroic in the Apostle Peter reminds one of the Carlyle's Heroes and Hero Worship. As we read the names of those whom Carlyle selects as heroes, most of them like Luther, Knox, Dante, Cromwell had the spirit of the Son of Man. His spirit working in them was the basis of their heroism. Carlyle, though a professed agnostic himself, seems to have a great admiration for the heroic in Puritanism, and history certainly justifies him. As an illustration, take those men who on April 19, 1775—exactly 150 years ago—who have forever made the names of Lexington and Concord immortal by firing the first guns in the Revolutionary war. These stern Puritans started a political earthquake that shook the world. And out of that unequal strife was born representative government, that has ever since been slowly permeating the whole lump. Political justice was born in the battle of Lexington and Concord.

Not far in point of time from April 19, which marks the first engagement of the war of the Revolution, is April 25, set apart by most of the gulf states as Confederate Memorial day. The one marks the birth hour of a nation; the other marks the failure of the attempt to disintegrate that nation. But as time goes on the spirit of magnanimity grows. We no longer cherish any bitter feelings toward those who fell fighting for "the lost cause." We are willing to admit that there was sincerity among the rank and file of southern boys who faced the Boys in Blue in mortal combat. Neither side had any monopoly of bravery. Their blood mingled in a common soil—the soil of a now united nation. We of the north must not forget the havoc war made in the south! And the greatest of all was the loss of man power. Let them put wreaths on the graves of the heroic death on April 25, as we do on May 30.

Some of the things in themselves seemingly small are virtually those that keep civilization from collapsing. To illustrate: The other day a little boy was being badgered by a somewhat bigger lad on the street. A girl came along from the same school somewhat bigger than either. She at once took in the situation. Her keen black eyes flashed fire and with the utmost deliberation she marched up to the bully and gave him a hard slap in the face and used language that was at least vigorous. Now the bully as was quite natural slunk away muttering. Now what did it all mean? The weak roughly treated by the strong; one of the travedies of this old world of ours ever since the days of Cain and Abel. It also showed the sense of justice that feels its divine mission to protect the weak. America did the same thing when she said to Spain, "you shall not maltreat little Cuba." The spirit shown by the girl is what keeps the moral world intact.

If science had done nothing else it has justified its existence by writing the word "error" on the implements of war. How simple it was in primitive times, and even ludicrous, when the fighters banged one another with cudgels, or, standing at a respectful distance, pelted each other with stones. Bows and arrows were more or less effective but they never exterminated a nation. The discovery of the uses and properties of iron made war more terrible. The invention of fire arms made swords, spears and javelins look like toys. But iron in the shape of steel was terrible and cruel. Now we have poison gas and airships that are putting steel out of commission. The next war—if we have one—will be the most terrible of all because of the probable use that will be made of electricity. With this "wars and rumor of wars must cease."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Great Appeals to the American Spirit

Mr. Editor:

"Great men have been among us;
Hands that penned
And tongues that uttered wisdom."

These memorable lines have sounded in our ears since our childhood. Have they ever really included women? Let us take a look at their application to men and women of today. Surely those who were present at the Monday evening session of the Daughters of the American Revolution and heard the two remarkably inspiring addresses given by President Coolidge and Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the Daughters, must have had to acknowledge that women of this 20th century had come into their own and did speak words of wisdom—that covered a wide range of thought, that had to do with what would have been relegated to the province of men when the above lines were penned—patriotism, it was the central thought of both addresses, expressed in different ways.

President Coolidge the first speaker, after paying a very high tribute to the noble mission of the Daughters, to which he had given his usual careful consideration launched out on the central thought of his address—"that the ideal rule of nations rests with the people, that there is only one way in modern civilization with its broad privileges of the franchise, with its representive legislative bodies, to avoid the constant interposition of the government into practically all the affairs of the peoples and that is for the people to adopt a correct course of action to provide the proper standards of conduct by their own motion. If they do not want government through public action, they must provide it through private action. That is the true ideal self-government. If the people wish to be unhampered by government restrictions, they can secure that privilege. But they cannot secure it by abolishing government. They can only secure it by adopting a thorough system of individual self-government. If they do not wish to have it imposed from without, they must themselves impose it from within." This presentation of state rights was indeed as timely as it was illuminating. During the past few months the child labor amendment has been buried beneath an avalanche of state rights and resentment against public interference. It was to me refreshing to have the subject put into its true perspective, as our wise president knows so well how to do it. No higher interpretation of patriotism could be given by tongue or pen.

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook's idea of patriotism was quite as statesmanlike although dealt concretely upon another side of it—the side of national security and is quite worthy of being placed side by side of that of our president, for it shows that there is no sex in the beauty and strength of mental capacity, when it touches upon the vital question of the preservation of our beloved country.

Mrs. Cook said: "We Americans are a peace-loving people, whose history is one of avoiding warfare, until forced into it, though there is at present too great a tendency among many of our people to have America lead the world in readiness to promote peace by disarmament, without due consideration of the necessary provision for security and defense.

However well intentioned this country may be, either upon its own accord or as a member of an international body organized for the prevention of conflict, it can not prevent war. So long as there is no means of preventing war there must be preparation against it. As a nation we must realize that reliance upon right and logic in lieu of proper defense is an invitation for us to be preyed upon. Nothing could be farther from the aims of our organization than to commit our nation to a militaristic program but it is the duty of every citizen to safeguard the United States against aggression by helping to support and maintain land, sea and air forces for our reasonable protection. To this policy Daughters of the American Revolution are solemnly committed. We furthermore believe that it is the duty that every American citizen should be fully informed as to the measure of national protection which is necessary—and should be increasing in our efforts to see that it is provided by congress of the United States."

The hearty applause that greeted this pronouncement proved that her audience was in accord. These two addresses will go on record as the strongest and loftiest appeals to the American spirit that has ever been made upon the rostrum of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Out of the abundance of their hearts these two speakers poured out the living waters that will nourish our republic and build it up into the perfect ideal of which our forefather's had a vision. The symbol of what is to be was pictured in the beautiful flag which the Sons of the American Revolution presented to the daughters, side by side the two organizations will work for the complete whole.

WHAT MAC MILLAN HOPES TO EXPLORE

First announcement has been made of the detailed plans for the MacMillan Arctic expedition, under the auspices of the national Geographic society, as submitted to the Society by Commander Donald B. MacMillan.

In addition to exploring the million square miles between Alaska and the North Pole Commander MacMillan, with the aid of the U. S. Navy planes, plans to make reconnoissance flights over other unknown regions which the eye of man has never yet beheld.

The other unexplored areas where flights with the Navy's amphibian planes are planned include the central part of Ellsmere Island and Grant Land, the central part of the great Greenland ice cap, the entire interior of Baffin Island, and the northern part of Labrador.

Why Planes Are Practical

"I believe that the practical way of erasing these unknown areas on the maps of today is by use of airplanes and particularly the new type of plane known as the amphibian which is capable of landing safely on water, ice or land," Commander MacMillan said.

"To carry out this work successfully, I plan to establish a base at Utah, about 700 miles from the north pole, which a good strong ship can reach by August 1. It is my purpose to leave Wiscasset, Maine, about June 27, to proceed along the Nova Scotia coast to Sydney, there to take on our coal supply for the season, and to continue up through the Gulf of St. Lawrence, to the Labrador coast, and from about 55 degrees north latitude cross to the Danish town of Julianehaab, South Greenland.

"With Julianehaab as a base we shall study the remains of the old Norse settlements established in southern Greenland some 1,500 years ago. The best authority on Greenland today states there are there about 100 farms of the early Norsemen, also stone churches, and from this point the Norsemen sailed away for the discovery of America. After investigating and studying these ruins, especially the type of houses built by the Norsemen, we shall proceed north to the town of Godthaab.

"Back of this town there are about ninety farms and some 24 stone churches. The special reason for visiting and studying these ruins is to prove or disprove a similarity between the houses built there by the Norsemen and those that are found in Labrador, reported by the Eskimos to be built by a strange people who came in from the sea in open boats without masts and without sails. I believe that we ought to find in Labrador the first authentic proofs of these Norsemen who came to America some 300 years before the time of Columbus.

Planes Will Carry Food

"From Godthaab we shall proceed up the coast to Etah, this to be a base for the exploration work to be done by the amphibian planes. From Etah oil and supplies can be relayed to Cape Thomas Hubbard, the most northern point of Axel Heiberg Land at the edge of the Polar Sea. The distance is roughly, 250 miles. From Cape Hubbard to the center of the great unknown area is roughly 600 miles, which will make a total of 1,200 miles to be covered by the planes. It is hoped by fastening extra fuel tanks on the planes to cover this distance in a continuous flight. If ice conditions are favorable, other attempts may be made north and south of this direct line, thus eliminating thousands of square miles of unknown area from the maps of the world of today.

"Food will be taken in the planes for several days of exploration of any lands that may be found in this area.

"Following our return to the ship at Etah, other trips will be attempted north to the center of Ellsmere Island and Grant Land to Cape Columbia at the edge of the Polar Sea, where Peary's record is to be found, stating that he reached the North Pole on April, 6, 1909.

Flight of 680 Miles

"The great Greenland ice cap, 500,000 square miles of area, is supposed to reach a height of about 10,000 feet. No one has ever visited that part of the ice cap between 75 degrees and 80 degrees north latitude, the center of which is, roughly, 340 miles from Etah. This will mean a continuous flight of 680 miles, which can be accomplished in about five hours. The condition of the Greenland ice cap is such, however, that our planes should have no difficulty in making a landing every few minutes. This work done in the north, it is my purpose to return southward following the eastern shores of Ellsmere Island to Bylot Island on the northern shores of Baffin Island.

"In Baffin Island we have one of the most interesting lands in the north, some 600 miles long, 200 miles wide, and yet unexplored, although it was discovered in about 1,500. On the maps of today there are a few lakes. I am informed by the Eskimos that there are thousands and thousands of lakes in the interior of this great land.

Seals, Caribou and Geese.

"The Eskimos say that many of these are filled with seals that come up the river from the sea; also their waters are covered with many kinds of water birds. Here, we are also informed, roam big herds of Caribou, and here also is believed to be the hitherto unknown breeding ground of the Blue Goose.

"The Eskimos say that here there are enormous numbers of Lesser Snow Geese, so many in fact that as one approaches certain areas, the land looks to be covered with snow. There is a big scientific work to be done in the interior of Baffin Island.

"The interior of northern Labrador is practically unknown; therefore, we shall proceed southward to Nachvak Bay and from there fly into the Labrador interior to determine its character and the height of its mountains. From the planes accurate mapping cameras will be used and also motion picture cameras. This should give a comprehensive survey of all lands covered by airplane."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

LIFE ABUNDANT

"I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10. John's is the gospel of life. Forty-three texts we find enumeration there, all of them speaking of life in one form or another, and the possession of the spirit of this gospel in the secret of victory over sin. It is when we let Christ daily into our lives that the power of sin is loosened over us, it is when we give Him supreme control that we are victorious. The Mediterranean is really a tideless sea, and yet if you stand upon its shore you will frequently notice what seems to be a tide and all because there is a channel between the Mediterranean and the Atlantic, and what appears to be a tide to you is but the coming in Ocean. So long as the channel is kept open and free there will be this apparent rise and fall of the waters of the Mediterranean. If the channel could be closed up then the sea would be changed. So long as we keep the channel open between us and God, His life will flow into us and through us literally wave upon wave as the waters of the Atlantic flow into the Mediterranean. So the picture of the Christian as given us in the gospel is, righteousness in Matthew; service in Mark love in Luke and life in John, all of which we may have and possessing which we are complete in Him.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Charles F. D. Belden, who has been chosen for election to the presidency of the American Library Association when that organization meets in annual session in the city of Seattle next July, is director of the Boston Public library and the outstanding librarian of New England where the library movement had its rise and its first large development. In recent years Mr. Belden's assistance has been much sought in national library affairs. His career began when a student at the Harvard Law school, he catalogued the Harvard Law School Library, an undertaking of large proportions. It still remains as his most conspicuous bibliographical work. His services in the administration of the Massachusetts State Library during a critical period and in the Boston Public Library, together with his work as chairman of the board of free public library commissioners of Massachusetts, have shown great fruitage and received steadily growing recognition.

Are You Discouraged?

Alma Gluck Had to Earn Her Way.

Not until after she had started her career as a stenographer did Reba Pierson realize that she had a voice worth cultivating.

Born in Bucharest, Rumania, she was brought by her parents to this country when six years old. Reared in the poor lower East Side of New York she spent her girlhood days in the crowded tenement district where comforts were few and the pinch of poverty was frequently felt.

After attending public schools she made her way through Normal College of New York and Union College at Schenectady, N. Y. Funds were needed at home and she learned stenography and became a private secretary in a business office.

Although fond of music she had not thought of a musical career. Then while she was working came the dream of being a singer. By rigid economy she saved every cent possible and took lessons outside of her working hours. For three years she worked, saved and studied.

Unable to reach her teacher's studio at the usual time one morning, she was told to come after she had finished work, her instructor forgetting that he had invited Gatti-Casazza, Amato, Toscanni and others of the Metropolitan Opera Company to be his guests that evening. Invited to sing before the guests, her hesitant efforts won enthusiastic praise and soon afterward she was given an opportunity to appear at the Metropolitan.

Making her debut there at 22 as Sophie in Massenet's Werther, she won instant recognition for Alma Gluck, her stage name. She appeared in La Boheme, Orfeo, Rigoletto, Pagliacci and other roles, making twenty appearances in eleven operas.

At the end of three years with the Metropolitan, she resolved to broaden her knowledge and took her first lessons in Europe, studying for a season under Madame Sembrich in Berlin.

Returning to this country she abandoned the stage for concert and her tour of this country spread her fame as a lyric soprano and established her reputation as a lieder singer.

At 28 she married Efrem Zimbalist, the violinist and they have frequently appeared together in concert. Today Alma Gluck is one of the most popular singers in the country.

Stories That Recall Others

It Might Do

"What do you want," asked a library attendant of a little girl who stood at the desk.

"I want to get a book for my sister. Have you got 'The Life of Christ'? I heard her say once she wanted to read it."

"Have you got 'Pilgrim's Progress?' I guess that will do," said the youngster.

"I am sorry but all the copies of that book have gone to the bindery."

"Well, then gimme 'The Plastic Age,'" came in a resigned tone.

Mrs. A anxiously awaits the weekly letter from her son in the west, and thinking he feels the same with her, writes him the news of his home town as soon as she can.

A few days ago, restless and lonely, she sat down to read the son's letter over again, but much to her surprise the letter could not be found. In her hurry to answer the letter and get it out on an early mail, she picked up the wrong one and sealed it. It was the letter the son wrote her, sealed in an envelope addressed him. A reply has not yet been received.

Greek Slaves in Turkey

According to reports submitted to the League of Nations, upwards of 1,000 Greek and Armenian women and children are retained as slaves in the interior of Turkey. Europeans who have investigated this question assert that about 10,000 of these slaves can be brought out for approximately $40 each. Five dollars buys liberty, and the remainder is required for medical care, food and traveling expenses. Charitable societies engaged in attempts to free these Greeks and Armenians assert that the league has not given the financial assistance it should give, especially since the Treaty of Lausanne safeguards the rights of Christians living in Turkey.

MAYOR ISSUES PROCLAMATION ON N. E. CIGAR WEEK

The following proclamation was issued Friday by Mayor Waters:

The week of April 26th to May 2nd has been designated "New England Cigar week" by the Cigarmakers International Union. It is a drive to boost New England made cigars and to try and have the people of New England support its industries by purchasing cigars made in New England.

There are over 50,000 persons employed in the cigar industry in New England and approximately $8,000,000 are paid to these workers in wages annually. The cigar manufacturers of New England paid the federal government $6,000,000.00 in stamps and import taxes in 1924. There is also a large acreage of tobacco grown in New England so you can readily see what the cigar industry means to New England.

Right here in Norwich we have a cigar industry established and all it needs is a boost to make it boom. The only way that can be done is by the people of Norwich patronizing "Home Industry." Cigars made in Norwich are not inferior goods but are made from the choicest of tobacco by expert hand workmen under clean and healthful conditions.

In view of these facts I issue this proclamation to urge the people of Norwich to support the local cigarmakers in this move to make Norwich a bigger and better place to live in by purchasing cigars made in Norwich.

MILO R. WATERS,
Mayor.

"Drowned" In a Cell

Yells and shouts from the cell room at police headquarters ordinarily attract no particular attention generally being indications of over-indulgence in the oh-bejoyful fluid, but the unusual persistence of one shouter Friday night finally induced officer Patrick Murphy to take a look to see what the matter was.

The escaping water had already covered the floor to the depth of about two inches when the officer arrived and shifted the man to another and dryer cell.

MRS. RUTH SUFFERING FROM ATTACK OF NERVES

New York, April 24—Mrs. Herman [illegible] Ruth suffered a complete nervous breakdown in the entrance to St. [illegible] hospital at 5 o'clock this afternoon while on her way to pay her [illegible] visit to her husband, who is a patient there.

Mrs. Ruth was taken to a room in the same wing of the hospital in which [illegible] husband is confined by order of [illegible] Dean A.G., physician for the Yankee team had been in attendance on Mr. Husband.

Mrs. Ruth was accompanied to the hospital by a Mrs. White. At the entrance to the hospital they met Dr. [illegible], who expressed anxiety as to Mrs. Ruth's state of health. While talking to Dr. King, Mrs. Ruth became faint. She was placed in a wheel chair and hurried to a room on the second floor.

An examination showed she had suffered a nervous breakdown and was in need of a week's complete rest.

Upon admission to St. [illegible]'s hospital his wife had been [illegible] communication with him. Both Ruth and his wife probably will be discharged in a few days. About the same time it was said.

Worry about her husband's condition caused Mrs. Ruth's breakdown, doctors said.

Continued improvement in Ruth's condition was reported by Dr. King.

RIVERVIEW OPENS SEASON AGAINST MECHANICSVILLE

The Riverview club will open the season this afternoon at the State hospital. They will have the Mechanicsville A. A., as their opponents. Little is known of the visiting aggregation, only that they have been writing to Manager Bill Donovan for several weeks, challenging and clamoring for a game so that he has finally decided to bring them here and see what it's all about. The Riverview club will present one of the strongest lineups that has ever represented the local institution, and will take the field equipped with new uniforms and other paraphanerlia second to none in the state.

Joe Belair, veteran of many diamond conflicts or Joe Hamel, formerly of the American Thread will do the catching and on the mound will be the despectacled Tony West, well known local southpaw. His fast ball and change of pace will make many of the semi-pro clubs in the state look mediocre. He is in better condition this season than ever before and will be heard from later on. Harry Mills, veteran third baseman, has been shifted over to first base to take the place of Couillard who has gone to the Socony club of New London. Mills is a good hitter and if the change does not effect his fielding he will be kept there. Eddie Burns the diminutive flash will be missed at the keystone sack in the opening game. He will probably be in the lineup next Saturday against the International Silver Co., of Meriden. Eddie is on the sick list suffering from grip. Leo Normandin, formerly of the American Thread, will play shortstop. Mundy is one of the state's leading athletes, and this year promises to be one of his best.

Jack Sank, former American Chain, Norwich K.-C., and Frederick, Md., (Blue Ridge League) will take care of the hot corner. Little introduction is needed for Jack as he is one of the heaviest hitters that ever wore a Riverview uniform. A new man by the name of Duffy, recently with Newark International league, will patrol left field. He bats and throws from the port side and looks like one of the season's finds. In center field will be Harry Noel, veteran of last year's club. Noel is a clever fielder, and from all appearances, should have a good season with the stick. Right field will be taken care of by Jack Roy. Roy is a relief twirler and will play the outfield when he is not doing mound duty.

Paul Zemke, who has twirled many games for the club when the young fellows have weakened will again don a uniform and do the relief twirling and coaching.

RUBIEN ORDERS PROBE OF NURMI'S EXPENSES

New York, April 24—Investigation by the Central and Mid-western associations of the Amateur Athletic union into the charges that excessive expense demands were made by Willie Ritola for the Finnish running management of Paavo Nurmi and stars to compete in track meets at Chicago, and Des Moines was ordered today by Frederick W. Rubien, chairman of the national registration committee of the A. A. U.

Telegrams authorizing the investigation to be started at once were sent by Rubien to Louis B. Reitmann of Chicago, chairman of the central association registration committee, and G. P. Wendell, of Omaha, Neb., chairman of the mid-western association registration committee.

Reitmann was called upon to investigate the charges that "the University of Chicago had been requested to pay $1,000 for the expenses of Ritola and Nurmi to appear in the national interscholastic meet June 5."

Wendell was instructed to look into the statements attributed to Kenneth L. Wilson, director of athletics at Drake University, that Nurmi and Ritola would not run at the Drake relays because "their demand for excessive expense money was refused."

ACADEMY INVADES CAMP OF BULKELEY TEAM TODAY CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

The Academy squad which has seen two stiff days of hard practice will travel to New London today and if they have their way will return home victorious over the so-called fast Bulkeley nine. The Academy team is composed of a determined bunch of players and when a team is determined, it is usually hard to beat. The fans are assured of one thing, that is, the Academy will give Bulkeley a far better game than a season than an Academy nine has been accustomed to give the New London boys ... the past. The players after their hard practice will look well and each one is confident of handling his position in a creditable and accurate way.

It is true that Bulkeley has won from the Academy for the last few years, but whether they can repeat remains to be seen. The local high schoolers are bringing some stiff opposition for the Whaling City boys to solve and the unexpected may be accomplished. A well-rounded Red and White team both on the defensive and offensive will appear to face Bulkeley at Morgan Park.

Bulkeley may be confident that they will win, having recently won from Morris High. Morris High and the Academy are two different opponents, Morris High comes from New York and the Academy boys from Norwich. The game will be full of thrillers and the spectators may be treated to see the Bulkeley nine go down to defeat.

The veterans of the Bulkeley nine such as Sheffield, Daniels, Booth, Barry and numerous others who are so noted for their heavy hitting will have to face a fine pitcher in Greene. Greene is capable of holding his opponents and will feed the Bulkeley batters with something more than speed. Jarvis, due to an injury, will probably take his position in center field and not as pitcher. Carroll is handling the hot corner in regular big league fashion and it is doubted whether any hits will get through him. Hinrichs, one of the sluggers of the team will catch for Greene and has the intention of crossing the home plate a few times. Busch, playing left field has his off and on days sometimes but Busch is determined to make today his on day. Burke will play the spital sack with Carlin playing on the next base to him. Cimokowski will play shortstop, having played the position in a fine way. Lastly, Captain MacGowan will handle the right side of the field. Capt. MacGowan is also one of those dangerous hitters who intends to do damaging work with the stick. With a team composed of the above material the N. F. A. ventures to New London. No matter what the outcome of the contest will be, the lads from the Rose of New England will play hard ball to the finish.

No matter who twirls for Bulkeley, whether it be Capt. Daniel or Parisi, he will have to face a team that is out to sock the pill right and left, and it will take some mighty good pitching to hold the Norwich nine. The Bulkeley team this year is not what it was last year. There are many weak places on the team. Such boys as Jumping Joe Barry will be kept jumping throughout the contest, in fact the whole Bulkeley team will have to play ball from the moment the umpire cries "play ball", to the very finish of the game.

A large delegation is expected to travel to New London today to back the home team and they certainly will be convinced that the N. F. A., has a team worthy to be backed and worthy to represent Norwich.

BULKELEY TEAM EXPECTS TO BEAT ACADEMY
(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 24—Bulkeley is not disparaging the ability of the Red and White outfit, and is awaiting patiently for the hour when the first call for "Play Ball" by the umpire is called.

In fact there has not been as much evidence of rivalry manifested in previous games between these ancient rivals as was evidenced today. Reports emanating from the Rose City indicate that Bulkeley is in for rough going. But the entire nine men who are to represent Bulkeley in the battle tomorrow promise the entire Norwich team a free ride on the roller coaster as Lou Sobol puts it. That means that Bulkeley will be out for a victory, with malicious intent to maul all the Norwich twirlers have to offer in the way of curves and speed.

The Bulkeley team worked out before one of the largest groups of students and townspeople who ever took trouble to witness the finishing touches to the Bulkeley practice. There is no evidence of over-confidence in the Bulkeley camp. Captain Tillie Daniels has so much regard for the ability of the Academy that he will probably start a third string pitcher, Montali for the game tomorrow. All eyes are focused upon the teams, for it has been quite a number of years ago when the game between the Academy and Bulkeley was taken as much to heart as the game which is to be played Saturday. The inner defense of the Bulkeley machine performed better than ever before this season in the work out this afternoon. There was more smoothness in the movement and more power to the hitting in batting practice. All in all, Bulkeley is ready to take on the Academy, with its heavy hitting crew of wreckers, and a smooth combination of defensive players.

Eddie Burns, the well known second sacker from the Riverview club commented upon the Bulkeley baseball team of 1925. As Eddie is somewhat of an authority upon baseball his statement may be regarded as good "Bulkeley has a ball club that is in more instances than one as good, if not better, than some semi pro teams. There is everything that a coach may desire of a baseball team if not more, considering that he has no chance to pick them from a large field of good ball players. And as far as a comparison goes between the team the Academy player, Pratt High, and the nine played by Bulkeley on Saturday, which I witnessed at Morgan Park, I would say that the Morris High had a team of finished players but had to accept defeat at the hands of a better nine."

Bulkeley will line up with the regular team with the exception of a single change, Tillie Daniels being stationed in right field in preference to Falvey. The batting order will be as follows: Barry, 2b; Hutchison, 3; Sheffield, c; Booth, cf; Gattano, ss; Daniels, rf; Montali, lf; Mansfield 1b; Parisi, p. The game will be handled by Paddy Sullivan and Billy Nellen both former Eastern Leaguers, and their ability on the diamond will speak for itself as to their ability to arbitrate.

SOCONY TEAM PLAYS COLORED STARS SUNDAY

The Socony team will cross bats with the fast Colored Stars of Hartford on Sunday, at New London.

In having the Colored Stars as opponents the Socony team will have to play their best game as this team last season won forty-four out of fifty games played and also defeated the Miles Standish team of Worcester for the championship of New England. The probable lineup of these two teams will be as follows:

Socony B. B. C.—Steve Posick, p and mgr.; Bill Johnston, 6, Red Scroggins, p.; Eddie Burns, 2b.; Lefty Couillard, 1b.; Frank McGody, ss.; Oscar Foote, 3b.; Tom Driscoll c.; Chippie Harran, rf.; Fred Harris, c.; D. C. Beaney, lf.; utility men, C. C. Clark, Al Iverson, Bill Wennrich, George Allen.

Colored Stars, Hartford—Pitchers, "Cannonball" Strong, Jackson, Glover, Dawkins, Knighton and Barner; Baby Coleman, 1b.; Boly Harris, 2b.; Hickman, 3b.; C. Willis, ss.; Hy Robb, rf.; Dinkins, lf. C. Dawkins, c.

It is needless to say that the game will be full of thrills and also humor, for all colored teams besides being ballplayers, are also actors and humorists.

MISS COLLETT FAILS TO IMPRESS ON ENGLISH LINKS

London, April 24—(By the A. P.)—Playing somewhat below her best form, and handicapped by an erratic partner and the climatic vagaries of an English spring day, Miss Glenna Collett, former American women's champion, failed to finish among the leaders in a 36-hole medal play foursome competition at Moor Park. She was paired with Mrs. Dudley Charles, of England.

Except for her driving and for occasional recovery shots of true brilliance Miss Collett seldom rose to the high standard of play of which she has proved herself capable, although she has been in England but a few days. This morning over the West course of Moor Park's three golfing layouts Miss Collett and Mrs. Charles took an 86, which put them well toward the front of the field, but after luncheon, over the longer and more difficult high course they frittered away shots on the greens in a woeful way and turned in a card of 93, their medal aggregate for the day's sport being 178. This put them seven strikes behind the leaders, Mrs. Fowler and Miss Roberts, with a dozen pairs or more between them and the winning pair.

MARKET WAS DULL

New York, April 24—Contrasting price movements characterized the relatively dull stock market, weakness of the Northwestern rails and strength of the public utilities being the outstanding features.

Establishing of the highest quotation in ten years by demand sterling in anticipation of an early announcement of Great Britain's return to the gold standard overshadowed all other financial developments of the day.

Weekly mercantile reviews, while stating that fundamental conditions are sound, lay stress on the declining tendency of commodity prices and the failure of spring trade to come up to early expectations. The increase in the local federal reserve bank ratio was attributed to the shipment of funds from the interior as indicated by a gain of $45,000,000 in gold reserves.

Firmness of United States Steel common, which closed fractionally higher at 114 5-8 after selling nearly a point above that figure was in anticipation of a favorable quarterly earnings report next Tuesday. Independent stocks showed little change with the exception of Ludlum, which fell back a point on profit taking after its extreme rise of 7 points earlier in the week. Baldwin dropped from 112 7-8 to 110 1-2, where it was off 1 1-2 points on the day. American Can closed fractionally lower at 171 3-8.

Union Pacific was hammered down nearly 4 points to 133 1-4, the lowest price since last June, in further reflection of the relatively poor earnings report for the first quarter. Northern Pacific touched a new low for the year at 56 3-4 and Great Northern preferred at 70. Chicago and Alton common, Erie second preferred and Rutland preferred, also broke through their previous 1925 minimum quotations.

Net losses of a point or more also were recorded by Erie common, Delaware and Hudson, Rock Island, Norfolk and Western, Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, Atlantic coast line, Canadian Pacific, Chicago and Northwestern preferred and Western Pacific. Prices common and International Railways of Central America common and preferred advanced to new high prices for the year. Reading also was strong.

Commercial solvents A and B each broke about 12 points to new low records for the year at 101 1-2 and 100, respectively, a partial recovery setting in later. Revival of selling pressure against Maxwell motors B forced that stock down nearly four points to 75 1-8 but it rallied to 143 1-2, off 1 1-2. Other weak spots included American Sumatra tobacco preferred, Du Point, General Electric, Radio Corporation, Utah securities and Wilson and company preferred, all off 2 points or more.

Several specialties were bid up to new peak prices, the list including National Distillers products, United Railways and investment common and preferred, Toronto Railway and Power, Hudson and Manhattan, Mundet Electric Corporation, Fisk Rubber first preferred, Tobacco Products A, International Nickel and American Ice.

Call money ruled unchanged at 4 per cent. Time money and commercial paper held steady at 3 3-4 to 4 per cent.

Demand sterling ruled about a cent higher around $4.81, or less than six cents from parity. French francs held fairly steady just below 5.20 cents. Other European rates showed only nominal changes.

CURB MARKET

New York, April 24—A sensational rise of 20 points in American Light & Traction common which touched a new high record at 169, was the outstanding feature of the short curb market. The brisk demand for this stock followed the announcement of a commission decision in favor of the Dominion Gas company, a subsidiary. Erratic fluctuations took place in the warrants, which opened at 15, dropped to 10, advanced to 35 and then fell back to 16.

Other public utilities were mixed. Commonwealth Power advanced 1 1-4 to 117 3-4 and Utilities Power & Light duplicated its 1925 high of 26 on reports of large current earnings, but electric Bond & Share and Middle West utilities lost ground.

Domestic oils were heavy. Standard of Indiana, Vacuum and Magnolia [illegible] declining back about a point. South American oils were firm. Mexican Mariscalco Trading, a new [illegible] on reports that it had obtained new concessions in the Maracaibo [illegible].

Industrial list: Victor Talking Machine broke eleven points to 67, a new low. Motor issues fell back 4 points to 73 1-2 on the announcement of the Ford Motor Company [illegible] on the "big five."

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, April 24—Rainy weather, beneficial to growing wheat led to free downturns in price today for that cereal and so likewise did reports that additional wheat was being shipped from Duluth to Chicago. The closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1 cent lower. May 152 1-2 to 152 3-4 and July 1.40 1-2 to 1.40 3-4, with corn 2 3-8 to 3 3-8c down, oats 1 1-2 to 3-4 a 7-8 cents off and provisions 5 cents to 30 cents decline.

Continuance of good rains, especially in the southwest, knocked one of the chief props out from under the wheat market, and with only a limited export demand apparent the incentives for general buying were reduced to a minimum ,excepting, however, the notable strength of sterling exchange. Meanwhile, estimates were current that world stocks of wheat are at approximately the same total as a year ago, when prices were much lower. Besides, downturns in quotations at Liverpool tended to promote selling here, and it was pointed out that May delivery at Liverpool had gone to the widest discount yet as compared with May.

Lowest prices of the day in the wheat market were reached after word was received that another cargo of Duluth wheat was headed for Chicago to be delivered on May contracts here. However, cash interested were credited with buying on the setbacks, and this support rallied the market several times. As a consequence, net declines for the day were small. Sell-

25 Miles to the Gallon

The ever-swelling, nation-wide praise which acclaims the brilliant performance of the new good Maxwell will continue to grow in volume because Maxwell will continue to deserve it.

For this great car not only gives performance results and economy heretofore unknown in its class. It is also one of the most soundly engineered and soundly built cars in America—manufactured complete by the Maxwell organization in the great Maxwell plants.

Its motor combines such features as force feed lubrication and fine balance of reciprocating parts—structural practice before confined to cars costing far more. Its transmission, and its rear axle, are big enough and strong enough, for the most strenuous daily service.

The new good Maxwell owner enjoys his 58 miles per hour, 5 to 25 miles in eight seconds, and 25 miles per gallon in the knowledge that this prized combination is exclusive and distinctive to the new good Maxwell alone.

We are eagerly awaiting the opportunity to prove these good Maxwell truths to you.

Touring Car, Roadster, Club Coupe, Club Sedan, Standard Four-Door Sedan—attractively priced from $885 to $1095. All prices f. o. b. Detroit, tax extra

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Maxwell's attractive plan. Maxwell dealers and superior Maxwell service everywhere.

Have I won?

I started out to make a Knit Jacket that would be really different. "It can't be done", they said.
So I wagered my thirty years' experience and produced the CUB. Knocking fancy ideas in the head was ground work. Fashioned from my own exclusive Stay-Klosh it is smart, of course, but supremely comfortable first of all. Slip it on your clothes today. Decide if I have won!

When Ice Goes Out

When the ice goes out in Alaska it means the coming of spring and is eagerly awaited. At Fairbanks the people place a large clock on the bank of the stream and to it fasten a long wire, the other end of which is attached to the ice so that when the ice moves it stops the clock. Then they sell guesses as to the exact day, hour and minute the ice will break. In 1923 the ice pool amounted to more than $11,000. The ice broke at 2.13 on the afternoon of May 9. And when it breaks the people rush out, and fairly shout for joy as that raging, roaring, rushing torrent of ice moves out into the Yukon and down to the Bering Sea.

POETRY

Because You Love Beauty

Because you love Beauty, I would have you know
What place has seemed the loveliest to me:
A little cloistered valley, quilted in snow,
Remote as in an Alpine scenery.

Because you love Beauty, I desire to guide
Your feet on certain far-off wealth ward ways
Where larches lay their candles, and where hide
Among old leaves, the clematis new sprays.

Because you love Beauty, I would run with you
Down morning hillsides tapestried with June;
And bid you hear the goat-bells tinkle through
Quaint Old World streets at slope of afternoon.

Because you love Beauty, I have dreamed I stood
Beside you, and beheld the westering sun
Ignite a cloud-bank, singe a bordering wood,
And fire the porphyry mountains one by one.

And I have thought that, when the Alpine glow
First flushed the twilight, I would feign your hand
Finding no need for words, content to know
That you, who loved Beauty, you would understand!

—By Anne Kyle in Scribner's.

Lilies of the Valley

'Twas on the north side of the house . . .
that shady spot—
How well you know . . .
(Ah, it was years ago!)
Grew lilies of the valley in their rustered plot.

Bloom by delicate bloom—green leaf by leaf . . . a space . . .
Where dream scents thrill . . .
(The fragrance haunts you still?)
Where peace untellable had its abiding place.

They raised their pale, white flower faces . . . dampily wet
'Neath lilac plumes . . .
(Your mother's purple blooms!)
Thro' many a hastening spring has flown, . . .
can . . . you . . . forget?

—Agnes Choate Wonson in Boston Transcript.

Young Horace Flint and Patience, a calf born last March, which he has broken to harness, are familiar sights at Brighton Ridge, Me., carrying mail, hauling vegetables, scraping the road in front of the house were some of the things they did last summer. A submarine cable in one continuous length of 2,700 feet has been recently laid across the Hudson River at Garrison, just below West Point, according to the Electrical World. The makeup of the cable and the method of laying it presented some problems not encountered in everyday practice. The cable is to carry current from the east side of the river to the west side for the local distribution in the immediate vicinity of Garrison. Power is to be transmitted at first at 2,300 volts with ungrounded star-connected transformers, and this will later be changed to 4,000 volts with the neutral grounded.

WALTER SMITH GETS OFF WATER WAGON, BACK IN NEW LONDON AND IN JAIL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 24.—Last January Walter Smith was presented in the police court here for intoxication. He was then fined, $5 but he created some sympathy then and he was allowed to escape jail upon a promise to forward the money his fine and costs entailed to Richard W. Mansfield, the probation officer, if he were allowed to escape a period in jail. Yesterday Smith returned. He had a load he couldn't navigate with, so Officer Riordan took him into custody. In the court this morning Smith had framed up a story that he believed would be just as successful in securing leniency for him as was the promise he made at the beginning of the year, but which he forgot as soon as he got out of the city. Today he said he had been at work in Hartford where he was earning good wages. Yesterday he fell in with friends and they gave him drink. It was the sort that robbed him of his senses, so they put him on a bus and that brought him to New London. He couldn't account for his failure to keep his new year promise, so the probation given him then was revoked and the judgment was ordered to go into effect. With a fine today his bill to the court was more than $26. He is in jail now to remain about thirty days, or until settled warm weather comes, when he can find employment out of doors.

James Farrell, who was taken into custody here yesterday at the request of Boston authorities, was taken back to that city this afternoon to answer to a charge of lewd and lascivious intercourse with a girl he met in the latter city. Farrell was profuse in explanations that the charge against him in Boston had been disposed of, but his explanations did not avail anything. He agreed to go to Boston without the formality of obtaining extradition papers.

The Kresge Company some time ago leased the stores in the Cronin building which the Woolworth Company had occupied for years, the Woolworth Company purchasing the former Garfield building just west of the Cronin building. The Garfield building was torn down and upon the site a new structure has appeared and is now occupied by the Woolworth stores. In erecting the new building the latter corporation duplicated the front that is in the Cronin building. Now the Kresge company is to change the whole front of the Cronin building and it is said will have a store front that will be the most elaborate in the city.

WATERFORD-JORDAN ARRESTS, SLOT MACHINES SEIZED

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, April 24—The state police, of Groton barracks, in charge of Officers Fred Caron and Bernard W. Kenerson this forenoon and again this afternoon conducted raids upon the numerous stores throughout Waterford and Jordan where the so-called slot machines have been in operation several months. As a result of the visitation of the officers eight arrests were made, these including Postmaster William Saunders, Jordan village. The others were Tony Saberta, Station 5; William Chappell, Golden Spur; William Hendrickson, Station 18, and also a member of the board of relief; Philip Rappaport, Graniteville; Richard B. Smith, Station 9, where he is proprietor of Red Top gasoline station; James W. Dickinson, Station 14, and Julian Rondomanski, Willetts avenue extension.

This evening Rondomanski and Dickinson were tried on the charge of maintaining gaming devices, before Justice of the Peace Frederick L. Goss in Firemen's hall. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed in each case, Rondomanski and Dickinson paying.

The other accused will be tried Monday and next Wednesday a hearing will take place to determine whether the machines shall be destroyed.

The officers have long contemplated the seizure of the machines and the arrests of those in whose possession they were found and this forenoon, after obtaining search warrants which were signed by Grand Juror Ernest Lewis and Justice of the Peace Goss, the officers started on their raids. They visited all the places where the machines have been operated to a big profit by the store keepers, the officers playing the machines by using coins and not "slugs" as sold by the merchants. In practically every instance the officers are alleged to have been losers. The arrest of the proprietors of the places and the seizing of the machines then took place.

The agents for the machines have a place of business at 30 North Bank street, this city, where about a half dozen men have been employed for the purpose of distributing the machines and making repairs to them. The agents have distributed, it is estimated close to 300 machines in New London and vicinity. Within the past few days and following the seizure of machines in nearby towns, it is stated that many of the machines in storage here have been taken to other places of keeping.

In New London there are about 100 machines in operation, several places of business maintaining two or more of the devices. It is understood that the state police are contemplating the raiding of the New London stores and making arrests wherever machines are found.

PROHIBITION CAMPAIGN IN SAO PAULO PLANNED

Another effort is being made to inaugurate a prohibition campaign in the state of Sao Paulo and cause it to spread elsewhere throughout Brasil. The publicity is to be conducted by one of the most important Brazilian newspapers, O Estado de Sao Paulo, an anti-government organ which was suppressed during the revolution last July.

Decoys for Tsetse Fly

Scented decoys for the deadly tsetse fly are now employed in up-country districts by government entomologists, says science. In order to trap and destroy the insects which cause sleeping sickness, dummy animals are being erected upon which the flies light with the intention of biting the animals. If animal odors cling around the dummies the flies will linger about until killed. Images of donkeys with brown paper legs are commonly employed.

United States Dinosaurs

Great animals as well as great men sometimes "leave behind them footprints on the sands of time." Experts of Uncle Sam's department of the Interior have discovered that tracks found in the rock on the Navajo Indian reservation in Arizona, are the footprints of dinosaurs made about ten millions years ago. The prints are 16 inches long.

After leaving Paris, Miss Welch and the other Marymount students went to Lucerne, Switzerland, and from there to Interlaken, Milan, Venice, Florence and to Rome, where they remained for several days. From Rome they were scheduled to visit the section of the volcanoes in Naples and to return to Paris at the close of the Easter recess, Miss Welch will be a member of a party of students who will make a summer tour to Belgium, Germany, England, Norway and Sweden.

After leaving Westerly High school she went to the preparatory school at Mt. St. Vincent, New York, and then attended Mt. I., April 24.—John Lynch, 40, who resides with his mother and two sisters at 78 Liberty street, had his left hand caught in a waste machine Thursday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock while employed in the carding rooms of the William Clark mill of the American Thread company. Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called to attend the injured man when it was found that the left hand had been snapped off, leaving the bone and sinew exposed three inches above the left wrist. The ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps was called and the injured man was taken to the Rhode [illegible] hospital, Providence.

WATCH HITT SWIMMING HOURS END IN PATERNITY SUIT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, April 24.—The case of Oliver P. Crandall, overseer of poor of the town of Westerly, vs. William Joseph Carney, for the support of a female child of which he was the alleged father, was called in the Third District court today. The town was represented by Town Solicitor John Ferguson, Jr., and the respondent by Attorney Augustine T. L. Ledwidge.

Judge Turano directed any persons in court not interested in the case to leave the court room.

Evelyn May Main, the complaining witness, who gave her residence as 21 Narragansett avenue at the home of Mrs. Harry Anderson, testified that she had lived two years at that address and six years in Westerly and had been employed in the Goldenes and Chapman families, while attending school. She testified that she knew William J. Carney, having first met him at Watch Hill July 2, 1924, while she worked in the public office of the Watch Hill Bathing Beach association. The respondent worked at the beach and they had frequently gone in bathing together. The offense alleged was committed Sunday, July 13th, on the East Beach, after she had left the office at 6 o'clock and she returned home at 10 p. m. Tuesday, March 24th, 1925, a daughter was born to her of which child she said Carney was the father. She testified further that Carney came to see her on the following Thursday, and reported that he had said to her, "Not to worry, that everything would be all right."

In an answer to Attorney Ferguson, although objection was made by Attorney Ledwidge, she testified that Carney fondled the child and showed signs of devotion. Carney came to see her Friday evening and on Saturday from 8 to 10 and said he was going to marry her. A bill for medical attendance by Dr. Hillard for $28 was testified to.

In reply to questions by Judge Turano, the witness said she had no means of supporting the child.

On cross examination by Attorney Ledwidge, witness said she had a step-father and mother and that before March 24th she had seen Carney before Christmas. Attorney Ledwidge said he would admit evidence establishing the paternity of the child. In objecting to a further line of questioning, Attorney Ferguson said that the issue was whether this man was the father of the child.

The witness said that she saw Carney in September, August and July and had met him three times in August at Watch Hill. Judge Turano said that September dates were not necessary and the witness stated she had not kept company with any other young man, but with the respondent she had gone in bathing most every day and that he taught her to swim in July and August.

Dr. William H. Hillard testified to having attended complainant and had to consult his card to say that a female child of full term had been born March 24th.

When the state rested, Attorney Ledwidge, for the respondent said, "In this case may it please the cuort, we have a defense," but no witnesses were placed on the stand. The subject of lying-in costs were discussed by the attorneys when the town solicitor asked that the amount to be directed be $7 instead of $3.50. The solicitor said that the complaining witness had emancipated herself from her family when she had worked for six years in Westerly and that in her mother's family were ten children, the oldest being 16 years of age.

Judge Turano announced that he found the accused to be the putative father of the child for lying-in and medical attention he directed him to pay the sum of $75, to contribute $5 a week to the support of the child and to pay all the costs of prosecution. Bonds in the sum of $700 were required and Mrs. Elizabeth Murray became surety. Attorney Ledwidge gave notice of a claim for an appeal. Judge Turano said the case would probably come before the session of the superior court for Washington county in September and that before that time a new order would be made and a satisfactory bond named.

Queer Bookmarks

In the matter of odd bookmarks between the pages of a returned volume, one librarian claimed the blue ribbon by citing a slice of raw bacon which one of his assistants had salvaged from a copy of Mr. Services's poems. But his claim was given second place when the chief of a famous library in a great manufacturing city countered with a soft shell crab, which turned up between the leaves of a book on engineering.

AMERICAN FILMS FIGHT FOR LIFE IN DENMARK

The fight between the owners of the moving picture theaters in Copenhagen, the representatives of American films agencies and the municipal council continues aggressively. Corot's Success Came Late

Corot, the painter, was 60 years old before his paintings began to capture the American and European fancy and bring him real success. He painted for 30 years before he sold a picture. Some of the largest amounts involved in the exchange of paintings, especially of landscapes, centered around Corot's works. The result was that many spurious Corots found their way to the United States. He was declared to be the first artist "to paint nature as she is and not as she ought to be."

A New Vegetable

A strange looking vegetable, called the yama, has been received in Maine. It was propagated in Wyoming by an expert named Carney, who is a Burbank with vegetables. The yama is a cross between a melon, a squash and sweet corn. It grows on vines like a melon and on the outside resembles five small ears of corn welded together. It has a bantam sweet corn taste, with a slight flavoring of squash.

FOURS AND EIGHTS

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Just a half century ago this week men were at work digging the tunnel at Laurel Hill. The tunnel which was dug for the Norwich & Worcester Railroad to allow for the extension of their line to Groton, is still in use by the New York, New Haven and Hartford road. The Bulletin of fifty years ago notes the wedding of Henry L. Bennett and Miss Mary Andrews in Trinity church by the Rev. Mr. Seymour. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett observed their golden wedding this week. Other interesting items from The Bulletin files of April, 1875, are as follows:

Monday, April 19, 1875—We notice in Western papers the decease of Benjamin Gorton, formerly a resident of Norwich Town, in the 78th year of his age. He was the oldest of four brothers, all of whom in former years resided in this town and were known as business citizens, and but one of whom, Ira Gorton, is living.

Company C will make their first parade this spring at eight o'clock this evening provided that the weather is good. They will march through the following streets: Water street to Main by Breed Hall, Main to the Preston Bridge, thence to Greeneville by the upper road where they will be called from labor to refreshments, after which they will return by the lower road to First street, to Providence, then to Boswell avenue, through Franklin to Main, then to the armory, after which they will partake of a collation.

Decoration Day is to be observed this year on the 29th of May, the 30th being Sunday. So the orders from the Department Headquarters, G. A. R., read.

Tuesday, April 20, 1875—This evening occurs the regular sociable of [illegible] Church and Congregation. The programme of entertainment is said to be as varied and attractive as usual, embracing an exhibition of paintings, the reading of the second number of the church paper, music by the choir, etc. The promise of a pleasant time can hardly fail to be realized.

The fastest time ever made on the Providence & Stonington Railroad was by a special train Sunday, carrying Mayor Bingham, City Council from Providence to Boston. The actual running time from Stonington to Providence, fifty-six minutes and from the latter place to Boston, fifty-four minutes, or an hour and fifty minutes for the entire distance.

A large crowd assembled in the vestry of the Central Baptist church last evening to witness the spelling match advertised to take place at that time. A noticeable feature of the match was the stepping down and out of the best spellers in the most common words, while the more difficult words were spelled very readily. Two handsome books were the prized awarded.

Wednesday, April 21, 1875—Campbell, Hall & Co., have introduced through their mills at Greeneville Hall's system of fire extinguishers, by which they have reduced their fire risks about two-thirds. This system consists of water pipes running at suitable distance from each other, under the ceiling of each room with sprinklers attached. The water supply is an immense iron tank capable of containing nearly 3,000 cubic feet of water situated in an elevation of the tower, seventy feet from the ground. This tank is to be kept full by means of a forcing pump. A large iron pipe descends from the reservoir and is continued upon the outside of the building, communicating with the "system" in each room.

Charles A. Allen of Worcester has been engaged by the Norwich & Worcester Railroad company to make the preliminary survey of the proposed extension of their road from Allyn's Point to Groton.

Thomas M. Waller of New London and E. Jay Edwards of Norwich are the vice presidents of the Constitutional Reform Association for New London county.

Thursday, April 22, 1875—A large company were present in Trinity church yesterday noon to witness the marriage of Henry L. Bennett and Miss Mary Andrews. The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. Mr. Seymour. A large number of friends met subsequently and offered their congratulations at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. P. St. M. Andrews. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett left for Washington on the afternoon train.

D. H. Gould for a number of years of the firm of J. P. Collins & Co., left the city yesterday commencing a trip which he intends to take to Europe. During his residence in Norwich Mr. Gould has made a large and pleasant acquaintance and won many attached friends who sincerely regret his departure. He will remain abroad about a year, sailing in June.

The Dime Savings society of this city have issued their semi-annual dividend notice at the rate of 5 x per cent. per annum from their new banking house, the building formerly occupied by the probate court. This dividend is payable on and after May 15th.

Friday, April 23, 1875—A large gang of men are now at work upon the railroad tunnel on Laurel Hill. The hill will not be tunnelled actually, as many supposed, but a cut will be made, which will afterwards be tunnelled over. Blasting shows a flaking top rock, but the lower stratum is very hard. The men work from each end, leaving now only enough of the main street untouched to barely afford room for travel. Quite a piece of the main embankment has been built. In this connection it may be said that a preliminary survey of the extension of the road from Allyn's Point to Groton has been made and the survey now to be made by Mr. Allen will probably definitely fix the route. The officers expect to finish this job and the tunnel as soon as possible.

No shad have been taken in the river, although several attempts have been made. Those now in the market are from the North river.

The city tin cart, stored in the rear of D. M. Dickinson's was broken into the night before last and robbed of over a hundred dollars' worth of knives and forks and plated ware.

Saturday, April 24, 1875—A petition will be presented to the next general assembly praying for an extension of the city limits so as to take in Laurel Hill and Scalping Town.

The fifty-sixth anniversary of the establishment of Odd Fellowship in this country will be celebrated Monday night by Uncas lodge with addresses, music and festivity. All visiting brethren are invited to attend.

A very large audience were at Breed hall last evening to witness the spelling match. Owing to the fewness of the entries (ten), volunteers were called for and considerable delay was experienced in securing a respectable number. The twenty-five competitors took seats on the stage and Jabaz S. Lathrop of the High school department of the West Side school, began giving out the words from the floor of the house. The Rev. W. S. Palmer and N. G. Lippitt acted as referees. The prizes, a Webster's unabridged dictionary and a smaller dictionary were awarded by Mr. Palmer.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 24—After an initial burst of strength, the bond market yielded most of its gains in sympathy with the growing irregularity of stock market operations. Cross currents of trading uncovered a number of weak spots in the foreign and the domestic corporations lists but these were counterbalanced by the strength of railroad issues, a number of which sold at the year's highest prices.

Reactionary tendencies of the Western rail shares, based on disappointment over the March earnings statement of the Union Pacific and other railroads in that territory, were ignored in bond trading. Chicago & Terre Haute income 5S jumped 4 points to a new top price at 67 1-2 and Frisco adjustment 6S also established a new high price at 89 3-8. Demand for other rail liens embraced Southern Pacific refunding 4S, Chicago and Eastern Illinois 5S, Central Pacific 4S, International Great Northern 6S and Union Pacific Refunding 4S, Erie and Norfolk & Western bonds reacted.

Uneasiness over the outcome of the impending German elections brought scattered selling of the German 7S, which moved fractionally lower, French, Serbian and other foreign issues also eased off, although foreign exchanges were strengthened by the rise in sterling to the highest point in ten years.

The proposed termination of receivership for the New York Street Railway lines exerted a favorable influence on the local transit issues. Other points of strength includes standard gas 6 1-2S, Virginia-Carolina Chemical and American writing paper issues, but these gains were partially offset by fractional declines. Wilson, Skelly Oil and General Electric liens.

The Crusaders, numbering about fifteen had an enjoyable Easter party on the common, under the supervision of Miss Ethel Wraight, assisted by Misses Daisy Pilcher and Alice Luchart. Games were played and there was much fun in hunting for the colored Easter eggs, which were hidden around the parsonage. When found the children rolled the eggs until they cracked, when they were eaten. The one securing the largest number of eggs received a prize. Candy eggs and lemonade were also provided.

SAYS HUSBAND BURNED DEAD BABIES' BODIES

Five divorces were granted in the superior court at New London Friday morning by Judge Edwin C. Dickenson, four for desertion and one for intolerable cruelty.

On the ground of her husband's intolerable cruelty since Aug. 1, 1919, Ada Holly Collis of Mystic was granted divorce from Arthur A. Collis of Amherst, Mass. They were married June 11, 1911. The mother was given the custody of a 9 year old daughter. Three other children are with the father.

Some of the testimony presented by the plaintiff was sensational, especially her allegations that two children were born dead, resulting from treatment accorded her by her husband. The bodies of the two babies, according to the plaintiff, were burned by the husband.

On the ground of desertion since Feb. 17, 1921 Myra Hewlitt Kearney of Stonington was granted divorce from Joseph Kearney, now of parts unknown. They were married June 30, 1920. She was allowed change of name to Myra Hewlitt.

Stephen Fabrykiewitz of New London secured divorce from Leokadya Fabrykiewitz whom he married in Torrington Jan. 10, 1914. The grounds were desertion and it was alleged that the woman had left for a trip to Poland on May 4, 1914 and had never been heard from since then.

Frances A. De Nardis of New London was granted divorce from Cornelius De Nardis, now of parts unknown. She alleged desertion on June 1, 1921. They were married April 23 of the same year. The court allowed her to change her name to Frances Apolito.

Francesa Trampani Moretti of New London secured divorce from Francisco Moretti, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., now of parts unknown. They were married Aug. 23, 1916 and she alleged desertion Aug. 5, 1917. She was given the custody of a minor son.

MISSIONS DEPARTMENT HEARS BIRTHDAY GROUPS REPORT

The final meeting of the season of the Mission's department of the Guild of the United Congregational church was held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Community House, with one of the largest attendances of the year.

The meeting was in charge of Mrs. William H. Dawley, chairman of the mission's department, and after the regular business transactions the annual reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and accepted. An interesting feature was the reports given by the members of the birthday groups for December, January, February and March, showing work done and money earned for missions in each group.

Miss Edith Boynton then favored with a group of three piano selections which were rendered in most pleasing manner.

The literary program was in charge of Miss Elizabeth Huntington and a number of papers were read, covering home and foreign missions. These were most entertaining and instructive and were read by Mrs. Emma Bixby, Miss Harriet Williams, Mrs. Herman Tubbs, Mrs. Harvey M. Briggs, Miss Elizabeth F. Pullen, Mrs. Dwight L. Allen, Miss Edith Boynton and Mrs. William H. Dawley.

At the conclusion of the literary period Miss Boynton rendered another piano solo, her selection of In a Chinese Garden, being greeted with much applause.

Refreshments were served by Charitable Circle, Kings Daughters, after which a social hour was enjoyed.

Spring

Spring! we know it by the flash of the bluebird's wing.
And pussy willows bloscoming.
E'en through the cloak of lingering snow,
Pale, sweet crocuses their faces show,
Yet snug their waxen petals fold
When boisterous winds blow rough and cold.

The marshes brown as bleak and bare,
And yet nestir within the air,
Is the subtle promise of the spring,
In all its glad awaking.
And down the snoy-clad barren hills,

Soon, soon, it will be fairest May,
Amerous birds will sing their lay,
And nature with a lavish hand
Will spread her beauty o'er the land,
And in hearts oppressed, where snow hath lain
There, too, the joy of spring may come again.

Two Houses

I've seen my earthly father stop
The mowing—when a bird flew up
From out the field—and seek the nest.
Then lift the scythe and leave an isle,
Of slanting grass around that home
Till after haying time, when all
The feathered group had flown.
Could I feel else than safe
Within that father's home?

I'm good when sore oppressed, and know
Not how to turn, and then have heard
Our Father's Voice that whispered, "Peace!"
And then I found a way to bear
The burden through with greater strength
I clearer skies returned, when I
Might surely stand alone
Could I feel else than safe
Within that father's home?

The scissors, bodkins, yarn and thread
Are all on hand—I needn't said—

Around beneath the coverlet roof
The children play with slight reproof;
A moment all the workers wait
For jest a little joint debate
On what the plan and stitch shall be
For beauty, strength and harmony,
And have the owner satisfied
And look nice on the underside—
Alas! that door through which I'd peek

LOOK FOR THE GOOD

Dear Sisters of the Corner: Just a line or two to let you know I am not frose up after Monday.

R. I.: You have me guessing too. I have lived in both Connecticut and R. I. and wonder if I know you. Do give us more of a clew. Do you drive a car?

O. D.: I am quite sure an Easter card intended for you through an error went astray so will remember you some other time. I hear you are a wonderful cook. Better send in some recipes.

True Blue: Your letter reminded me of a wonderful sermon I heard recently. We are so apt to see the bad in one while if we only stop to think about it we many times find much that is good in that person. It is much like some one saying I have attended that church for years, what good have I got out of it, what good has it done me? On the other hand what have you brought into the church, what have you done for it? It certainly gives one a better feeling to think good instead of evil of anyone though sometime, it may be hard to do it. When we are thinking the worst of others it is well to stop and examine our own selves we may get a shock and one that will do us good.

REGRETS BEATRIX'S DEATH

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I was not able to attend the last meeting as I was in hopes to do. Have been very busy moving and settling. I have been waiting to hear from or see Aunt Mary Jane. I am glad to hear Red Clover is better. Sent her a birthday card to cheer her up. I was sorry to hear about Beatrix's death. It certainly was a shock to me as I never knew she was so sick.

I read in the Social Corner page where the editor was giving pins to members. Hope I am not too late to get one. Would appreciate one very much.

STILL FIRM BELIEVER IN EARLY CLEANING

Dear Corner Sisters: I suppose I am a real back slider. I meant to write every week but time goes by so fast it's Friday before I realize it. Several said they always looked for my letters and liked to read them so thought I would try again but doubt if it will be very interesting as it seems my brain is dull nowadays.

I'm so lame in my knees all the time it makes me feel tired and I feel very nervous at times. I am old enough not to have nerves but I find I do have them just the same.

We had a most lovely time at the April meeting. Owing to the kindness of Free Air, Bug and I had a chance to attend the meeting with out getting on and off those blessed trolleys and it is very hard for lame knees to get on to them and at most all such times the conductors are looking the other way instead of helping us elderly ladies but if it was a young pretty girl who is well able to help herself those same men would gladly extend their hand to help. Well I suppose its the way of the world and we ought not to notice such trifles.

Now why did I stir up so much feeling when I said I had cleaned house long ago. Say, sisters, I hope its not "sour grapes!" Some one said I would have to clean again by warm weather. "Nothing doing," we keep it clean as possible all the time. Some one else said I had help both male and female. Of course I did and said so at the time that's why I cleaned so early and every day I feel glad it is done. I can sit down a minute now when I want to and go out and hear the birds sing or work a bit in the yard and not be thinking I ought to be painting of papering. I tell you, early cleaning for me every time.

I had a nice card from Balsam Fir way up in Maine and I thank her.

How far our Social Corner extends to east, west, north and south! Many, many eyes read our letters and many comments are made over them, some good, some bad, so we must be very careful what we say. Anyway we are a social band and as I have said before its rightly named. Nowhere I ever go do I feel any more welcome than at these meetings. I know so many sweet faces but couldn't tell whose dear soul names were but do greet them and "smile" at them.

I'll close for I feel I'm becoming a regular old fogy and take up Friends with Wedding A

HINDENBURG ELECTED PRESIDENT OF GERMANY HAD 886,759 PLURALITY

Official Figures Give Hindenburg 14,639,000 Votes, Marx 13,752,640, Thaelmann 1,931,591—A Total of 30,345,540 Votes Were Cast—Hindenburg is First President of Germany to be Elected by Popular Vote—Crush at the Booths in Berlin Led to Violent Encounters—Police Were Kept Busy All Day Separating Fighting Opponents—Term of Office is Seven Years.

Berlin, April 27.—(By The A. P.)—The people of Germany have rallied to the banner of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg and elected him president of the republic. He is the first president of Germany to be elected by popular ballot. He was nominated by the nationalist-conservative bloc to which Dr. Karl Jarres, who failed of election in the first balloting on March 29, was opponent was Dr. Wilhelm Marx, candidate of the republican bloc, which consists of the Weimar coalition, composed of centrists, socialists and democrats, and of centrists, socialists and democrats. The third candidate was Ernst Thaelmann, communist.

Hindenburg comes to the chair occupied by Friedrich Ebert, who has been president by the national assembly at Weimar in February, 1919, and who died in Berlin in February, 1925.

An advance analysis of the vote indicated that Von Hindenburg scored heavily in East Prussia and other agrarian districts, polling 2,900,000 more votes in those districts than did Dr. Jarres in the March election, while Dr. Marx received a million more votes than he received in the three republican districts on that occasion.

It appears that country and new voters rallied around the field marshal to office.

Voting throughout greater Berlin progressed in an orderly fashion despite the heat of the recent campaign. The size of the vote recorded throughout Germany is taken as evidence that the mass of the voters had definitely made up their minds in advance.

Among the features were the heavy vote polled by Dr. Marx in the Rhineland and his showing in Bavaria. These advantages, however, were not sufficient to enable him to overcome the lukewarmness of the socialists in Saxony, who failed to obtain the parties vote in Schleswig-Holstein for Hindenburg gained 100,000 new votes the monarchist peoples bloc only succeeded in adding its vote of March 29.

The German president's term of office is seven years. After he has served a term he may be re-elected. Any person who has passed his thirty-fifth year is eligible for election.

The oath taken by the president is as follows: "I swear to devote all my strength to the welfare of the German people, increase their prosperity to protect them from injury, to preserve the constitution and the laws of the empire, to perform my duties conscientiously and to deal justly with all."

In yesterday's election universal suffrage prevailed. Men women citizens twenty years of age or over were eligible to vote. The ballot was secret.

The election was held on Sunday because of the German constitution requires that all elections be held either on Sunday or on alegal holiday.

More than sixty percent of the German population, or about 38,000,000 persons were eligible to vote.

BALLOTING GREATER THAN IN PREVIOUS ELECTION

Berlin, April 26.—(By The A. P.)—Millions of Germany went to the polls today to record their choice for president of the German republic. It was a momentous choice because the two chief candidates, to one of whom the great office must come, represented in the minds of the people two widely divergent groups—Field Marshal Von Hindenburg being the candidate of the nationalist-conservative bloc and Dr. Wilhelm Marx carrying the banner of the republicans, comprising centrists, socialists and democrats, staunch adherents of the Weimar constitution.

The balloting is believed to have been much greater than on the first, inconclusive election on March 29.

The local Hindenburg campaign committee distributed one and a half million monarchist flags free during the campaign at an estimated cost of 6,000 marks.

The Hohenzollern princes voted at Potsdam soon after the polling places opened in the morning. The older monarchist sympathizers marched to the polls wearing silk top hats and decorations from the imperial days. Steel-helmets and reichsbanner detachments marched through the city, but refrained from clashing with each other.

The early returns which placed Von Hindenburg in the lead included his stronghold. East Prussia. Dr. Marx was leading in the metropolitan areas. The field marshal on the early returns was found to have obtained the vote given to Dr. Jarres on March 29, whom he replaced in this election. It even exceeded it liberally at many points.

About 40 per cent. of all the votes in Berlin were cast before noon. The crush at many of the booths was great, at the time leading to violent encounters. The police were kept busy all day and night separating the fighting opponents.

The communists were apparently out to furnish a humorous note to this election. Many women communists, members of the "Red Cat organization" dashed through the city on motor trucks singing the famous "Miaumiau song," which did much to relieve the general tension.

ASPIRATIONS OF THE DEFEATED CANDIDATE

(By The Associated Press.)

Wilhelm Marx, candidate of the centre socialist and democratic parties, comprising the republican bloc, for the German presidency, strove for the attainment of what he termed the German "volksgemeinschaft," that is, a union of the German people irrespective of party affiliations for the twofold purpose of re-establishing Germany's position as a free nation and of having Germany play her part within the family of nations for the advancement of humanity.

For this ideal he strove when he was asked to become chancellor in November, 1923, and only regretfully did he form a cabinet in which neither the socialists nor the German nationalists were represented. In 1924 he worked again with infinite patience toward the achievement of his end, and retired only when it became evident that in order to stay in power he must constitute a one-sided government.

His attempts to form a Prussian cabinet by that same basis in the early months of 1925, were prompted by that same desire to realize his coveted "volksgemeinschaft." In accepting the nomination for the presidency he pledged himself to continue his efforts for the unification of the German people.

A tremendous task confronted him when he became chancellor. Germany had almost collapsed under the chancellorships of Cuno and Stresemann, and something had to be done, and done quickly. He believed that the only course for Germany was to accept the Dawes report. In this spirit he himself headed a delegation that confronted the allies in London in the summer of 1924. He is generally credited with having made an excellent impression on the allied representatives.

Upon his return to Germany he centered all his activities upon pursuading the relchstag to adopt laws that would translate the recommendations of the Dawes report into practical politics.

Dr. Marx has also favored Germany's entry into the League of Nations on the pro-r-supposition, however, that Germany must not be a party to the aggressive pact.

HINDENBURG A RELUCTANT CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT

(By The Associated Press.)

Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, lifelong soldier, war-time military hero of Germany, by training and temperament alien to political campaigning, was drawn reluctantly in his old age into an arena unknown to him when he consented to become a candidate for the presidency of the republic of Germany for the parties of the right, known as the nationalist-conservative bourgeois bloc.

The martial figure of the imperial Germany that was passed, seemed to fit awkwardly into his new role. His speeches were few and brief; he did not travel from his home town of Hanover. His present agents found him unskilled in the wiles of publicity and not adept in the ways of self-seeking. Von Hindenburg had declared in resisting the attempts to make him a candidate that he was too old, that he could not understand the new generation.

His entire campaign activities consisted in receiving delegations that came to Hanover, making several short addresses at his home, and, toward the last, giving interviews. The outstanding points of his speeches were an appeal for unity of the German people, a declaration of his adversion to war, his insistence that Germany must regain her independence, and not be dependent upon other nations.

Only the future, he informed The Associated Press, could show whether the Dawes reparations plan was capable of fulfillment, and, declared the field marshal, "Germany will not be able to fulfil the conditions unless the foreign powers participating in the pact evince political and economic loyalty."

In his first and most important campaign speech, delivered before a great nationalist gathering at Hanover, Von Hindenburg denied that his candidacy represented reaction or was inimical to the republic. He spoke, however, for "a place in the sun," again for Germany, and avoided any reference to such international issues as the security pact, the League of Nations and reparations in general.

After the first presidential election on March 29, Dr. Karl Jarres, nationalist leader, and Rr. Wilhelm Marx, former chancellor, and nominee of the republican bloc, emerged as the apparent candidates for the second and decisive test by ballot. But the nationalists, fearing that Marx would defeat Jarres, appealed to Von Hindenburg to replace Jarres, which, under the German system was impossible. The field marshal after several day's delay, yielded, declaring that he did so because of a "feeling of duty alone, and not by personal inclination," and asking God to grant the prayer that, if elected, "I may at the end of my life be still of some use to the beloved Fatherland."

BERLIN GAVE DR. MARX SUBSTANTIAL MAJORITY

Berlin, April 26.—Greater Berlin, comprising the metropolis and the two Potsdam districts rolled up a heavy vote for Marx. The figures are:

Marx 654,324; Von Hindenburg 384,667; Thaelmann 144,880.

TWO PERSONS KILLED IN CLASH OF PARTISANS

Karlsruhe, Germany, April 26.—(By The A. P.)—In a clash between republicans and nationalists at the presidential elections today two persons were killed and many wounded.

TOTAL OF 30,345,500 VOTES WERE CAST

Berlin, April 27.—(By The A. P.)—The official provisional figures of the presidential election follows:

Von Hindenburg	14,639,399
Marx	13,752,640
Thaelmann	1,931,591
Votes declared invalid	21,910
Total	30,345,540

The field marshal did not vote. He preferred to observe the old Prussian custom which forbids a candidate to cast his ballot.

Tonight Von Hindenburg was serenaded by veterans' societies in the neighborhood, who also held a torchlight procession in his honor

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

Coburg Supported Hindenburg

Coburg, April 26—Coburg, the home of ex-Tsar Ferdinand of Bulgaria and the Russian pretender, Grand Duke Cyril, and a hotbed of monarchists, supported the Von Hindenburg candidacy strongly with 10,[illegible] votes as compared with 4,903 for Dr. Marx and 129 for Ernest Thaelmann.

ANNUAL PULITZER PRIZES ANNOUNCED YESTERDAY

New York, April 26—The annual Pulitzer prizes of journalism and in letters for 1924 were announced today by President Nicholas Murray Butler for the school of journalism of Columbia University.

For the "best book of the year upon the history of the United States," the $2,000 prize was awarded to Frederick L. Paxson for his "History of the American Frontier." And the $1,000 award for the year's best American biography was given to M. A. De Wolfe Howe for his "Barrett Wendell and his Letters." The award was made in recognition of their services toward the solution of the murder of Robert Franks, Jr., by Nathan F. Leopold and Richard Loeb.

But one scholarship ordinarily is presented by the award committee added a second this year, "in view of the great merits of the work presented."

HEIRESS HOPE GARLAND WAS SECRETLY MARRIED

New York, April 26—Hope Garland, 19 year old heiress to approximately $1,000,000 of the estate of her father, the late James A. Garland, was secretly married here on Friday to Winchester Fitch Ingersoll, son of Howard L. Ingersoll, vice-president of the New York Central railroad, it was learned today.

The couple were married in Grace church, in lower Broadway by the Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie, with only two witnesses as required by law. After the wedding, the couple went to Washington and from there notified the groom's parents of the marriage.

Miss Garland was the youngest of James A. Garland's children. She was to receive her share of the estate in two years, when she becomes 21 years of old. In 1922, it was estimated that her fortune would total $2,000,000 by the time it passed into her possession.

Charles Garland, her brother, turned $800,000 of his share of his father's fortune over to the civil liberties union as an endowment for "unfavorable causes." In giving the money away, Garland explained that he didn't want it because he disapproved of the manner in which his father, who was a Wall Street financier acquired it. In 1924, Charles Garland refused another legacy left by his grandmother, Anne Louise Garland, who willed him $1,000 of her $88,000 estate.

Miss Garland came to New York about two years ago to study art. She lived in Washington Mews, the center of an artists' colony. She had been introduced to Ingersoll at Harvard by her brother, Hamilton Garland. Ingersoll was graduated from Harvard in 1921 and later in New York renewed his acquaintance with Miss Garland.

City Bible Class Leagues Proposed

At the Second Annual Convention of the Federation of Men's Bible Classes.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., April 26—City bible class leagues, wherein all men's bible classes in the individual cities would combine into central organizations without regard to denominational affiliation, for the promotion of better citizenship, were recommended at the second annual convention of the federation of men's bible classes, which closed its session today.

The convention, described as "the greatest religion movement in the history of the United States," was attended by 700 men representing 100,000 in New England and adjoining states.

Neason Jones, of Mount Vernon, first president of the organization, was reelected. W. A. Munger of New York City, was elected secretary; Elwin H. Rooney, of Providence, R. I., was named treasurer. Seven men were selected as vice presidents, each to have charge of his respective state, including Dr. J. E. Conger, New Britain, Conn.

TWO MEN WERE BADLY BEATEN AND ROOBBED

Hartford, April 26—O. R. Andreson, manager of the Atlantic and Pacific store in Wethersfield, with his son-in-law, A. E. Johnson, clerk in the store, were badly beaten last night by bandits who attempted to take from the two men a bag containing about $300, the day's receipts at the store. As Andreson and Johnson drove into the yard of the former's home at 10 Middletown avenue, Wethersfield, three men with drawn revolvers leaned onto the car and ordered the store employes to hold up their hands and surrender the money. The store employes maintained they had no money and a scuffle ensued during which a blow knocked Johnson from the front seat back into the tonneau and Anderson was badly cut about the head. The top on the car seemed to prevent the hold-up men swinging hard enough to knock Andreson senseless. He managed to resist their efforts to gag him and his cries aroused his wife. When she turned on the lights in the house, the bandits fled to an automobile in front of Andreson's house and, with a fourth man who had not left the car, drove away toward Hartford.

Grand Juror Joseph H. Maurice was summoned and with two state policemen from the Hartford barracks started an investigation at once. In Andreson's car they found a .22 calibre revolver of cheap make which was not loaded, but which had matted hair and blood on the butt.

Johnson describes his assailants as "white, native-born Americans, in their early twenties, and evidently amateurs." The state police believe there may be some connection between this attempted hold-up and one a short time before at a store in Middletown. Andreson believes that the attempt was made by someone who was familiar with his practice of carrying home Saturday's receipts in order to work Sunday on the books.

New York, April 26—Miss Nellie Louise Condon, secretary of the Reptile Studio society of America, Inc., was bitten by a two-and-a-half foot copperhead near Suffern, N. Y., today during the society's spring snake hunt.

While this was being done Miss Condon, to demonstrate the ability of the snake to strike sidewise, advanced her hand toward it as she held it under a crotched stick in the road. The snake wriggled partly free and bit her through her glove and into her right finger.

Miss Condon was reported apparently out of danger at her home tonight.

Earth Tremors Of Unusual Violence

Recorded at Georgetown University — Almost Continuous From 3.45 A. M. To 6 P. M. Sunday.

Washington, April 26—Earth tremors of unusual intensity and duration, centering probably more than 5,000 miles from Washington, were recorded early today on the seismograph of Georgetown university.

Director Tondorf of the university's seismographic observatory, said the disturbance was of very unusual violence, and almost continuously in progress from 3:45 a. m., to 6 p. m.

Neither the direction from Washington nor the distance of the section of the earth crust affected could be determined with any accuracy, Father Tondorf explained, since the factors which ordinarily helped out with such calculations became unreliable with the instrument's recording needle is brought into action by shock originating more than 6,000 or 7,000 miles away.

Presumpably a series of earthquakes have taken place, he said, though accurate information about them must await reports from the spot, or may never be obtained if they affected uninhabited country or subterranean zones.

MODERATE EXPANSION IN INDUSTRIAL WORLD

Spring Operations in Most Lines Did Not Come Up to Expectations—Except for the Automobile Industry the Trend in the Principal Divisions of Business Has Been Toward Lower Levels—Railroad Conditions Continued Spotty.

New York, April 26—The process of seasonal readjustment in industry made further headway last week but failed to lift general business from its present state of lassitude. The underlying position of trade continued satisfactory, but results of spring operations in most lines of activity proved disappointing to those who had expected a progressive expansion.

With the exception of the automobile industry, the trend of the principal producing divisions has been toward lower levels. There improvement has taken place in the past fortnight as in certain sections of the steel industry, the gains have been limited and not well maintained.

The business community, however, derived some encouragement from the fact that the current recession has been extremely moderate in comparison with the trade depression which occurred a year ago, and that there appeared to be no sound basis for expecting a repetition of the unsatisfactory conditions which existed during the summer months of 1924.

Steel operations proved the best measure of general business activity. The Bethlehem Steel corporation, the country's second largest producer, reported that current operations of 70 per cent. compared with an average of 77.5 per cent. of capacity through the first quarter. Surveys of the weekly trade reviews left little doubt that the trend was toward a reduction of activity and that price cuts of key products were becoming more pronounced.

Despite the less favorable conditions which prevailed in March, the Bethlehem corporation was able to increase its net income for the first quarter of the year more than $1,000,000 over the final period of 1924. Preliminary estimates indicated that the United States Steel corporation's earning will be from $7,000,000 to $8,000,000 larger.

Railroad conditions continued spotty. Freight traffic was maintained at levels well above last year, but a bulge in coal loadings offset decreased shipments of grain and merchandise. The Union Pacific railroad, the first large system to report March earnings showed a substantial decease both for the month and the first quarter, which was reflected in a reactionary movement of the western rail shares.

Commodity prices again worked lower, copper, lead, zinc and sugar dipping to new low levels for the year although quotations on the red metal stiffened late in the week. Speculative activity in the wheat market diminished, and grain and cotton prices fluctuated mainly in accord with weather and crop prospects.

With sterling exchange selling at the highest level in ten years, the prospective restoration of the currency to a gold pirity basis appeared as one of the most favorable developments on the business horizon. The return of sterling to par, it was generally agreed, would have a tonic influence on financial and business sentiment.

NEW HAVEN MAN KILLED WHEN AUTO RAN INTO POLE

New Haven, April 26—Frank R. Marinan, 35 years old, formerly a druggist at 410 Ferry street, was killed early this morning when an automobile in which he was riding with Bernard Wronk, of 412 Ferry street, left the end at the end of the Dixwell avenue trolley line in Hamden, ran into a pole, overturned and pinned Marinan underneath. His neck was broken, Wronk is being held by the Hamden authorities.

According to information available, the machine headed off the hard pavement and ploughed through the heavy sand and then turned turtle against the pole. Wronk was ordered held by Prosecutor Joseph Shelnitz, on a charge of reckless driving and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. His bonds were fixed at $1,000. His case will come before the Hamden town court, Monday, May 4. Examination of witnesses, which was started today, will be continued tomorrow.

The men were said to have attended a party at the Wronk home last night and left with Edward Dunn and Dewey Nolan shortly after midnight. Dunn and Nolan were taken to their homes.

Wronk contends that Marinan was driving at the time of the accident but authorities report that Marinan's body was found in the rear seat.

"The number of persons arrested," the communication continues, "is not 6,000 but 2,000 throughout the country; and they were persons directly implicated in communist activities or suspected of participation in them.

DEPLORABLE INACTIVITY IN THREAD STRIKE DEADLOCK

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, April 26—With the close of the seventh week and the beginning of the eighth week of the strike at the American Thread Company plant here strike headquarters stated Saturday that their standing in the situation remains unchanged. They reported most favorably on the perseverance of the strikers to remain true to their cause until the ten per cent wage cut, effective January 12, last, is returned. They stated that the number of operatives who remained at work or are returning is too small to cause any noticeable depletion in the striking ranks. The enthusiasm of the strikers remains persistent, as was evidenced by the large turn-outs on the picket lines during the past few days. One afternoon last week the strikers massed at the mill gates and cheered. Although the raising of their voices was the only sign of a demonstration, one of the officials called on the police to enforce the ordinance prohibiting loitering in front of business places. This procedure, it is understood, did not meet with the entire sanction of other officials of the plant, although they agreed that the company did not desire any scenes at the mill gates. Chief Allan McArthur and Officer Bombria observed the proceedings.

At the mass meeting Saturday morning the operatives voted to eliminate any cheering for fear that the calling of the police would cause any undue impression of trouble to the general public and to the company officials. They voted strict adherence to their passive demeanor, which has made the local strike a model one in the eyes of all observers. Thomas J. Regan of Lowell, Mass., was the speaker at the mass meeting held in the Gem Theatre. He strongly stressed the necessity of the picket line for the success of the strike. Miss Amy L. Hooker presided at the meeting.

With approximately $300,000 lost in wages to the striking operatives during the seven weeks of the strike the American Thread Company has also suffered severe losses and is continuing consistently in its program to operate its mills in other sections of the country in order to meet the demand for its product of thread. The new manufacturing plant in Dalton, Ga., is being operated, as well as two branch finishing plants, one in the Bronx, N. Y., and another in Mt. Kisko, N. Y. Considerable of the machinery is being removed from the local plant to these branch mills and plans are being made to remove even larger quantities.

Some of the local office girls have been notified of their transfer to these branch finishing plants in New York state and several of the local officials and sub-officials are already located there. It was stated that the company has not, however, considering the setting of any date for the starting up of the plant here to test the strength of the strikers. Rumors that the company was to play one of its ace cards and order a general exodus of strikers occupying tenements owned by the company were branded as false by the officials, who said that as yet the company had not even made a demand for the payment of rentals due for these tenements. It was also said that the story in circulation that girls residing at The Elms, the company boarding house for women employes had been ordered out, was untrue. Some of the girls were back in payments of board and these were notified that until their bills were paid it would be necessary for them to secure other boarding places. Some of these bills were for two or three weeks.

Monica McKeon sang "Pie Jesu" at the offertory and Edward Portelance sang "Farewell" as a waiting hymn.

The procession to the cemetery and the committal services at the grave were also most impressive. Belec read the committal prayer. Magnificent floral forms wereplaced about the burial plot. Arrangements for the funeral were in charge of Killourey Brothers.

JEWETT CITY

For the second time within a week, a July day with 80 degrees of temperature, has visited this section. Easter finery had a fair show Sunday and smart frocks to the evident agreeable accompaniment of new Spring suits, added to the beauty of the day.

There was a considerable flurry of excitement noted among the younger swains, anything under 70, when the Checker automobiles arrived, with their dozens of attractive femininity.

Bohemian wax-wings have arrived in larger numbers than ever noted before. They were first noted on the branch hill by Rev. J. W. Reynolds of Newent, and Saturday Dr. Jennings saw a flock of 50 in that vicinity. They are one of the most striking colored bunch that visit this section. With black striped head and conspicuous crest, yellow and rich brown body, and a red-tipped tail that looks as though it had been dipped in sealing wax, they are easy to identify and worth while to see.

The borough swung into the advanced time schedule without a hitch. For the most part time pieces were moved ahead an hour. The farmers in the great milk producing country round about the borough are undeniably inconvenienced. The Boston milk car now leaves at 5:03 a. m. On account of milking and stock feeding, which no time advance can regulate or change, they must get up in the morning and milk and fodder in the dark all summer. No local farmer sets his time ahead. The coming of daylight controls the morning activities of the man on the farm.

Favorable reports were welcomed in the borough Sunday, relative to the condition of Alpherie LeClair, a Jewett city patient in the Backus hospital, Norwich.

The afternoon parade over the state road kept the man who counts pretty busy, Sunday. Two hundred machines an hour passed over the crossing all the latter part of the day.

Under the new arrangement woodcock may be shot between October 15 and November 30, instead of from November 1 to December 31. Quail may be shot between October 15 and December 31 instead of November 1 to December 21, but this arrangement does not conform with the Connecticut law.

Justice courts in the town of Plainfield will practically cease doing business on June 30, for the newly authorized town court, as approved by the legislature, will begin to function July 1. George Torrey, for many years a trial justice of the town of Plainfield, will be the judge of the court and Arthur H. Donlan will be a department judge in Plainfield village. Attorney Bradford W. Danielson of Moosup will be the prosecutor, with Stuart Ellis worth, of Central Village, deputy prosecutor.

Sunday compensated in the way of heat for what the previous Sunday perpetrated in developing a northeast storm that should have come in early March and was biting cold. At 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon a thermometer in the center of Danielson registered 92 degrees, the highest of the year. The weather brought a shedding of top coats, busy hours for the soda fountains and traffic enough to jam the state highways with machines. The evidence appeared to be that spring had really arrived.

Add to the list of bus lines that are in ever increasing number one operating between Arctic, R. I., and Moosup and doing business but a few days. This line is intended to link up eastern Connecticut and the Pawtuxet Valley with a frequent and rapid transportation system. Over in Arctic the hope is that the line will draw business from this section of eastern Connecticut, particularly villages of the town of Plainfield. It is another of the ways and means of attracting trade out of this corner of the state, but there is the chance that it will also bring in some. This new bus line, under the interstate permit that allows it to operate, cannot serve people of the villages between Washington and Greene, and Coventry residents are setting up the claim that this is unfair, in view of the fact that the train service through that section is meagre.

Trains operating through Danielson Sunday were running on the new and earlier schedule intended to dovetail with the daylight saving programmes of many cities and towns the railroad serves. It appeared to make little difference here. It so happened that the boat train was late, but mornings hereafter, whether the train is late or not farmers who have to ship by this train will have to be up right smart early to get their shipments ready to leave here just before 6 o'clock eastern standard time.

A change of interest here is that south-bound trolley cars, connecting at Central Village, for Norwich, now leave here after the odd hours instead of after the even hours, as heretofore. There is no change in the running time, hourly service also being maintained as usual.

A forest fire that broke out late Saturday forenoon burned over a large area of wooded territory and sprout land in territory northwest of Dayville Four Corners. Fire fighters battled all the afternoon to bring the fire under control and finally found an effective ally in the heavy thunderstorm that broke shortly before 6 o'clock. Residents of all the nearby territory aided in fighting the fire, the worst that has occurred in this town the present spring season.

One hears that farmers in Ekonk and vicinity are developing a plan for delivering their milk in Providence by motor-truck instead of shipping it in by train, as they have been doing. This idea is coincident to the re-introduction of an early morning milk train schedule that approximates daylight saving, though the train continues to run on standard time. This new schedule entails on some milk producers the necessity of getting up as early as 1:30 or 2 a. m., to get their milk to the shipping station. The motor-truck will allow the farmer to slip back to his regular time for rising, yet, it is said that the truck, which will carry milk from a number of farms, will deliver the product at its destination in Providence practically as soon as the milk shipped by train.

Sunday afternoon, at one o'clock, at the church at Hopkins Mills, funeral services for Mrs. Edna Wells were conducted by Rev. Carl Pearson, pastor of the United churches of Chepachet. During the services the hymns, My Saviour First of All, and Lead, Kindly Light, were sung by Mrs. Frank Wilbur. Miss Mary Baxter being organist. Burial was in Hopkins Mills cemetery. The bearers were Elmer Hopkins, Frank Simmons, Walter Simmons, Fred Smith, A. F. Wood was the funeral director.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos L. Livsey, after three months in North Carolina, Virginia and Washington, have returned to Brooklyn.

Members of the Canton and of the Rebekah lodges here attended service at the Baptist church in a body Sunday morning.

Mrs. Joseph Walters of Putnam; formerly resident here, was a visitor with friends here Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett of Providence spent Sunday with Danielson relatives.

DR. ORLANDO C. SHARPE DIES AT DAYVILLE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Danielson, April 26—Dr. O. C. Sharpe, 72, for 37 years a practicing dentist in Danielson, died Saturday afternoon at the home of his niece, Mrs. Myrtis Blanchard, in Dayville. Dr. Sharpe had been in poor health since he was severely injured and sustained a fractured hip when a large limb of a tree fell on him at the home of one of his neighbors, on North Main street, June 11, 1923. He was a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam for many weeks and later was under the care of a nurse at his home on North Main street. At one time he had so far recovered as to be able to take automobile rides through the surrounding country, but his condition of improvement did not prove permanent and eventually he went to Dayville, to make his home with his niece. He had been seriously ill for a considerable period and apparently at the point of death for several weeks, though he maintained his interest in the general doings of the world.

Orlando Chester Sharpe was born in Dayville, May 11, 1852, a son of William Sprague and Nancy Jenks Sharpe. His early education was obtained in that community and later, at Putnam, he attended high school and in the meantime began the study of dentistry in the office of his brother, Dr. William Sharpe, one of the best known members of the profession in this section of the state. It was 40 years ago that he opened an office in Danielson and continued his practice up to the time he was injured, having a large clientele numbering many who had been his patients for years.

Excepting one brother, Daniel W. Sharpe, Dr. Sharpe leaves no relatives nearer than nephews and nieces. Dr. Harry Sharpe of Putnam being a nephew. Mrs. Sharpe, wife of Dr. O. C. Sharpe who was Miss Helen Chapman, died eighteen years ago. Dr. Sharpe was not a member of any fraternal order. Danielson will regret his death. He was a splendid citizen, of a kindly nature and his friends were legion.

Lincoln C. Andrews, of New York West Point graduate and World War veteran, who has been given direct supervision over the Prohibition Unit, Coast Guard and Customs Service. This new change is liable to create some excitement among the ranks of the bootleggers, for with General Andrews after them in his characteristic way, the Volstead Law is sure to be enforced to the nth degree, as far as rum runners are concerned.

CAPT. A. M. PALMER SUICIDES AT CALIFORNIA HOME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, April 26—Captain A. M. Palmer, a former well known business man of Putnam, killed himself ten days ago at his home at Long Beach, California. He left Putnam thirty years ago and has never been back. The news of his death in a natural way would have caused no surprise as he was 71, and had been in ill health since 1913, when he suffered a stroke of paralysis.

Capt. Parker was a brother-in-law of Charles S. Sheldon of South Woodstock, Mr. Sheldon's sister, Phoebe Sheldon Parker was Capt. Parker's second wife and the message announcing the death from her to Mr. Sheldon.

Nearly forty years ago Mr. Parker opened a shoe store in what is now the meat department of the Mansfield Grocery Company. Later he moved his store to the opposite corner, where Bugbee and Wulf are now located. He subsequently sold it to E. C. Bohanon and it afterward passed into the possession of Byrno Dr. Bugbee and then to his son, Ralph X. Bugbee, and Otto E. Wulf. For more than thirty years a shoe store has been operated at this location.

Capt. Parker was prominent in other ways, he was one of the junior officers in what was then Company G of the Connecticut National Guard and then its commanding officer. During the time he was active in military affairs he was for two years a member of the Governor's staff.

He killed himself by placing a muzzle of a shot gun over his heart and pushing the trigger with a ram rod. Mrs. Parker was away from the house for only a shot time and found her husband dead on her return.

NEW LONDON TRAFFIC OFFICERS GETTING AFTER THE SPEEDERS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 26—Warm weather brings an increase in the number of automobiles in use and the larger number of automobiles on the road brings to the courts violators of the laws made to govern the operation of machines. The police court had four such cases Saturday, Herbert Ring, of Norwich, was fined $25 for speeding on Montauk avenue, the principal driving highway of the city. He hit a pace that attracted the attention of Motorcycle Officer Babcock to him and then Ring was apprehended. He pleaded guilty and paid some $40 in to the court for his recklessness.

William Clark of 22 Howard street recently acquired ownership of an automobile, and Buster Hyde was giving him lessons in the operation of it. But Clark didn't have a license to operate and he, too, fell under the eyes of Officer Babcock. The machine was not behaving well because there was a novice at the wheel. That led to an inspection, with the result that Clark could not show his authority to operate. He said he had just secured the machine and that when he had learned to run it he was to get a license. That procedure was not in conformity with the auto laws of the state and Clark was obliged to pay for his indiscretion. He was fined $10.

Max Rogoff of Montville and Charlie Thompson of New London were hitting it up on Montauk avenue, just tearing off the miles, as they ran down that fine track. They went by intersecting streets as if there was no chance of an accident because they failed to reduce speed or to give any intimation that they were flying along. Officer Babcock followed them on his motorcycle and when he overtook them he said some things to them that convinced them they were reckless. He present them for violation of the rules of the road. They admitted their offense. Judge Prince fined them $5 each and they paid. They secured counsel to represent them, perhaps thinking they might escape a penalty. That was an additional expense, so the young men paid pretty well for their disregard of the rules of safety.

Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church is of the opinion that he can interest the young folks in religion to a greater degree than they are now manifesting interest. Today he arranged services for them especially. In the morning he preacned a sermon directed particularly to young people, and in the evening he sought farther to interest them. He had an improvised pulpit arranged with a fireside effect and then he talked right to the young with the theme of his discourse, "What Ails the Young People?" The talk was of matters that concern youths and maidens and the way they are living in these days of the flapper and the sheik. The talk was earnest and what was said was to lead all in the straight and narrow path that leads to happiness and away from misery. There was a home-life atmosphere about the whole service, and old-time and familiar hymns were sung. Miss Elwood sang a solo and W. H. Bush gave an organ recital that was pleasing. The congregation was a large one. The services indicated that the young folks will attend to religious duties when the teachings are such as well be entertaining as well as instructive. Rev. Mr. Howe was in his youth a newspaper reporter and he got close to the teachings that will bring the young into closer touch with the church if services are made attractive to them.

Ezra J. Hempstead, veteran Quaker Hill farmer and widely known, is indisposed at his home as a result of a collapse suffered in this city Saturday. Mr. Hempstead as is his daily custom, delivered several cases of milk at the O'Leary hotel and while in the receiving department of the hotel, he collapsed. He was given temporary treatment and then was assisted to his home, where he received medical attention. His condition today, is reported as improved.

Seven youths, whose ages range from 8 to 16, were taken into custody this forenoon by Sergeant John Cavanaugh charged with burglarizing the barn of Health Officer Benjamin N. Pennell, on Home street. The youths were turned over to Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield and will be given a hearing in the juvenile court next week.

The barn was for storage purposes and had many articles of value housed there. The lads are alleged to have entered the building through a window and to have removed two buffalo robes, a shot gun and a quantity of silverware. The burglary was discovered Saturday and the investigation by Sergeant Cavanaugh resulted in a neighbor giving the information that boys residing in the neighborhood had been observed loitering about the barn a few days ago. This information led to the detective of the youths.

The trial of William B. Waterman, of Glenwood Park, of the firm of Waterman & Wolfe, charged with operating his automobile while under the influence of liquor, has been set for Wednesday, May 6th by Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky. The trial of Waterman has been delayed several weeks because of a series of incidents. Since the arrest of Waterman, Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin has been confined to his home, on Nathan Hale street by illness. Waterman has been ill and one of those injured in the accident which resulted in Waterman's arrest, Frank Bray, 134 Riverview avenue, is still under treatment at Lawrence hospital, for a fractured pelvic bone, these unavoidable incidents causing the deferring of the trial from time to time.

Waterman was operating his automobile on Montauk avenue five weeks ago, late at night. When a short distance south of Thames street, Waterman's car, which, it is alleged, was traveling at a high rate of speed, crashed against a car owned and operated by Bray and in which was Mrs. Bray. The Bray automobile was completely demolished and Bray and his wife were hurled from the machine. Complaint was lodged against Waterman and Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Motorcycle Officer William Babcock, who investigated the case, arrested Waterman at the latter's place of business, on Main street, where he is alleged to have been intoxicated and is claimed to have destroyed two bottles of whiskey in the lavatory.

The Norwich State hospital authorities, Saturday night informed the New London police that Gertrude Haley, 15, had escaped from the institution and requested that a lookout be maintained for the girl. The girl is described as having dark brown hair and wors a white sweater and a black and white dress. No trace of the runaway was found here.

The bearers were Timothy Sullivan, James McCarthy, William Sullivan, John O'Connor, John Sullivan, and Jeremiah O'Connor, all nephews of Mr. Moran. The flower bearers were John McCarthy and Robert Sullivan. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

J., will celebrate nuptial high mass. Miss McGarry until recently has been secretary to President Benjamin T. Marshall, of Connecticut college.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus S. Nichols of 28 Darrow street announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Almera, to Albert Brown Jeffers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Jeffers of Central Falls, R. I. Miss Nichols was graduated from W. M. I. in 1919 and from Rhode Island Hospital Training School for Nurses in 1924. Mr. Jeffers is a graduate of Brown university, 1922, and has since been made a bank examiner of the state of Rhode Island. The wedding will take place early in the summer.

The police made but one arrest in the last 48 hours for since Friday night there was not a single occupant of a cell at the police station until this evening when a Waterford resident was taken into custody on Bank street, where he had fallen from intoxication.

A relative of Frank Genearelle, 5 of Westerly, who is a patient at the Mitchell ward, Lawrence hospital suffering from spinal meningitis, visited the ward shortly before 1 o'clock this morning and demanded of Miss Holt, the nurse on duty there, that the child-patient be given up to the relative that the youngster might be taken home. The nurse refused to do as requested and the relative insisted that he be given the child. Miss Holt communicated with the police, stating that the child was in a dying condition and that she would not turn the child over to the relative without permission to do so being obtained from Health Officer Benjamin N. Pennell. Acting Lieut. James D. Gaffney later located the relative and the latter insisted that the child should be returned to Westerly. To satisfy the relative that it was impossible to permit the child's release from the contagious institution, Health Officer Pennell was sought at his home and there the relative was threatened with arrest if he visited the Mitchell ward again. The child was still living this evening, but its condition is critical.

Mrs. Kathleen H. Crine, 25, wife of Sidney Crine, of 59 Summit avenue, died late Saturday afternoon at Lawrence hospital at which institution she gave birth to a child. Mrs. Crine was formerly employed as telegrapher at the local office of the Western Union Telegraph company. Mr. Crine is also employed by the telegraph company.

Wednesday, May 6th, is New London's natal day, but so far as is known there will be no celebration of the event, for no arrangements or plans have been made to mark the anniversary.

The largest crowd of the season was that which visited Ocean Beach this afternoon. The weather was ideal and throughout the afternoon and early evening thousands of men, women and children were on the board walk.

WOMEN, AS WELL AS MEN, MAY JOIN COMMERCE CHAMBER

(Special to the Bulletin)

Putnam, April 26.—The directors of the Chamber of Commerce are to hold their meeting at the Putnam Inn at 6.30 o'clock on Monday evening when plans will be decided on for the annual meeting.

One of the important achievements of the Chamber during the past year was the securing of a new industry for the town, The Strongman and Perkins Company, Inc. They are located in the old Morse mill building, on Church street, which has been idle for many years, now more than one hundred persons are employed and overtime work is required to keep up with orders. This achievement in itself, especially during the depressed industrial condition, the officers of the Chamber of Commerce feel fully justifies the existance and continuance of the organization.

Alex Gilman, head of the Alex Gilman Hardware Company, is president of the organization and Arthur S. Macdonald is secretary. The board of directors is made up of representative business men.

In commenting on the condition in the Chamber of Commerce, Arthur S. Macdonald the secretary said:

"The meeting was especially for the purpose of making plans for the annual meeting and to talk over the situation. An apparent lack of interest has somewhat discouraged those who have done the actual work of the chamber and at its opening the meeting reflected that discouragement. However the general depression turned to optimism and before adjournment three hours later there was a new enthusiasm born that will assure a prosperous year, if the members get behind the officers with their support.

"It was the unanimous opinion that the chamber is a valuable asset to the community and must by no means be abandoned. It is only by organized effort that problems arising in civic life can be properly taken care of. There is every reason why it should be allowed to disintegrate.

"However, in order to keep the organization functioning it must have members and those members must pay their dues. Not a person in Putnam but either directly or indirectly derives benefit from the work done by the chamber of commerce, therefore its membership should include every man and woman in Putnam.

"There are many things that the Chamber of Commerce accomplishes that do not appear before the public eye. Probably but few people realize that but for the prompt action of the Chamber of Commerce one new industry would have located elsewhere. Such is the fact, however, and this concern is now giving employment to a hundred Putnam citizens and is constantly installing new machinery. This one example of what the chamber of commerce has accomplished during the past year is sufficient reason for its being and for its deserving united support.

"The business situation in Putnam was discussed and it was pointed out that notwithstanding the depression of the past two years Putnam has come through without a mercantile failure and is today in a healthier business state than the neighboring towns of Webster on the north and Willimantic to the south.

"As C. Bridgett expressed it, 'We can not afford to let an organization like this die.'

"The outcome of the discussion was the decision to hold the annual meeting at the Putnam Inn on the evening of Monday, May 11, at 8 o'clock with an interesting speaker to address the meeting.

"The fiscal year of the chamber is about to close and, while plans are still in embryo state, it is expected that a campaign will be waged to attract a greater membership. Every man and woman in the city, whether a manufacturer, storekeeper professional man or woman or an employe, is eligible to join the organization. It is a civic organization first, working for the betterment of the city. Within the organization is a merchants' committee working for the mercantile interests of Putnam. Other committees cover different fields, but the organization as a whole has but one purpose—to further the interests of Putnam, a purpose that deserves one hundred per cent. support of the people of the community."

STATE POLICEMAN INJURED WHEN A TIRE BLOWS OUT

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, April 26—State Policeman Walter Hardisty sustained painful lacerations and cuts on his leg and a severe shaking-up at 2.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon when the blowing of a balloon tire on the front of his new Henderson motorcycle caused the machine to topple to the highway, in Andover. The flesh of one foot was cut through to the bone. The injured officer was rushed to the Stafford hospital and later was returned to the barracks. It was found that there were no bones broken. The suddenly deflated tire left the rim and wedged between the wheel and fork. The officer was dragged several feet under the spinning machine before he could stop the engine and free himself.

THREE COLCHESTER BUILDINGS BURNED, LOSS $35,000

Colchester had a $35,000 fire Saturday morning about 2 o'clock, when the factory of the Harry Levine Manufacturing Co., Mr. Lewis' new house, and a repair shop connected with Louis Berman's garage were burned.

The fire started in the rear of the first floor of the Levine plant from an undetermined origin, and swept through the plant so rapidly that it was impossible for the firemen to check it there. Patrick Kenney, a watchman, was in the boiler room at the time the fire started, but knew nothing of the blaze until after it had been discovered by a pedestrian. The plant was a two-story and a half wooden structure, erected about four years ago.

The Levine dwelling house was just being completed at a cost of $7,000. The flames, after jumping from the factory, swept through that building rapidly.

John Denver, a fireman was caught between the two burning buildings and suffered serious burns before making his escape. Sparks set fire to the roof of the Broder Grain store nearby, but this blaze was extinguished by the firemen with little damage.

The Levine factory, which manufactured women's coats and suits, employed 60 operatives, but was being operated with skeleton force as the manufacturing season is over. There were six employes in the factory Friday manufacturing samples for the fall trade.

Fights Fire in Air

Experiments in France have proved the success of an automatic fire extinguisher for airplanes, by which the gasoline is shut off and a liquid for extinguishing flames is pumped through the motor by means of a whirling spray.

Happiness

True happiness is of a tired nature and an enemy to pomp and noise. It arises, in the first place, from the enjoyment of one's self, and, in the next, from the friendship and conversation of a few select companions.

The Rhode Island general assembly adjourned Saturday without taking any vote on the resolution to ratify the proposed child labor amendment to the federal constitution.

AN INTERNATIONAL COURT

New strength has been given to the movement for this country to join the world court by the declarations made by Secretary Kellogg and former Secretary Hughes before the American Society of International Law.

When Secretary Kellogg speaks he unquestionably voices the sentiment of the administration. It has previously been disclosed that the administration is desirous of such adherence as has been urged upon this government, surrounded as it would be by the restrictions which have taken into consideration the position of this country relative to the league of nations and international affairs. What the president has said is given new emphasis by Secretary Kellogg's statement that "I am heartily in favor of the establishment of a judicial tribunal to which nations may present their problems and their international disputes" and expressing his surprise that the country is not a member of an international court.

Former Secretary Hughes laid much stress upon the point that was raised by Senator Borah that this country ought not to join the world court until a code of international law has been perfected. Regarding this as putting the cart before the horse, Mr. Hughes said, "Instead of insisting that the establishment of a permanent international court should await the development of international law I should say that the work of such a court would be the best assurance that we should have that development." a view which is bound to make a wide spread appeal.

It is much the same in regard to the court as it is concerning much of the law that is enacted. Perfection is obtained not at the start but as the result of getting started, finding the weaknesses and dealing with them. If we are to wait for the development of perfect laws or the development of a perfect international code there is good reason to believe that there would never be laws and there certainly would be no international court for dealing with the very problems that are expected to come before it.

HEADED FOR TAX CUTTING

While there has been certainty of a surplus in the federal treasury for the fiscal year it has been pointed out that more definite understanding of its amount would be gained following the income tax payment period. From Washington comes the statement that according to the figures of March 31, or three quarters of the fiscal year, the indications are that the surplus for 1925 will be approximately $160,000,000 or considerable more than was estimated when some months ago it was figured the surplus would reach $83,000,000. The improved condition reflects the state of affairs throughout the country.

For the 1926 fiscal year it has been estimated that there would be a surplus of $373,000,000, but it is now possible to change that estimate so that the amount is fixed at over $400,000,000, with the possibility that it will approach $500,000,000.

Such treasury statements must serve as a basis for consideration when it comes to preparing the cuts in taxation which they make possible. It is by adhering to the budget system and the efforts of the president in behalf of economy that government expenditures have been kept down. Such expenses were kept within bounds because of presidential recognition that the people were entitled to a cut in taxation, and that they should get it rather than heading the government in to extravagant outlays.

With the surplus making it evident that reduction of taxation can be made there are reasons for a careful scrutiny of the present tax laws in order that the reduction may be made in such a manner as to bring about the elimination of injustices and the changing of the taxation for the greatest good of the greatest number and not overlook the effect which a sensible and scientific tax cut is bound to have upon the industrial situation.

Tax revision has been persistently aimed at and inasmuch as it has been established that financial conditions justify it, it is important that it should be carefully and thoroughly done.

FIGHTING VICE

Cleaning up Philadelphia hasn't been the easy task that General Butler thought it might be. Possibly he didn't exactly look upon it as easy, but it is evident that he did not anticipate the kind of opposition he has been experiencing if we are to judge by his preliminary statement and the one recently attributed to him.

General Butler in expressing his confidence over the early and successful outcome of his job as director of public safety expected to strike a major blow within 48 hours. He had made a record for himself at the head of the marines but he had not previously tackled a job of cleaning up vice. Both involve fighting, but of an entirely different type. General Smedley clearly points this out when he says, "In a battle you can decide what you want to do. Your enemies are in front of you and you know about where they are. In fighting vice your enemies are everywhere and you never know where you are going to find them next."

It is more than a year now since General Butler undertook the job of cleaning up Philadelphia. He received certain backing but a tremendous amount of opposition. Some of his methods of bringing about law enforcement caused friction among city officials, and he found it necessary to give the police force a severe shaking up. Even then it was different from applying discipline and getting results in the marines.

General Butler has done much in his sincere effort at cleaning up. He has taken longer than he expected and is now on his second year's leave from the marines. It may not be that he will complete the job he shouldered when this year is up. But in getting an extension of time for this second year it was stipulated that at its conclusion he should either return to the marines or give up his commission in that branch of the service. Thus there is nothing surprising about the intimation that he will terminate his work there this year. He is not a vice crusader but was sought to help those who knew Philadelphia needed a thorough cleaning and he was regarded as the man to do it. He has probably done as much as any individual could have under the conditions and much more than many more would have.

THE GERMAN ELECTION

Surprise will be registered at the outcome of the German election, if the early reports predicting the choice of Field Marshal Hindenburg as president of the German republic is substantiated by a complete count.

This is Germany's second election to fill this office and because of the fact that Dr. Marx is strongly committed to the support of the republic it had been considered that his election would follow. Hindenburg's candidacy has nevertheless been getting enthusiastic support from the nationalists and he has apparently been able to bring out that stay at home vote in the previous election from which he was expected to receive important aid.

During the short but ardent campaign Hindenburg has declared that his election would not mean the disrupting of the republic, but he has received the support of the monarchists and his candidacy met with the approval of the former kaiser. His election thus means the placing at the head of the government the nation's great war leader, a friend of the Hohenzollerns and one whose sympathies has not been kindly disposed to a republic.

Not only Germany but all Europe and beyond has been watching this test of ballots for it all has its bearing upon the relationship of that country with other nations And there will naturally be much concern over the effect upon the carrying out of the Dawes plan.

Thus it would appear that Germany is in for an interesting period, and while, according to the Hindenburg claim, it doesn't permit it to be said that Germany has turned its back on the republic, attention will be particularly directed to the developments in that direction. It will have more difficulty than ever to allay the suspicions of France.

THE FRUITS OF CARELESSNESS

There are those who heedlessly chop railroad torpedoes, those who play with dynamite, those who hunt for leaks in gas pipes with matches, those who revive kitchen fires with kerosene—those who take poison in mistake for medicine, those who are killed by running their cars in closed garages, and those who "didn't know it was loaded," but it remains for another to be added to the list by an auto owner lighting a match to aid in the filling of his gasolene tank.

It is needless to say that such an act sent the person to the hospital, though it is surprising that it didn't result in a call for an undertaker. The chances are that this individual will not attempt such a thing again, but it was supposed that there was such a general knowledge of gasolene and its explosive character that no one would think of intentionally inviting serious trouble and possibly death by any such action. Perhaps he realizes now that it would have been far preferable to spill the most of what he was trying to put into the car's tank than to try to avoid a small loss at so high a price.

But how many others will get the benefit of that same lesson? From the large number of similar acts of carelessness in the past, it can be certain that this will not be the last affair of the kind, that similar accidents will occur in the future through the display of the same kind of carelessness. It would in fact be interesting to know just what would be required in the way of a demonstration to have it so impressed upon others that they would exercise the proper degree of care in the prevention of similar avoidable accidents.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Wash a mesh bag in soapsuds containing ammonia. Dry by shaking in jeweler's dust.

Fruit juices should always be saved to be used in desserts and fruit drinks.

Your books will not be so apt to mold if you sprinkle a few drops of lavendar through the bookcase.

To freshen state cake, dip it for a moment in sweet milk and re-heat it in a moderate oven; it will be like freshly baked.

Have the oven very hot at first, but gradually decrease the heat when baking meats.

When scrubbing always rub with the grain of the wood if you wish to get the best results with the least labor.

Vegetable and fruit closets should be in the coolest and dryest part of the basement.

If you want to keep a fire going for several hours without giving it any attention, sprinkle a few tablespoons of salt over it.

Do not let sour milk stand any longer than is necessary before you use it, for it is less acid then and the curd is in the best condition to use before it separates from the whey.

Remove coffee stains from linen by rubbing the spots with glycerine before you use soap and water on them.

Pour boiling water over raisins, let stand for a few minutes, drain the water off, and you will find that the stones can be quickly and easily squeezed out from the stem end.

In preparing cold-slaw an excellent substitute for vinegar is the juice from sweet pickle, and the addition of a cup of black walnuts gives it an entirely new flavor and is delicious.

Try using a paint brush instead of the ordinary duster when dusting carved furniture. You will find that the brush can get into all the crevices and you will get along quicker.

Never use shears or heavy iron instruments to take the top off a milk bottle. You may scrape splinters of glass into the milk without even noticing it. A hatpin is an excellent milkcap recover.

PRESERVE LINOLEUM

The treatment of linoleum on the floors of the home so that the best results in durability and attractiveness may be attained depends upon the variety of covering with which the housewife is dealing. If the linoleum is plain or inlaid, the colors going through to the burlap back, the best method is to wax it. This gives a pleasing finish and is ample protection for the covering.

If the pattern is printed on the surface in heavy oil paints, the linoleum should not be waxed. This is known as printed linoleum and requires a coat of varnish to protect the surface colors from scuffling feet and heavy furniture. Choose a good varnish that will not turn white when it is wet and spread it out thin, applying two coats.

Before applying either the wax, which is put on with cheese cloth, or the varnish, which is applied with a regular paint brush, the linoleum should be washed thoroughly with a pure soap that it not too hard. The water should be luke warm. By keeping linoleums waxed or varnished their usefulness is not only prolonged, but their original coloring and beauty is preserved.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

The unfortunate mother whose child cannot digest milk without serious harm to its system will probably find that goat's milk will agree with the child. It is worth the trial, at any rate.

If the leg is broken and is in such a splint that the toes are exposed, anoint the toes frequently with olive oil or cold cream to keep the skin soft and do not allow the bedclothes to touch them, as this may cause irritation and itching. Tucking the clothes over the foot of the bed keeps the weight off the limbs.

An application of menthol rubbed on the outside of the face has been known to help, and the old-fashioned "toothache drops" of oil of cloves may be carefully applied to the aching tooth on the end of a match or toothpick wrapped in absorbment cotton. Care should be taken to touch only the aching tooth as an application of this nature may easily blister the inside of the mouth. When one can see the cavity in an aching tooth, pain will more quickly be relieved by saturating a wisp of cotton in the medication decided upon and gently stuffing the cavity with this.

If your hair is dry and you keep it well protected from dust and well brushed, once in every three or four weeks will be often enough for a shampoo. If it is oily, more frequent washing may be necessary, though a cleansing tonic will help to remedy the condition. If possible, shampoo in the daytime and dry out doors. While the hair is drying, give the scalp an extra massage to help keep it loose, pliable and healthy. Every other Monday examine the ends of your hair and clip any that are split. Use a good hair tonic regularly.

SOMETHING FOR THE BABY

Something for His Highness, the baby! And nothing less than a new spring coat like those shown in one of the smaller shops. It was made by hand, and as dainty as though mother's hands had taken the stitches. Babies have a way of being indifferent about most things, but most any self respecting young person would give an extra coo of satisfaction if presented with one of them.

FURNITURE COVERS GAY

The woman whose profession is home-making will rejoice when she beholds the new imported hand blocked cretonnes and linens in gorgeous colors and attractive designs, from which the slip covers for her furniture may be made. The home can be changed from winter's sombre coloring to spring's gay attire by making drapes of the same material as that used for the slip covers. Belgian linens in plain colors and stripes work up very effectively, also.

WIDE BAND BRACELETS

Long tight sleeves or peasant sleeves gathered into a tight wristband are responsible for the revival of bracelets in wide bands of etched gold or silver. They are exact reproductions of those worn by our grandmothers and the woman who has an antique pair of bracelets is indeed fortunate.

DICTATES OF FASHION

The most popular outer garments now are made of crepe, satin, satin bengaline, silk bengaline, charmeen, faille or taffeta.

A soft shade between rose and violet, which is called thistle-bloom, is at the moment conspicuously featured in the new millinery.

At the moment all the lighter tones of gray are regarded with considerable favor and are quite as popular as natural shades of beige and sand.

The use of sheer full sleeves in frocks of wool as well as silk is exploited by a number of the best houses and revives a fashion that is always charming and always feminine.

Some steel trimmings on day coats and frocks. A very beautiful coat straight and loose in black crepe marrocain was entirely embroidered with steel beads; a wide border at the bottom was alone plain.

There is small consolation this season for those who like "plain" clothes. Designs are a veritable riot in the spring showings and unhappy indeed will be the maid or matron who can not boast some elaborate finish of this nature.

There are bright-hued scarfs in every smart window—knitted in every conceivable color and pattern. And, though there have been many efforts to "kill" the vogue, the skeptic hardly cries "The scarf is dead!" before a thousand wearers cheer, "Long live the scarf!"

"Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief"—we do not know just how many buttons ones spring frock should have, but we know there will be plenty of them on it if Dame Fashion is expected to be in her best mood when she sees it.

PUT TO NEW USES

One has become accustomed to the use of chintz and cretonne for sports clothes or for models of equal informality, but to find it employed in the fashioning of evening costumes is a bit surprising. So deftly is it handled and so skillfully is it combined with other materils that there is nothing incongruous in its appearance as an integral part of a frock or wrap

FLOUNCES AND PLAITS

The flounce and the plait have been outstanding features of the spring styles. Why not both? That is the question the French designers have asked and they answered it by designing a frock of black capote, the bodice of which is trimmed with silver lace. The skirt is composed of two deep flounces of crepe, accordion plaited. Similar plaited flounces appear at shoulder, elbow and wrist.

POPULAR TOP COATS

Nothing has yet taken the place of the camel's hair topcoat, especially among girls of the younger set These soft and becoming coverings are essentially plain, and the latest are made on the general lines of the guard's coats so popular for men last year. They are double-breasted and have a belted back. The natural camel and almond green are favorite colors.

COOKING HINTS

The water in which onions, potatoes or other vegetables are boiled should be saved for soup.

Before hulling strawberries always wash them. Much of the flavor and juice escapes through the opening made by hulling and is lost in the water when they are washed.

Toast slices of bread a delicate brown, butter liberally, spread with strained honey and sprinkle with cinnamon. Place in oven until piping hot. Serve at once.

Successful cakes are baked in the middle of the oven, the shelf being placed about four inches from the bottom.

Serve individual planked steaks in a ring of potatoes, and garnish with broiled tomatoes wax beans and onions.

To glace sweet potatoes they must first be parboiled and then baked in a greased baking dish with corn syrup, brown sugar, butter and a little water and occasional basting.

ABOUT THE HOUSE

A small dining alcove may be made to appear much larger with the use of scenic wall paper and bright colors.

A nook in a room is a good place to put a large piece like a sofa, or a big secretary desk. This relieves the piece from taking up too much room or from jutting too far in toward the center.

A fancy tray has a decorative value. Buy an inexpensive picture in a plain wooden frame. Then remove the picture and insert in its place a decorative piece of wall paper. Paint the frame to match the high tone paper and add a couple of brass handles. Paper of a flashy colorful design will add color to any room.

IN QUILTED DESIGN

Several generations ago when our great grandmothers, with minute stitches and painstaking care, worked out the quilted designs that have made their bedspreads valuable and cherished heirlooms they little dreamed that this form of needlework would some day be called upon to provide the element of novelty which fashion deems so essential to chic. The earliest revival of quilting was seen a few seasons back when Paris introduced for resort wear charming little coats made of the quilted petticoats of Brittany peasants. Then followed sport hats on which stitching formed patterns resembling the old fashioned needlework. This season a different form of quilting appears on the new ensembles made of natural or grayed kasha. It is used in a manner to create the most effective of border designs.

USE THE CORRECT UTENSIL

Keep the can opener and cork screwer in a fixed place. Then you will not be tempted to use a knife in place of these articles and receive a nasty cut by doing so.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Nearly 90,000 women are engaged in agriculture in England.

Women hair dressers in London earn better wages than the men barbers.

Frau Ebert, widow of the first German president, will receive a pension of $141 a month.

San Francisco's Chinatown telephone exchange is operated by Chinese girl operators.

Mme. Marthe, noted Parisian lion tamer, is claimed to be "the most fearless woman in the world."

Women working as laborers on farms other than those at home now number nearly 225,000.

A bill pending before the Illinois senate makes women liable to alimony payment the same as men.

Among the women of Italy, as among those of France, there is no active organized demands for the vote.

FOR VARIETY

Bake some extra pastry in your muffin tins the same day you bake a pie. These can be filled with stewed fruit and whipped cream, or may be used for creamed chicken or vegetables, and add variety to the menu

POLISHING GILT

Lemon oil or any very thin oil may be used for polishing gilt chandeliers and brass bedsteads. It keeps the shellac from hardening and cracking and thus permitting rust specks to appear on the unprotected suface.

RECIPES

Roly Poly: Roll out biscuit dough in oblong sheet a half inch thick; place on it grapefruit pulp; add sugar and tablespoon grated orange rind, roll up, pinch edges together, sprinkle thickly with sugar, add a half cup water and bake about forty-five minutes. Serve with hard sauce. (Marmalade may be used instead of pulp.)

Cholocate Clusters: Chocolate clusters conceal toothsome morsels of nuts, fruits, or cocoanut. Small seedless raisins are adapted to this method of preparation, also small peanuts roasted and blanched, or English walnuts, filberts and pieces of Brazil nuts. Milk chocolate should be used on all nuts except the peanuts. Sweet coating chocolate is better for these, the raisins and shredded cocoanut. Free the nuts from shells and wash the fruit well in warm water and dry thoroughly before dipping. Melt the chocolate over hot water and add a handful of the fruits or nuts on a slotted spoon or fork in clusters and drop on waxed paper to cool. When making cocoanut clusters drop in all the shredded cocoanut that the chocolate will take up. Do not add enough to absorb all the chocolate, but leave a little moist. Drop in balls on waxed paper and allow to stand until perfectly cool and hardened before taking.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Duke of Devonshire, whose illness at his estate in Ireland, is reported in the cable dispatches, is a former Governor-General of Canada, ex-Secretary of State for the Colonies, and one of England's largest landed proprietors. He is in his fifty-eighth year and succeeded his uncle, the eighth Duke, in 1908. He was educated at Eton and Cambridge University and before he succeeded to the title was a member of parliament for West Derbyshire. For several years he was treasurer of His Majesty's household and later served as Financial Secretary to the Treasury. In 1916 he was appointed Governor-General of Canada in succession to the Duke of Connaught. The Duke of Devonshire, who is an intimate friend of King George, owns an estate of about 186 acres, on which are valuable mineral deposits. In addition to owning the famous Devonshire House in London, he has five estates, at which there are three picture galleries, a statue gallery and an immense library.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

SCIENTIFIC VALUE OF MACMILLAN EXPEDITION

Scientific information of high value will accrue from the exploration of the world's biggest unknown area by the MacMillan Arctic Expedition under the auspices of the National Geographic society with the active cooperation of the navy, according to a bulletin issued at the Society's Washington, D. C., headquarters.

"Data which will be collected by members of the expedition and observations made by the United States Navy flyers are of potential value to navigators, farmers and fishermen," the bulletin explains.

"The major geographical fact is that the huge unexplored area, a million square miles, lies between two American flags, that which flies over Alaska and that which Peary planted at the north pole. In this area, more than three times the size of Texas, there is the possibility of a new continent being discovered, and the probability of land of some kind.

"The existence of this land is postulated on reports of explorers who have skirted the edges of the unknown area, and of observations of tides and ice conditions along this fringe, which conditions indicate the existence of land.

"Should such land exist it will be of great future economic importance in view of the commercial flying that, in years to come, will be done across the Arctic regions.

"The combination of aircraft and radio in Arctic exploration is a new feature of exploration, which not only adds romance and adventure to the undertaking, but which enhances the scientific value of the expedition.

"Hitherto our information about the Far North has been from explorers who had to penetrate it in winter, when the ice was continuous; summer flying makes possible observations of entirely different conditions with 24 hours of daylight to aid the flyers.

"This same daylight, however, as radio fans will realize, is a handicap to broadcasting, because night time is radio time. The use of the new short wave length apparatus, under these conditions, is an experiment which will be of value to the new science of wireless communication.

"Upper air temperatures in the Far North are almost as little known as the million square miles which may shroud a long-hidden continent. Summer records of these conditions not only will have a value to future flying but may have a direct bearing on weather forecasting.

"Forecasting weather consists largely in detecting new disturbances as they show up on the western and northwestern borders of the United States, learning their characteristics, and figuring out the paths they probably will follow because of prevailing barometric pressures and temperatures ahead of them.

"The great majority of what the weather forecasters call the 'lows'—that is the areas of subnormal barometric pressure—seem to originate over the warm sea south of the Aleutian Islands in the winter and over the interior of Alaska during the summer. But some of the conditions which cause these 'lows' to be 'built up' in those places and create 'highs' to the east have their birth farther north in the Polar Regions, and a better knowledge of temperatures, pressure and wind changes there undoubtedly would facilitate weather forecasting.

"In the search for the beginnings of its weather the United States is not concerned with the entire Polar Regions. It is most concerned. It happens with the unexplored territory which lies north of Alaska.

"Temperatures, pressures, and wind conditions—the vital weather factors—are not known in the regions north from Alaska to the pole. Explorations of this area is a preliminary to making detailed observations of these conditions which directly affect farms and orchards of the United States."

Speaking of the Navy's part in the expedition Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society, said:

"Two of the outstanding men of their generations in the history of the U. S. navy—Charles Wilkes; who discovered the Antartic continent on January 19, 1840, and Robert E. Peary, who attained the North Pole on April 6, 1909. Both were acting under the orders of the president and secretary of the navy.

"It is a matter of pride to the members of the National Geographic society that the monuments to Peary and Wilkes in the Arlington National Cemetery were placed there by their Society.

"With these two names may be grouped other navy men whose enterprise and daring have added to our knowledge of the world. Among them are Charles Francis Hall, who pushed from Thank God Harbor to within less than 8 degrees of the North Pole in October 1871; George W. De Long, who lost his life in Polar work; William Francis Lynch, who in 1848 conducted a valuable official survey of the Jordan river and the Dead Sea; Matthew Calbraith Perry, who so diplomatically opened Japan to the outside world in 1853, and Thomas Oliver Selfridge, who conducted surveys for a canal across the Isthmus of Panama in 1869-73."

Revolutionary Motor.

A gas turbine engine that, it is claimed, may revolutionize automobile and airplane motors is being perfected by a French engineer, says Popular Science Monthly. It is said to combine the advantages of the explosive gas motor and the steam turbine. Recent tests before officers of the French air service are reported to have given complete satisfaction, the engine turning smoothly at the rate of 1,500 revolutions a minute.

Stories That Recall Others

George's Joke

George thinks he has a prize joke on some of his friends. He has an unusually powerful loud speaker, and when he gets a good programme he opens the front door and the entertainment can be heard for a long distance. When George thus receives, other radio fans in the neighborhood also tune in on the same programme.

Sunday George made a hookup with his phonograph and sent the music through the loud speaker into the street. Others searched the air trying to pick up a similar programme but failed. Three or four visited George later and were much chagrined when they found how George had worked them.

Just Looked Funny

Harry had lost his grin. He had things in it he did not want to lose and he was flying around saying uncomplimentary things about its disappearance when he saw an urchin grinning at him. His amusement was so frankly unconcealed that Harry's temper, already under strong restraint broke its leash and he snapped:

"Well, what are you looking at me for?"

"Why, mister, you just look funny to me."

European Railways.

Most European states own and operate their railroads. And, with the possible exception of Switzerland, where the rates are so high that passengers ride third class and sit on bare wooden benches, every one of them has a railway deficit. The absurdity of a train made up of third-class, wooden-bench coaches and one (usually empty) mixed first and second class coach with soft seats is apparent. State owned and operated roads cannot be kept out of politics, and politically operated roads are not efficiently operated.

Of 13,132 London vehicle drivers most of them chauffeurs, who entered a "safety first" competition instituted by the London city council, 8,398 went through last year without an accident and have received special mention and badges. All the drivers thus recognized, and especially the taxicab drivers, count it a distinction to wear the council badges.

STREET DEPARTMENT GETS STREETS INTO CONDITION FOR THE SEASON

Under the direction of Street Commissioner John C. Donovan, the streets of the city have generally been given attention to get them into condition for the season and repair the ravages made on the roadbeds by the winter weather. Coal tar patching on macadam and other hard surface streets and gravel has been spread on a number of other streets to give them a new surface.

Streets where the coal tar patch treatment has been given to fill up holes and breaks in the highway surface are Williams, Oneco, Lafayette, Sachem, Thames, West Thames, Main, North Main, Central avenue, Bath street, Broadway, Broad street, Chestnut, Willow, Franklin street and McKinley avenue.

Gravel has been spread on Union street, Perkins avenue, School, Dunham, John, Summit and Elizabeth streets and Geer avenue.

General repairs have been made to gutters and catch basins to put them into condition.

One important improvement has been the laying out of a parklet at Centennial square, this having been urged by the Daughters of the American Revolution. This has changed an unkempt bit of grass in the center of the square to a tidy little parklet.

An improvement made on Rockwell street has been the widening of the curve near McKinley avenue. This has been done by cutting into the bank on the side of the street towards Mohegan park. The work is completed.

TREE SAVES AUTO FROM PLUNGE DOWN BANK

(Special to The Bulletin).

Willimantic, April 26.—John Pari, of 18 Carey Hill, this city, and four other passengers in his 1925 Hudson coach narrowly escaped serious injury shortly before 10 o'clock Sunday evening when Pari's machine sideswiped a Durant touring car owned and operated by Arthur Tatro of 827 Park street, Hartford, at Phelp's crossing on the North Windham road and the Hudson was prevented from a 30 foot plunge down a bank by coming to rest against a birch tree. Pari admitted to Police Officer Roderick Lariviere that he had been drinking cider and beer and that he had taken up more than half of the road in rounding the curve leading to the overhead bridge which spans the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway at the crossing. Pari was headed toward North Windham from this city when the accident occurred. After the collision Pari's machine swung off to the right of the highway through 20 feet of state fence and plunged five feet down the embankment coming to rest against the tree. The bank at this point is fully 30 feet from the road to the level of the tracks and the tree saved the limbs and possibly the lives of the occupants and machine. After being struck by the Hudson the Durant skimmed the state fence on the opposite side of the road for several yards.

The Hartford car was also laden with passengers, some of whom were women and children. None of those figuring in the mishap were injured. The Hudson was damaged to the extent of a smashed right fender, a broken front bumper and flat tires. The glass in the coach remained unbroken. The Hartford machine was quite badly damaged, the two front fenders being smashed, the head lights broken, both hub caps being pulled off and the front axle bent beyond repair. Wreckers later hauled the cars to this city. Pari was locked up at the police station and will be arraigned in police court this (Monday) morning on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. He stated that he was formerly a baker but was now one of the striking operators of the American Thread company. Phelp's crossing has been the scene of several spectacular accidents, several of which were caused by intoxicated drivers.

46TH. ANNIVERSARY BY LADIES' AID SOCIETY

The Ladies' Aid society of the German Lutheran church observed its 46th anniversary, Sunday evening, by giving an entertainment at the church rooms, following the usual evening service. This program consisted of vocal and instrumental selections and several recitations by members, all of which were greatly enjoyed.

The program was as follows: Selection by orchestra, solo by Lawrence Hamilton, accompaniment by Miss Annie Retovske, pianist, and William Werth, violin; address of welcome, Mrs. Frank P. Decker, president of the Ladies' Aid society; readings, Mrs. Pauline Budzeck; reading of roll call, Mrs. Herman Retkovske, secretary; selection by orchestra; duet, Mrs. Bruno Weinert and Mrs. Olga Zachee; reading, Mrs. Retkovske; address by Rev. Herman Hunzinger, pastor of the church; music by orchestra.

PICTURES SHOWED WORK ALONG MISSIONARY LINES

A stereopticon lecture on missionary work being done in this country under the direction of the Northern Baptist convention, featured the Sunday evening service at the Central Baptist church. The service, which had a large attendance, opened at 7:30 o'clock, standard time. An augmented choir led the singing and there was special music by the Sunday school orchestra, Douglass Hunt, leader.

Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the church, explained the various beautiful slides as they were shown on the screen. The slides showed a welfare camp in the west conducted by the Baptist church, a colporter on his travels by wagon, motor boats used in transporting missionaries up and down rivers and lakes and a chapel car carried to various sections of the country free of charge by the railroads.

Several of the colleges for Indians and colored people were shown and the work among the Indians, colored people and foreigners was illustrated, showing what is being done to Christianize America.

DIOCESAN SOCIAL SERVICE STRESSES CHILD WELFARE

Waterbury, April 27.—Social workers of the diocesan bureau of social service, including delegates from Hartford, New London and Bridgeport, assembled at the annual conference of the bureau held here today. Rev. Matthew J. Judge, of Watertown, diocesan director-treasurer, presided at the meeting at which Rev. Francis J. Lebuffe, S. J., dean of the school of social work at Fordham university, spoke on "The Social Mission of the Church."

Reports from committees were read including the secretary's report submitted by Marguerite T. Boyland, of Hartford. This report laid particular stress on the child welfare work of the bureau. The family welfare work, the report said, is considerably hampered by insufficient funds.

Arm Badly Cut

Albert Derosier was arrested on a breach of the peace charge Sunday afternoon after he had smashed a show case in Ralph Demico's small store at 11 Lake street.

Derosier had a bad cut in his arm from the broken glass and had to have the wound sewed up by Dr. W. T. Driscoll at police headquarters. The arrest was made by Officers Smith and O'Neil.

PARADED FROM SYNAGOGUE TO HEBREW INSTITUTE

A congregation that filled the Brothers of Joseph synagogue attended the service held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock to signalize the opening of the new Hebrew Institute building at 21 Fairmount street.

The boy and girl pupils of the institute attended the exercises in a body, marching into the synagogue in charge of their teachers, M. I. Silverman, principal, E. R. Siffe, and Joseph Reichman. They were seated at the front of the synagogue.

Aaron Gordon, chairman of the school committee, opened the exercises and introduced the speaker of the occasion, Abe Tannenbaum of New York, who made an address of great interest, as he spoke of the significance of this advance in the education facilities for the Hebrew children. In closing he said this was not only a dedication of a building, but a rededication of the lives of those present, who might say that they have done all they possibly could to carry on the work of their forefathers. He expressed the hope that the boys and girls would apply themselves to the task of making themselves fit and able to carry on the work of the Jewish people, going ever onward to greater heights and aspirations. The opening of this building, he said, is a challenge that you, boys and girls, dare not refuse to answer. What will you do to carry on this work. Let your answer be, "We are here."

ABE TANNENBAUM

Rabbi J. N. Rosenberg followed Mr. Tannenbaum, speaking of the acquirement of the school building as the accomplishments of something that they had been waiting fourteen years for. This was a building to be used specially for school purposes. He said he hoped the generation which was to enjoy the advantages of this school building would realize its opportunities to the full.

Mr. Rosenberg then asked for bids for the honor of unlocking the door of the new school building, thus formally throwing it open to use. Several bids were received, starting at $25 and the honor went to Nathan Beit on a bid of $100.

This closed the exercises and a parade was then formed with Mr. Beit at the head, carrying the key and two small American and Hebrew flags. Following him came the rabbis and school directors, and the group of school children, in which several of the boys carried a large American flag and several girls a large Hebrew flag. The congregation joined in the parade from the synagogue on West Main street to the new school building which was decorated with American and Hebrew flags.

Upon reaching the building, Mr. Beit proudly unlocked the front door, allowing the children to enter the building where they were served refreshments. After they had been served and allowed to go home, the crowd was admitted to inspect the building, which has one large class room on the main floor and two on the second floor. On the main floor there is also a large room for the school board meetings and in the basement is a room for meetings which has been engaged by the Norwich Hadassah chapter.

A marble tablet in the board room contains the name of contributors to the endowment fund, which now amounts to $10,000.

At present there are 122 pupils of the institute, which takes children from 6 to 16. Classes will be held Tuesday for the first time in the new building and there will be registration of new pupils.

TENANT MUST MOVE FROM LEDYARD FARM

A hearing in summary process proceedings against Charles N. Burdick of Ledyard to oust him from possession of a farm which he was occupying under an oral lease from Edmund B. Lewis was held last week before Justice of the Peace Andrew B. Avery, who decided the case in favor of the owner of the farm and that Burdick must move.

Testimony was given by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis against the Burdick occupancy of the farm and by Mr. and Mrs. Burdick and Annie Fairfield. Andrew B. Davies was counsel for Mr. Lewis and Hibberd R. Norman for Mr. Burdick.

Mrs. Charles Fox

Following an illness of only five days the death of Hattie Estelle Pratt, beloved wife of Charles Fox, occurred Sunday afternoon at 12:10 o'clock at her home at 355 Main street. Mrs. Fox had been in poor health for the past two years but had been seriously ill since Tuesday of last week. Throughout her illness she was most tenderly cared for by members of her family.

Mrs. Fox was born in Brewster's Neck, Preston, March 9, 1861, the daughter of William H., and Louisa Congdon Pratt, and her girlhood was spent in that place. DEADLY CHLORINE AS A LIFESAVER

Development of chemical warfare has been so rapid since the Armistice that the public is in danger of overlooking the social uses of substances such as chlorine gas, which, according to officials of the Hackensack Water Company has for years been utilized by water systems in New York, New Jersey and other States to render typhoid germs harmless. No longer than ten years ago knowledge of chlorine gas was confined almost exclusively to chemists and other scientists, said G. R. Spalding, assistant superintendent of filtration and sanitation at the plant of the company of which Robert W. DeForest of New York is president, discussing chlorine as a factor in providing a pure water supply for Bergen County.

"Chlorine gas warfare, which came into use in the World War, gave every soldier first-hand knowledge of the deadly character, not only of chlorine, but also of mustard gas, tear gas, and vicious inventions of the chemist," added Mr. Spalding in an interview recently. Through war-time accounts of the press these gases became familiar to the majority of intelligent people throughout the world. Returning doughboys, shattered in health, with lungs literally burned up by suffocating chlorine, furnished evidence of the deadly power of this substance.

"Incredible as it may seem, however, there was no single agent in the world war that did more to save lives than did this same deadly chlorine gas. Years before the combatant forces in France seised upon gas warfare as a means of death dealing, chemists had discovered that chlorine gas was an efficient destroyer of disease germs.

"Water works chemists instituted the use of chlorine in sterilizing drinking water as far back as 1907 and one of the first to introduce the process was the Hackensack Water Company at its New Milford filtration works. At the time of our participation in the World War, chlorine disinfection of the Hackensack water supply had been carried on for nearly ten years, and one of the principal reasons which caused the selection of the Camp Merritt site for overseas troops was the fact that the War Department required and was able to secure a thoroughly filtered and sterilized water supply.

"The necessity for pure water had been amply demonstrated by experiences in Southern camps during the Spanish-American War, when our soldiers died like flies from typhoid and dysentery contracted from polluted water.

"The War Department orders during the World War required that every drop of water for overseas forces should be treated with chlorine to remove possible disease germs and that the water should contain a slight amount in excess, sufficient to be detected by proper chemical tests. Typhoid was practically unknown in all the branches of service as a result of this measure and the efficiency of the chlorine disinfection process established beyond argument.

"Today this treatment of drinking water is an accepted part of the purification process in all water systems where up-to-date and scientific methods are employed.

"As a pioneer in this work the Hackensack Water company developed methods for properly applying the chemical so that thorough removal of germs from water would be effected, and they now have two complete chlorine sterilizing units at their New Milford works, which insure against any intermission of the treatment from breakdowns.

"Chlorine is such a powerful chemical that its odor is readily detected in water, even in very minute amounts thus a faint taste of the chemical, rather than being a cause for alarm, is the very best proof that efficient removal of germs is certain."

CONNECTICUT WILL HAVE PART IN SESQUICENTENNIAL

Gov. J. H. Trumbull last week declared that he believes Connecticut will be represented at any sesquicentennial celebration held in Philadelphia next year, but that there is not likely to be any Connecticut building at such an affair for Connecticut needs its money for buildings in this state first. Governor Trumbull indicated that this state, as one of the thirteen original states will make a showing comparable to that of any of the other states should a celebration be held.

Gov. Trumbull's last word concerning the Philadelphia affair was last week when he had noticed that the proposed ground-breaking ceremonies in that city was postponed indefinitely.

The state legislature of 1923 appointed as a commission to investigate the advisability of participating in such a celebration, George J. Bassett, of New Haven; Gen. M. W. Potter, of Deep River; and George S. Palmer of New London. General Potter said recently that the commission had not met in several months, that the original plans for the celebration, which had headquarters in the Bellevue Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, were scrapped when the city of Philadelphia refused an appropriation. General Potter said he understood there was now a hitch in the plans of a second committee in charge of the affair, and that it was significant that the Connecticut commission had not met recently and had not asked an appropriation of the present legislature.

BULKELEY SOUNDLY TROUNCES ACADEMY IN HARD HITTING GAME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 26.—Two ancient or no we may call them perennial rivals, hooked up in their annual diamond battle here Saturday afternoon. There was spirit aplenty in the early innings and it looked as though after a lapse of nearly five years in which space of time Bulkeley athletic teams have dominated over those representing Norwich Free Academy, that the scorn would turn and that for the first time in that space of years that there could be a real battle for the honors which usually go to the team winning a ball game. But no, the Academy soaking an auspicious start fell down in her attack in the later innings and also in her defense, the result was a lambasting for the Rose City nine by the Orange and Black players to the tune of 16 to 2.

Much of the gayety which usually accompanies games played by these arch rivals was missing Saturday. It was a dismal drab day for a baseball game. All the fury of the elements unleashed themselves upon the players from the two schools and it looked as though the contest would not go five innings. But old Jupe Pluvius let down but a sprinkle only now and then to remind those below him that he was still in existence. His contemporaries, old man wind and Jack Frost were also there in their gala attire, and their attendance which was unexpected made things rather miserable for the players and fans alike. The twirlers especially fared badly from the cold weather, and probably the game would have been closer had it not been for this sudden change in weather conditions over night so to speak.

The twirling outside of the first inning by the Bulkeley pitchers, Farisi and Montali was more effective than the combined offerings of Jarvis and Green. The Academy was never dangerous outside of the initial frame when they scored a total of two runs, and had Green touched second base he would have completed the circuit for his hit was good for a home run. The Academy began cracking in the very first inning and were more or less unsteady for the remainder of the game. Bulkeley did not let up in their pounding of the Red and White moundsmen, and with the beginning of the fifth inning after two Bulkeley men were stationed on the sacks with no outs, Jarvis retired in favor of Green. In the four innings Jarvis occupied the mound, he was touched up for eight runs and nine hits.

Bulkeley backers were astounded while N. F. A. rooters shouted themselves hoarse with glee as three runs trickled over the plate for the Academy in the opening inning. Carroll walked and McGowan sacrificed. Immediate danger of scoring was broken when Jarvis filed out to second. Hinrichs, however singled through the box and Carroll scored the first run of the game. But more hits were due to follow and Green hit one to center which Booth did not play any too well. He circled the bases with Hinrichs before him. However Greene's failure to touch second on his trip around the bags lost him a home run and cost the Academy a run. That was the Academy's inning, and they never threatened to score again during the game, although they made a slight bid to score in the 8th with Montali pitching. Jarvis singled to right and Hinrichs got a hit when his slow roller along third base line was not fielded. Meehan attempting to catch Jarvis at second threw to center field and Jarvis took third on the play. In an attempted double steal, Hinrichs was easily caught going to second while Jarvis held third. There was nothing to it after this.

Bulkeley did not allow the Academy to stay in the front very long and got back a run in the first and mauled Jarvis' offerings for six hits, a base on balls and a sacrifice for seven runs in the second frame and the chances of any Academy victory went a-glimmering.

Bulkeley added more runs, with the help of some pokes and errors by members of the Academy team. Two more counters were made in the fifth as Gaetano's double, Mansfield's single and a steal followed by errors by Carroll when he failed to field Hinrich's throw. Green was in deep trouble in the seventh when Bulkeley left three men stranded on the bases, managing to bring home but two runs with the numerous opportunities which were offered to score.

The batting of the Bulkeley team was hard and timely all afternoon. The pitching except for the first inning was to a queen's taste. Both Montali and Farisi held the Academy batters with the exception of three hitless. The infield work was far better than that of the Academy and the play in general featured the strong defense and offense ability of the Orange and Black. Montali especially was impressive in the short time he occupied the mound. He struck out four men in two innings, repeating his effectiveness of the Academy in his second try at subjection of the Red and White in two years. The score:

Notes

All the hits made during the game were with the exceptions of one by [illegible] and one by Booth, hard smacks which would be bingles in any

Green made two good put outs in center field. He is a jovial lad, too, and wears a smile from ear to ear. He can clout them too.

Some fans have the thought that Umpire Rolle mentioned to the Bulkeley second baseman that Green failed to touch second on his circuit clout. This is not so, the protest came from Captain Tillie Daniels in right field when the ball was returned to the playing diamond.

After the big inning Bulkeley enjoyed in the second inning, the enthusiasm of the Academy rooters and players alike seemed to subside.

Coach William Canty made a Garfield finish to be on time to send his charges against the Academy. He just returned from a week's stay in Vermont.

RIVERVIEW OPENS SEASON WITH EASY VICTORY

The Riverview club got away to a good start Saturday afternoon when they won an easy, 14 to 3 victory over the Mechanicsville team. Although the weather was typical of March the game was close until the sixth inning when Hoenig the Mechanicsville hurler weakened and seven runs were scored. The game terminated in the seventh inning after Riverview had scored four more runs. West was in good form and fanned 11 men. Hank Morin umpired the game and is on the hospital staff of umpires for the season. Morin umpired last year at the institution and is rated as one of the best arbitrators in these parts.

Riverview from all indications has an exceptionally fast club this year, especially when it comes to batting. Normandin in Saturday's game led the hitting attack with three hits while Duffy a new man crashed out a triple. The score:

YANTIC WOOLMEN WIN AND LOSE IN OPENING GAMES

The Yantic Mills baseball club split even in the week end games that opened the season, winning Saturday's game from the Lebanon team 16 to 6 and losing to the Norwich Hardigs 9 to 11. A parade and concert by Housatonic Drum corps opened the season on Saturday. In Saturday's contest Lamphere pitched winning ball allowing but two scattered hits and fanning 16 men.

In the Sunday game Semrock was on the mound for the Woolmen but was pounded hard and forced to retire in the fifth inning in favor of Lamphere when the score was 7 to 7 against them. Four runs were scored off Lamphere's delivery while his teammates pounded Segal and Rankin for eight. The score:

TRIPLE PLAY FEATURES PROF'S WIN OVER HARTFORD

New Haven, April 26—An odd triple play was the feature of the game here this afternoon which the Profs won from Hartford 3 to 2. The play came in the sixth inning after Berger had singled and Davies walked. Martin bunted a high fly, Kenna allowed it to drop and then scooped it up. He threw to third, forcing Berger. Comiskey then threw to G. Sullivan who, upon noticing Berger running for home, threw to Kenna. Realizing that Berger had already been forced out, Kenna threw the ball back to G. Sullivan, who ran down Davies. He then threw to Mullen and the Hartford first baseman chased Martin toward second and threw to Hesse who tagged Martin out. Score:

SWORN STATEMENT MADE AS TO NURMI'S EXPENSES

Des Moines, Iowa, April 26.—(Bythe A.P.) Kenneth L. Wilson, athletic director of Drake University, tonight issued a sworn statement reiterating his charge that Hugo Quist, Manager of aPavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola, had asked an exhorbitant sum for expenses for their appearance in the Drake relays.

In an affidavit he forwarded to C. P. Wendell, Secretary of the Midwestern A. A. U. at Omaha, designated by Frederick W. Rubien, A. A. U. national registration committee chairman, to inquire into the charge, Wilson detailed two interviews he said he had Quist at which expense money was discussed.

The statement was made after Wilson took exception to a report by Wendell that Wilson had absolved Nurmi and Ritola from "any connivance and that the demands were made by and for Quist."

"On January 19, 1925," the affidavit said, "I talked with Hugo Quist, interpreter-manager of Paavo Nurmi, regarding an amateur race at the Drake Relays April 25.

"Mr. Quist said the race might be arranged, provided Nurmi's expenses could be agreed on. He suggested that it would be from New York to Des Moines and from Des Moines back to Finland, and estimated this would be around $1,000.

'On April 19 at the Loyalo relays at Chicago I say Quist in regard to the appearance of Willie Ritola at the Drake relays. Mr. Quist again brought up the matter of expense money and after I had suggested what I thought would be reasonable, due to the fact that Ritola was here in the midwest at the time, he (Mr. Quist) suggested the sum of $500.

"The Drake relay meet consists of schools and colleges, and we are anxious to give these younger athletes an opportunity to see these famed finish runners in action. However, we did not feel that we should allow more for expenses for them then we allow other athletes.

FIVE WORLD'S RECORDS SMASHED IN TRACK MEETS IN PAST FEW WEEKS

New York, April 26—(By the A. P.) Five world's records in the standard track and field events, two American collegiate and one national mark have been shattered by athletes in meets extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast during the past two weeks.

Moreover, figures for two medley springs have been swept away, a Texas four running to a new mark of 7 minutes, 35 2-5 seconds at the Lawrence, Kansas, meet a week ago for the two mile and Georgetown establishing time of 3 minutes, 28 seconds, for a mile at the University of Pennsylvania relays at Philadelphia on Friday.

Locke, Nebraska's flier, is credited with a 9 3-5 seconds performance in a heat of the 100-yard dash at the Kansas events. He won the finals in 10 flat.

Three world relay marks and one in the field events comprise the super performances of the infant college season, accomplished in competition at Philadelphia, Lawrence, Kas., and Los Angeles, California. Fifteen records for the Drake relays were shattered at the two-day meeting in Des Moines this week-end, but the athletes failed to attain world figures.

The new world marks for standard distances and field events follow:—

Georgetown, two-mile relay, 4:42 Philadelphia.

Kansas teachers, quarter-mile relay, 4:42, Lawrence, Kas.

Illinois, half mile relay, 1:27, Lawrence, Kas.

Houser, Southern California, discus 156 feet. 1 3-8 in. Los Angeles.

Myrra, olympic javelin champion, participated in the Los Angeles competitions on Saturday and hurdled the spear to an American record of 212 feet, 9 1-2 inches.

The collegiate records go to Schwarze of Wisconsin for pushing the 16-pound shot 49 feet, 10 1-8 inches, at the Kansas meet, and to McKown of the Kansas Teachers College for vaulting 13 feet, 3 1-8 inches, also at the Kansas tests.

Outside of Georgetown's relay victories, the East must bow to the Middle West. A comparison of the Penn, Kansas and Drake results show that Kansas produced the best time for the quarter mile relay with 42 seconds. Princeton, which won at Philadelphia, was only two-fifths of a second behind this time, while Kansas, appearing again in the Drake events, was one-tenth of a second behind Princeton's figures.

Illinois' 1:27 half mile relay mark, established in Kansas, was only five-tenths of a second better than that of Michigan at Des Moines, Penn, the Philadelphia winner, covered the distance in 1:28 3-5.

Georgetown's mile relay in 3:19 was threatened by Nebraska with 3:19 3-10, but Western teams were far behind the 7:42 world mark for two miles. Texas, running at Des Moines, made the best time of the season at four miles with 15:58 3-10.

Guthtir of Ohio State, at Des Moines, and Moore of Penn State, at Philadelphia, cleared the 120-yard high hurdles in 14 4-5 seconds, only two-fifths of a second behind Earl Thomson's record.

Schwarze of Michigan, scored the best distance for the shot put with 49 feet, 10 1-8 inches in Kansas, and far excelled all other collegians in the discus, registering a heave of 146 feet, 7 1-4 inches, the best performance until Houser come along to establish a new world mark.

Poor of Kansas jumped 6 feet, 5 1-8 inches, at Lawrence and 6 feet, 3 inches, at Philadelphia. Woods of Butler leaped 24 feet, 1-4 inches, in the broad jump at Philadelphia. Co of Oklahoma hurled the javeline 197 feet, 6 1-4 inches, at Lawrence and McKown broke the collegiate record in the pole vault in the Kansas meet.

A comparison of performances at the Drake and Penn meets Friday and Saturday follows:

One quarter mile, D. :42 5-0, P. :42 2-5; one half mile, D. 1:27 5-10, P. 1:28 2-5; One mile, D. 3:19 4-5, P. 3:19; two miles, D. 7:51 2-5, P. 7:42; four miles, D. 17:58 3-10, P. 18:05 1-5. Individual events:

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

On a Spider

Artist, who underneath my table
Thy curious texture hast display'd!
Who is we believe the fable,
Wert once a lovely blooming maid!

Insidious, restless, watchful spider,
Fear no officious dameel's broom;
Extend thy artful fabric wider,
And spread thy banners round my room.

Swept from the rich man's costly ceiling,
Thou'rt welcome to my homely roof.
Here may'st thou find a peaceful dwelling,
And undisturb'd attend thy woof.

Whilst I thy wondrous fabric stare at,
And think on hapless poet's fate;
Like thee confin'd to lonely garret,
And rudely banished rooms of state.

And as from out thy tortur'd body
Thou drawest thy slender string with pain;
So does he labor, like a noddy,
To spin materials from his brain.

We for some fluttering tawdry creature,
That spreads her charms before his eye;
And that's a conquest little better
Than thine o'er captive butterfly.

Thus far 'tis plain we both agree.
Perhaps our deaths may better show it:
'Tis ten to one but penury
Ends both the spider and the poet.

—Rev. Edward Littleton, LL. D.

The Lament of the Bird

I'm only just a little bird
That sings upon my perch:
But if within my cage you'd look
And make a thorough search,
You'd find no cool, fresh water there
And very little seed:
No sand to make me strong and well
Or anything I need.
My mistress has so much to do,
She's busy as can be—
But don't you think she ought to take
Much better care of me?

Susan Hubbard Martin in Our Dumb Animals.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

One of our most valuable birds is the downy woodpecker. Just why is he a valuable bird? Well, in the first place he stays with us all the year. He is here winter and summer alike. He has no bad habits and does no harm. On the contrary he guards our trees from destruction by bugs, worms and injurious insects. He is very fond of them and is continually on the lookout for a meal, feeding on all kinds bugs and worms which he finds in and about the branches and trunks of trees. Were it not for the attention he and other birds pay to worms and injurious insects our trees would suffer extensively. They would be virtually eaten up by the tiny but ravenous bugs, and worms.

How many of the Wide Awakes know a downy woodpecker when they see one? He is black and white in color and resembles his first cousin, the hairy woodpecker. The male downy has a red patch on the back of his head. He is about three inches shorter than the hairy woodpecker and is about an inch shorter than the bluebird, his length being about six inches. Downy's outer tail feathers are pure white.

The places to find downy's nest are in trees and stubs near lakes, ponds and streams. He seems to prefer willow stubs in which to build his nest. Sometimes he builds his tiny home in woods and orchards. Downy's nest is not as comfortable as the nests of tree swallows, nuthatches and some other birds. The eggs, usually five in number, once in a while, six, are laid on the bottom of the nesting hole or a few chips scattered on the bottom of the nesting hole.

Although Downy does not sing he is well known as a drummer for he hammers on dry, resonant limbs with his stout bill and makes rat-a-tat-tat notes.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

Dear Uncle Jed: We have been having a very interesting story in school about a Scotch boy whose name was James Watt. He was born in Scotland when George Washington was a little boy not quite four years old.

James Watt was a good scholar and was always wondering and trying to find out about things. He spent much time with his grandmother and often asked her questions which puzzled her. One day he asked her, "What makes the fire burn?"

The grandmother had in her kitchen an iron teakettle with a heavy iron lid. One day James was watching this teakettle when some water was boiling in it. He noticed that the lid shook and rattled. His grandmother told him that it was steam that lifted the lid of the kettle.

James thought that the steam must be very strong to lift the iron lid. Then he began to wonder if the steam from a larger quantity of water would not be much stronger.

As he grew older he came to think of steam as a giant, the strongest giant in the world. He believed it could be made to do many other things beside rattle tea kettle lids. "If we knew how to use this power," said he, "it would plow and sow for us, spin and weave, propel boats and turn the wheels of factories."

There was a clumsy steam engine already in use in Scotland but it was not of much use. James Watt set himself to work to improve this engine and he carried on until it worked much as our steam engines work today.

A professor of one of our Connecticut universities recently said in a lecture that we owe nearly as much to James Watt as to George Washington. Washington led a revolution in government, James Watt brought about a revolution in industry. His inventions and discoveries made possible the steamboat, the locomotive and the modern factory.

Being Useful

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought some of the Wide Awakes might like to read this story.

Two bills were waiting in a bank for their turn to go into the world. One was a little bill, only one dollar; the other was a big bill, a thousand dollar bill.

While lying there, side by side, they fell to talking about their usefulness. The dollar bill murmured, "Oh, if I were as big as you what good I would do! I could move in such high places and people would be so careful of me wherever I should go! All would admire me and want to take me home with them, but small as I am what good can I do? Nobody cares much for me. I am too little to be of any use."

"Ah, yes, that is so," said the big bill; if you were as big as I am, then you might do some good in the world.

Just then the cashier came, took up the little bill and kindly gave it to a poor widow. "God bless you!" she cried, as with a smiling face she received it. "My dear, hungry children can now have some bread."

A thrill of joy ran through the little bill as it was folded up in the widow's hand, and it whispered, "I may do some good, even if I am small." I was glad that I could do a little good.

Then the little bill began to take its journey of usefulness. It went to the bakers, then to the millers, then to the farmers, to the laborer's, to the doctors and at last it came back to the bank, soiled and wrinkled from his usage. When he saw the thousand dollar bill lying there with scarcely a wrinkle on it, he exclaimed, "Pray, and what has been your mission of usefulness?"

"Alas!" said the big bill, I have been from safe to safe among the rich. They were afraid they would lose me and few indeed have I helped.

The little bill said, "It is better to be small and help people than to be large and do little."

Be Kind to Animals

Dear Uncle Jed: This is a true story about my Kaliko cat, which I dearly prize. One morning I went to the cow-stable, and in the manger I saw her sleeping. My mother did not want me to keep it; but I did.

She is very gentle, goodnatured, and is very lovable. Her name is Kitty. We called her that, because it was short and easy to say. Kitty is brown, black, gray, yellow, white, and is three years old.

Kitty has a baby kitten that is very pretty and I intend to raise it to see how old it will grow. She has not been abused while in my sight, for I would not let any one hurt her, and I hope others will feel as I do.

My motto is: Be kind to animals and they will be your friends.

Going Fishing

Dear Wide Awakes: One day I asked my mother if I could go fishing. As soon as I heard her say yes I took my pole, some worms and some hooks and started for the brook, before she could have a chance to change her mind. When I reached there I put a worm on the hook and threw it in. I waited for a few minutes. Soon I felt a jerk on the pole so I pulled it up and took off the fish. This was my first fish and if happened to be a sucker. Then I threw the hook in again and this time I waited a half hour. I grew impatient and was about to start for home when just at that minute I felt a bite and pulled up the pole quickly but there wasn't any fish. I then jumped on a rock and tried my luck again. For the third time I threw in the hook again. Before it had time to reach the water I heard a noise. It frightened me so that I nearly followed my hook into the water. The voice came nearer and nearer everytime and what do you suppose it was. It was my own pet calf. I then chased her home drove her in her stall and fed her. I then came into the house and told my mother about it. She was very glad I came home because she needed me. I gave her the fish I caught and when supper came we all had some of it. We all enjoyed it, but I above all, because I caught it.

Washington Crossing the Delaware

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about Washington crossing the Delaware.

It was about three or four o'clock on Christmas morning when Washington and his men were crossing the Delaware. If Washington crosses he will capture the Hessian troops stationed at Trenton.

Washington was standing in the first boat looking eagerly toward shore. The men that are rowing are skilled fishermen from Massachusetts. All the rest of the men are drawing their coats about them.

In the boats following are the horses. Washington's white horse is standing erect while all the other horses are prancing about. The other boats following carry the guns, more men, and ammunition.

When Washington reached the shore he had a four hour march to Trenton. At Trenton, the Hessians were drinking, and celebrating Christmas. They were not ready for battle. Washington captured them and that was the turning point in the great war.

Going Fishing

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time that I have written something for the Wide Awake Circle, and I thought that I'd write you something about my fishing trip. One morning when I awoke, I looked out through the window, and found that it was a pleasant day. So I got up, ate my breakfast and went out and got my pole, line, some hooks and dug up some earthworms. It was about eight o'clock when I went out, and I stayed till eleven o'clock. I got three nice large ones, and I threw back eight small ones. I live on a farm, and we own a brook.

My Pets

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you, I am going to tell you about my dog Gyp. He is a very smart dog. At night he goes and gets my cows. When we play ball he bites the ball. I also have nine baby chicks. I love to see them scratch for their grain. I have four black ones and white ones. I hope you will like this story as I have tried very hard to write a good story.

Why Norwich is Called "The Rose of New England"

Dear Uncle Jed: Do you know why Norwich is called "The Rose of New England?" I shall tell you. Many years ago Norwich had many flowers, especially roses. I believe that it had more than any other city in New England. Last year a lady came to the schools and asked the children to give some money to buy more rose bushes and thus keep up the wonderful name of Norwich. Of course I gave her some, but I also planted a rose bush. We moved soon afterwards but the lady that lives there now says that it is growing quite rapidly. She thinks that it will have little roses this summer. I am very glad I did this because I helped to keep the name of Norwich. I hope the boys and girls who read my story will like it and do the same. It is not only the fun of planting, and taking care of the flowers but also the thought of keeping up the wonderful name of Norwich which is, The Rose of New England.

Being Helpful

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write a letter and hope all the Wide Awakes will like it. It is about being helpful. I help mother make her beds and sweep up the floor and help in the store and now I am learning to bake bread and cake and pies. I like to bake very much. I can sew a little too. I think all little girls ought to help their mothers, don't you?

The Declaration of Independence

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake Circle I thought I would write about the Declaration of Independence. The Declaration of Independence was signed July 4th, 1776. The king's answer to the petition of congress for redress of their wrongs was a call for troops to put down the "rebellion" in America. This became known in America early in 1776 and congress and people alike began to believe that the time for reconciliation was passed. The various colonies organized state government under the direction of congress and the trade of the country was made free to the nations of the world. In the summer took place the final acts which severed the allegiance of America to the English crown. On June 7, 1776 Richard Henry Lee of Virginia moved that the United states colonies "are of right ought to be free and independent states." John Adams of Massachusetts seconded the motion which was passed by a majority of one colony on July 2nd. A committee then drew up the Declartion of Independence which was adopted on July 4th, 1776.

A Happy Discovery

Uncle Jed: What was that in the semi-darkness ahead of me? A dog? Could it be true? I back pedaled and whistled. A long, long, growl greeted my ears and brought tears to my eyes. For the sound of this growl told me that some little dog was in pain and sorrow. I could imagine how some owner felt to lose his dog, for I had the same experience. It did not matter if my little dog was not brought back to me. I was going to get this dog and return it to his owner. So saying this I made my way to where the noise came from and stumbling once or twice I still kept up courage. I reached the place where the sound came from and to my surprise what do you think I found? Not some one else, dog but my own dog. Oh! how glad I was to get him. I was so glad to think that trying to find some one else dog I found my own. So it always pays to do a kind deed for some one else for you are always rewarded in some way. This is my second story to the Wide Awakes.

The Hero Dog

Uncle Jed: Jack a big shepherd dog, lived out on a farm not far from London. This farm was on a branch of the Thames. Jack's mistress was Miss Jane George.

Jackie had some white on his breast and a small streak on his forehead. He was now about three years old, no longer a puppy. Jack was faithful to his mistress and she was faithful to Jackie.

One day a sad event happened and if it had not been for Jackie it would have been sadder still. Miss Jane went down to the river to take her daily bath and as she was in the water she had a cramp. She screamed for help. Jackie being on shore made one great leap and began swimming toward the place where she went down. With a heavy but faithful heart he went, and made it quick for he knew what the cry meant. Miss Jane was only about ten years old at that time. Jackie was now within 5 feet of the place; at the next moment he was there. In another instant he had Jane was unconscious and Jackie could do nothing until he went and got her father.

He was now on shore and had started for Miss Jane's father. Jackie found Miss Jane's father in the house He could not open the screen door and so he barked. Miss Jane's father came to the door and wanted to know what the matter was. First Jackie would bark and run toward the river and do anything so that the father would understand. At last he came. He picked up his daughter and carried her up to the house. Her father called the doctor and he said she would be alright in a couple of hours. The story was heard all over England. Great merchants came and offered large amounts of gold but they would not sell Jackie. The father did not like dogs before but now he was crazy over them. It was a happy day when Miss Jane had entirely recovered.

Our Greatest President

Dear Uncle Jed: I wish to write something to the Wide Awakes about that article in todays paper (Apr. 13) "Our greatest president and why? Also how it was answered. I wish to say my opinion differs, some what. I think George Washington, was one of our greatest presidents, but to say which one, was the greatest is hard to determine. Even though he helped make the Union, I do not think, he was any greater than Abraham Lincoln who held it together.

Our Homes

Uncle Jed: The buildings in which we live and work are made of wood, metal, brick, stone and cement.

There are many different kinds of wood. Some kinds come from trees that grow in our country, other kinds come from different parts of the world.

The trees of the forest are cut down, the branches trimmed off, the trunks cut into logs. The logs are then taken to mills where they are sawed into lumber. They are then made into buildings.

The metals are found in ores that are dug from the earth. All impurities are removed first. This is done by melting the ores in big furnaces. The pure metal is made into useful articles which are used in making houses.

Most bricks are made of clay.

They are molded in small boxes. They are burnt until they are hard. When bricks were first made red clay bricks were almost the only kind manufactured but now they make bricks of all colors.

Cement is a powder made from a burnt mixture of lime and clay. It is used in making homes.

In making buildings men use the trees from the forest, and metals, clay and rocks from the earth.

My Visit to the Country

Uncle Jed: Last summer my aunt wrote to mother asking if I could spend two weeks with her. Mother said I could go, though she thought I would make too much trouble and my aunt would get tired. I promised that I would be as sweet as sugar all the time so mother let me write the answer, say that I was coming on Wednesday.

Irene Adams, a good friend of mine lives near Aunt Mary. I wrote her too, so that she would know I was coming. I told her to be sure to be ready for some fun, so that we shouldn't lose any time. I hadn't been there since February and I knew there would be at least forty new things to see on the farm.

I went to bed very early that Tues-

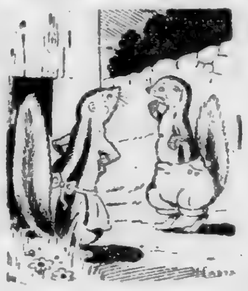
BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Jimmy Skunk is Still Free

'Tis quite impossible, I find,
To understand a woman's mind.
—Jimmy Skunk

Poor Jimmy. He may not know it, but he has a lot of company. It all happened after he was surprised by his big family in the moonlight over back of Farmer Brown's henhouse. You remember that Mrs. Jimmy walked out from the shadow into the moonlight with nine baby Skunks in a procession behind her. To Jimmy Skunk it had seemed that procession was endless. Then Mrs. Jimmy had taken Jimmy's breath away by informing him that they were his children, all of them.



Then she turned to Jimmy. "Good night," said she

Jimmy had done his best to appear delighted. There had been no trouble in appearing surprised, for he was surprised, but it was not so easy to seem delighted. You know it is rather upsetting to have the responsibility of a family placed on one at the very time when one is feeling wholly free and without responsibility of any kind. And such a family!

But Jimmy had done his best and had touched noses with each of the nine and tried to look proud. All the time he had wondered how he ever in the world would be able to know all of them. All the time he was thinking that no longer would he be able to go and come as he pleased, but now he would have to help hunt for food for all these babies and do his share in looking after them and seeing that they didn't get in trouble.

Just then Mrs. Jimmy spoke to the babies. "You've been out long enough for this time," said she. "We'll go back into the house, now that you have seen your father and he has seen you."

She turned and led the little procession back to the henhouse and then she wanted while the nine little Skunks lined up. Then she turned to Jimmy. "Good night," said she.

"Oh, but I'm coming, too," said he.

"Oh, but you're not," said she.

"Why not?" demanded Jimmy.

But Mrs. Jimmy made no reply. She had disappeared inside the house. Jimmy was tempted to follow her in, but thought better of it. He knew by experience that it was best to do as Mrs. Jimmy said. He waited around a while hoping that she would come out again. But she didn't and finally he went back under the barn to think things over.

Now, why did she bring all those babies out to show me if she isn't going to let me stay with them?" he mumbled. "It is a great note if a fellow can't go into his own house to see his own children." Then he remembered that that wasn't his house; it was Mrs. Jimmy's. He hadn't even been inside it. "Well, the babies are mine, anyway," he continued. "My goodness, what a lot of them! It is a real old-fashioned family. I remember hearing my grandfather say that he was one of ten. But what is the good of having a family if you can't be with them? Well, anyway, I'm still free. If Mrs. Jimmy wants to bring up all those youngsters without any help I guess she is welcome to the job."

Despite this Jimmy hung around near the henhouse a great deal. Now and then he saw the babies playing close to the doorway, but whenever he approached them they scampered inside. Now and then Mrs. Jimmy joined him in search of food, but always alone.

"The babies are not big enough and strong enough to take long walks," she would explain. So the days slipped into weeks and the babies grew and Jimmy was still free, not somehow he was tiring of that freedom. He wanted company. He wanted the company of Mrs. Jimmy and the babies.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

New York, April 25—Strength of sterling exchange, which approached within a nickel of parity to the highest price in ten years; relatively low money rates; higher bond prices and irregular movements in the stockmarket with violent declines in some of of the high priced specialties, were the outstanding characteristics of this week's financial markets.

The rise in sterling was predicated on the belief that some definite announcement regarding Great Britain's return to the gold standard would be made by Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, in his budget speech before the house of commons next Tuesday.

Except for a renewal of selling pressure against Union Pacific, Northern Pacific and some of the other western carriers which were hammered down to new prices for the yera, price movements in this week's stock market were largely insignificant and reflected chiefly the operations of professional traders. Reactionary tendencies also prevailed in the commodity markets although a noticeable stiffening of copper prices was noted toward the close of the week.

Bolsheviks in Berlin.

Politically, even Berlin, whose government recognized the union of soviets years ago feels that a bolshevik is a dangerous fellow Socially—well, one gets good food at the soviet embassy, where every celebration means the opening of a new tub of caviar of a kind no one outside of Russia can buy. At these receptions German artistocrats mingle with flannel-shirted workmen and foreign diplomats.

Word comes from London that jazz music has been barred at all municipal dances by the Edmonton urban council this being the first London suburb to take such action. The council took this step because of numerous complaints from citizens who objected to dances of "the wild, body-waggling type" T. J. Harrington, council chairman, said jazz would not be permitted hereafter at the town dances chiefly beause jazz dancers during waltzes took up too much space, their movements interfering with the orthodox dancers and, besides, "Jazzing was neither graceful nor dignified."

THE WIDE-AWAKE CIRCLE

day night, but I guess I was awake half the night. I heard the clock strike the hour more than once. Then mother laid her hand on my head and said it was time you waked up. The car is here, ready to take you to Aunt Mary's.

We are always busy on their farm and the days don't last long enough. Mother said I wore out a pair of slippers in a week and tear my clothes every day. But I can't help it if my slippers will break out and my clothes won't stay whole, can I?

One day the bull got loose, the women were afraid and you could hear them scream almost a mile away. The men caught the bull before long and no harm was done.

When the two weeks were nearly gone I had a cough and my voice was very hoarse. I was getting a fever so my aunt sent for a doctor. The doctor asked if I had any aches and pains, I said none at all, so he told my aunt I would pull through all right.

Irene was sure I took cold just so I could stay longer. Truly, I did't, but it did look as if I meant to play a trick. Then I went home after enjoying myself very much.

My Little Goat

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter and I hope you will like it. And I am going to tell you about my little goat. He is eleven weeks old. He is just getting horns and you would laugh to see him bunt the cat and dog off the step.

We give him milk and then the cat and dog like to take it away from him. He is very playful. My father bought 150 chicks you would laugh to see them run for worms.

My Playhouse

Dear Uncle Jed: In the back of our house is a small hen house. A long time ago it was used for setting hens. One day last summer daddy said that I could have it.

My sisters, Rosy, Becky and I started to clear it out. We all worked hard, and got it all nice and shining. Then my brother, William, put up some shelves. My mamma gave us some cracked and broken dishes, which I put on the little shelves.

We also put in an old oil stove.

Every day my sisters and I have fun playing house. Rosy is the mother and Becky and I the children.

One day my brother tried to scare us by hiding and then making a loud noise, like, "boo."

I wish all the Wide Awakes, could see and play in my playhouse.

FRANCES COHEN. Age 6.

How I Spent Easter

Dear Uncle Jed: Early Easter morning about six o'clock we started for Webster, Mass. We reached there about nine o'clock. My aunt, uncle, grandfather and cousin were going. On the way we saw many beautiful sights, such as squirrels looking for breakfast. After dinner we went to Worcester. I think that it is the best city I have ever seen. I reached home at ten o'clock. Hope the Wide Awakes spent a happy Easter. I like Easter because my mother always gets me something new.

WESTMINSTER

These texts were used in the post Easter talk in the morning worship Sunday the 19th.—"Now is Christ Risen From the Dead and Become the First Fruits of Them That Slept." "Christ, Able to Keep You From Stumbling, and Cause You to Stand in the Presence of His Glory Free From Blemish and Exultant." Who has promised "Because I Live, Ye Shall Live Also."

For the midweek "Hour of Prayer at Home Altars" the more than usually important subject is given "Self-control," with the Scripture Galatians 5:16—24 Christian character cannot be attained without battle, well worth while but costly. It is known by its fruit with no permanent deceptions, and includes self-mastery, under God's spirit.

Mrs. J. Murray Meade, and little son Jack, of New London who have been guests of Mrs. Jessie A. Meade, of Sunny Meade Farm for the past week, have returned to their home, making the trip each way by automobile. Mr. Meade, who is closely confined by his business, was able to come up for the two week-ends. Mrs. Meade was first identified with Westminster when she taught in Hill school, as Miss Violet Young, boarding with the Linnell's at Rose Cottage.

Mrs. Axel Helstrom and children, Harry and Violet have returned home, after spending the winter with New York relatives.

A second auction, of furniture and household goods, at the Babcock place was very largely attended, many going from this locality.

Last Sabbath at East Thompson, the funeral was held of Mrs. Albert Spicer, formerly of Westminster at the home of her daughter Mrs. Robbins. Mrs. Agnes B. Wood whose mother was a Spicer attended the funeral.

Harold Hubbard of the New York Fire Department was a guest at Oscar Hubbard's Sunday.

A number of former residents and descendants have recently been to visit graves in the church yard.

Another very low-flying airplane flew over Westminster this week.

In spite of phenominally low temperature for the season, the first of the week, ice forming outdoors and in hen houses a number have reported lettuce, radish, tomato and other of the early vegetables as out of the ground, in some cases to the experience of a frost.

Rev. Mr. Dapies was a visitor in his former parish of Unionville, and in New Britain and met again many of his friends in Hartford, among them Mrs. Kingsley Thomas, formerly of Westminster.

Earle MacLeod was at home Easter Day, from Terrytown, where he is now employed, coming by automobile with his aunt, sister of Mrs. MacLeod, and her husband.

Supervisor Floyd visited Westminster Hill and other schools in this region the first of the week.

The Town Speaking contest is to be about the middle of May, at the Plains.

Westminster Mill contest is to be the evening of May 1, in the schoolhouse.

GALES FERRY

The concluding number in the course of dancing lessons, by Mrs. Anna L. Duffy, and her pupils here was given in the Country club house, Friday evening from 8 to 11 o'clock, before a large assemblage. The club house was very attractive in its decorations, of streamers of pink, yellow and violet, with Japanese lanterns, and the lights shaded with pink. The evening opened with the Little Old English dance, "The Keyes to Heaven" by pupils of the class, with Margaret Parker as the "Lady of the Mountain," who afterwards becomes the "bride" of Richard Latimer. This was followed by the bridal procession, to the music of the Mendelssohn Wedding March. Then followed an interpretive solo dance, to the music of Mendelssohn

The duke of Bedford's gold plate at Woburn abbey is among the most magnificent collections of its kind in the world. So lightly, however, was it regarded by the eighth duke, that on his death in 1752, gold plate worth ten of thousands of dollars was found strewn about the floor of his house in Belgrave square in such a deplorable condition that it narrowly escaped being consigned to the dustbin as worthless metal.

VOITURE PROMENADE PLANNED FOR THIS CITY AT STATE ARMORY

A score of Norwich ex-service men, all members of Voiture, No. 43, gathered with other members of the Voiture from various parts of New London County Saturday evening for a banquet and business meeting at Patisserie Inn, Niantic. The Norwich men made the trip by automobile. Following the banquet Jonathan L. Johnson, of this city, chef de gerre, presided at the business meeting. Plans were made for a Voiture promenade to be held in this city at the state armory, May 23rd. It is expected that a good sized class will be initiated.

Members of the Voiture from Norwich, Baltic, New London, Mystic and other towns in New London county were present at the meeting. Charles Olison of this city was chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment programme provided after the business session.

IMPURITY THROUGH THE EYES IS FATHER GALVIN'S THEME

Following suspension of the series during Lent, Rev. Myles P. Galvin, senior assistant at St. Patrick's church, took up again Sunday at the 9 o'clock mass his instructions on the Ten Commandments. He continued his sermons on the co-related Commandments of God, the Sixth, "Thou shalt not commit adultery" and the Ninth, "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife."

In earlier sermons Father Galvin had considered the sin of impurity through act and word. Sunday he took up the same offense against God, through immodest looks. Looks, he said, can be of four kinds—indifferent, unintentional, curious and actually impure. The eye may fall indifferently upon what, in itself might cause sin; accidentally, one may come upon some source of impure thinking, and then curiosity may actuate one, to read some book or witness some play or picture, or gaze upon some scene which may prove the source of danger. In this connection—the matter of curiosity—he warned his hearers of the danger of playing with fire. Even the holy King David, a man so dear to God and so active in God's service, yielded to his curiosity and fell into sin.

The eyes are the windows of the soul; through them man looks out upon the beauties of creation in which he sees the omnipotence and the goodness of God. These eyes are intended to be turned toward Heaven in worship and gratitude. But the same eyes may become the medium through which the devil enters the soul, dragging it down to filth. Our Lord has made it plain, that the man who looks impurely upon woman has already committed sin in his heart.

Incidentally, Father Galvin spoke to the young women of the congregation, reminding them of their obligation to avoid becoming the occasion of sin to those who look upon them. He said at the outset that he was no crank as regards the matter of dress; in his opinion an advance has been made, since the era when long dresses trailed on the walk, picking up dust and germs. But he warned the imprudent that when it becomes a question between style vs. salvation, the former pleads in no excuse. There is no need of being "old-fashioned" but there can be moderation and modesty in clothing, and the girl makes a mistake who fancies she can attract only by being ultra in dress. He expressed the belief that there were still many pure-minded, modest Catholic young men who looked to see among their girl friends that modesty which is woman's best ornament. The trained skirt has gone by; but that does not mean that to be up to date a young woman need show her knees, wear hose which barely cover her limbs, or a waist so low that it leaves little to the imagination.

The preacher narrated the incident of a missionary Father to whom a girl admitted dancing with her partner in a manner which she was aware aroused the evil passions of both, simply because, she maintained, if she did not she would be left a wall-flower. The missionary admonished her it were far better to be a wall-flower in the kingdom of God than a clinging vine in the domain of satan.

The point made was the danger of becoming an occasion of sin for another, giving that scandal which Our Lord has warned against, letting vanity urge one to actions which endanger, not alone one's own soul but the soul of another. This was accentuated by a reminder of the value God sets upon a human soul—"What doth it profit one to gain the whole world, yet lose his own soul?" And again, the searching question, "But what shall one give in exchange for his soul?" The entire matter was treated very delicately—for the central pews of the church and the galleries were filled by the parish children, since this is their special mass; but the preacher set forth in no uncertain terms the stand which the Roman Catholic church takes in regard to individual responsibility, the grave sin of giving scandal, the modesty and purity inculcated by teaching and preaching in a church body, which, throughout the world sets as an exemplar for womankind the Blessed Virgin, whose sinlessness led her to be chosen by God Himself as the worthy Mother of His Divine Son.

Later, Father Galvin assisted Rev. John J. Reilly, who read the low mass, in giving holy communion. It was the second Sunday after Easter, the epistle read in all the masses being 1 Peter 2, 21-25, and the gospel, John 10, 11-16, the latter the parable of the Good Shepherd.

CONNECTICUT SPEAKERS FOR HEALTH INSTITUTED

Included in the list of national and international experts on public health who form the faculty for the New England Health Institute, to be held at Portland, Maine, the week of May 4-9, are many men and women from Connecticut who are prominent in their respective lines.

The lectures for the entire week—which are open to the general public without any tuition charge—cover a wide range of topics. The relation of parents in connection with the developing mental characteristics of their children, skin infections in public schools, the prevention of measles, whooping cough and colds, how to secure an adequate supply of safe milk, nutrition for the family—these are only a few of the eighty-two subjects which will help parents and other heads of households to give better protection from preventable sickness to their loved ones.

Dr. Frederick P. Schenk, clinical director at Norwich State Hospital will be one of the speakers.

Girl Struck By Automobile

While crossing the street, Saturday, near her home, No. 166 North Main street, Yvonne Boucher, 10, was hit and knocked down by an automobile driven by Frank McHugh of this city. Dr. David A. Sussler attended the child after which she was taken to the hospital. Her injuries consist of bruises and contrusions about the body. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Boucher.

COURT PILES UP COSTS IN AUTOMOBILE CASES

The fact that a certain local court in Connecticut made nineteen different charges for the travel expenses of a few witnesses who testified in cases based on nineteen violations of the motor vehicle laws is revealed in the motor vehicle department's biennial report to the governor. The department has taken the stand that a court does not have authority to charge up costs for any act not actually done, and the expenses of the witnesses in the case cited would have been substantially the same if they had been called to testify against only one visitor.

The governor has been notified that the department has taken a strong stand on the question of deduction of taxes of costs in courts trying motor vehicle cases. "Costs are taxable under the fee system provided for in the general statutes," says its report, "and no costs are deductible from a fine imposed as the result of a conviction for violation of the motor vehicle law."

"All fines for breach of the motor vehicle law are payable to the state through the department" it is pointed out. "The process of systematic collection has raised many interesting legal questions, most of which have been decided by rulings and determinations in the office, but there are several matters which are still open. In 1919, the attorney general gave an opinion interpreting the law to the effect that the gross amount of any defaulted bond, given by a defendant charged with violation of the motor vehicle law, is payable to the state, without deduction of costs. In many courts, prior to the issuance of this opinion, it had been their practice, when a bond was forfeited, to deduct the costs from the face amount of the bond and send the balance to the state. Upon the application of the attorney general's opinion, controversies with some courts ensued, causing long continued and difficult processes of collection. There are still some uncollected amounts due the state in this connection, which it does not seem possible to collect. Some disposition of this matter must be made by the legislature."

DANGER CONSTANT FOR PEDESTRIANS ON HIGHWAYS

"Any pedestrian while he is on a state highway is in constant danger," says Motor Vehicle Commissioner Stoeckel's biennial report to Governor Trumbull. The number of automobiles in the state is increasing so rapidly that, in the opinion of the commissioner, "provision should be made in the future in the way of sidewalks or bypaths, to accommodate travelers on foot."

"Recognizing that this convenience cannot be universally perfected for years to come," continues the statement, "it is suggested that future highway engineering be so planned as to include this most desirable adjunct especially in the outlying portions of popular centers, where sidewalk systems are non-existent or incomplete. The pedestrian is entitled to state protection as much as is the driver of an automobile and so far as safety engineering can be applied to his needs, it should be done."

The motor vehicle department holds the view that many accidents have been prevented in Connecticut by the straightening of dangerous curves, removal of obstructions to sight lines, erection of fences and the painting of guiding lines for traffic on state highways.

"It is conjectural, of course, as to how many accidents have been prevented by these improvements," says Commissioner Stoeckel's statement, "but now all state highways in Connecticut are viewed from the angle of safety and are subject to plans for immediate or future development to that end. The Connecticut highway system has made progress beyond the most sanguine hopes of safety experts and has become as safe a place as possible for the operation of vehicles."

All receipts of the state motor vehicle department are used for the improvement of state highways, in accordance with the state law.

PROVIDENCE WILL HAVE CONVENTION OF D. O. K. K.

From August 10 until August 15, Providence expects to entertain 20,000 visitors when the Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan, recruited from the ranks of the Knights of Pythias, holds its national convention at Providence.

At least 50 drill teams and bands will compete for $30,000 in cash prizes during the convention. A feature of the gathering will be an illuminated parade, instead of the time-honored day march which plays a part in most big conventions. Brilliantly costumed delegations, teams and bands will take part in the night procession. Providence will be given another thrill when the 30 or more bands averaging about 30 pieces will be massed for a battle of music on Exchange Place in the heart of the city. There will be block dancing to which the public will be invited to waltz with the visitors.

Many of the visitors already have signified their intention of making a pleasure tour through New England either before the convention or afterwards. Hundreds of those are going to motor to Providence in order that they might have their machines for sight-seeing journeys throughout New England.

COLONIAL CLUB HELD ITS ANNUAL ELECTION

The annual meeting of the Colonial club was held Friday evening at the club rooms on West Main street, with President Harry C. McNaught in the chair.

The annual report of Treasurer W. Smith Allen showed the finances of the club to be in a very healthy condition, while that of Secretary Huntington showed a gain in membership during the year. Respect was paid to two members who died during the past year, Elmer R. Pierson and Charles Sherman. The report of John B. Oat, as collector, was most interesting and was accepted with the reports of the house and entertainment committees.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Harry C. McNaught; vice president, Edward Crowell; secretary, Lloyd Cochrane; treasurer, W. Smith Allen; collector, John B. Oat; director for three years, Dr. C. G. Thompson; director for one year, Thomas G. Washburn.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to the various retired members: William S. Huntington, as secretary; R. W. Otis, as director; and Charles S. Moore, as vice president.

During the evening the winners of the pinochle tournament held the past season at the club were announced as follows:

First series—Drake, first; Harwood, second; Amburn, third.

Second series—Amburn, first; McNaught, second; Dr. Thompson, third.

Third series — R. B. Washburn, first; T. G. Washburn, second; Drake, third.

Fourth series—Harwood, first; Amburn, second; Drake, third.

Refreshments were served by the entertainment committee which comprised John B. Oat, William S. Huntington, and W. I. Drake.

SHOWED INDIAN LIFE PICTURES AT Y. M. C. A.

A stereopticon showing of Indian life was the program at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon, when a large number of slides were thrown on the screen portraying the various types of Indians, and their peculiar customs and habits of life; also their type of warfare in the old days. During the meeting Secretary Hill mentioned the fact that the Indian like every other race, had his idea of God, and although it was to our minds a very crude idea, yet his heart went on as does ours toward a God, which he termed "the Great Spirit." We can learn some things from the Indian as we can from every race. It is our duty and our privilege to do all we can to make clear to the less favored races what we have learned of God, and what his attitude is to all men of whatever race or color.

Hugh Kinder furnished both vocal and instrumental music which was most acceptable.

COLLEGE CLUB WHIST HELD SUCCESSFUL WHIST

In the large dining-room of the Wauregan Hotel, at three o'clock Saturday afternoon the Norwich College club gave one of the largest benefit whists of the season. Forty-five tables were played. The holder of the highest score at each table received as a prize the dainty crepe luncheon set used on that table. These luncheon sets in varied soft pastel colorings made the room most attractive. The two highest scores received special prizes which had been donated by friends of the club. Home-made candy and salted nuts were sold at the tables and the hotel served ice cream and wafers at the close of the games.

The affair was in charge of the ways and means committee, the members of which are: Mrs. Louis H. Walden, chairman; Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, Mrs. Arthur L. Peale, and Mrs. Thomas K. Zabrskie.

The four young ladies from the academy acting as ushers were Miss Helen Tirrell, Miss Virginia Smith, Miss Elizabeth Johnson and Miss Helen Clapp.

One hundred and fifty dollars was realized making a total of $450 raised this year by the club. The financial success of the affair makes possible the payment of this year's scholarship to Connecticut College for Women. Such a scholarship has been given a Norwich Free academy graduate every year since the college opened in 1915.

One hundred and fifty dollars has also been added this year to a permanent scholarship fund.

While the club is small its membership represents twenty-three different colleges and universities. It maintains both an active and an associate membership in the American Association of University Women.

The railroads went onto the summer schedule Sunday morning. All trains are operated on standard time, but the time of arrival and departure has been advanced one hour. The trolley company is also operating on an advanced hour schedule. Sunday most of the local churches held services on standard time but it is expected that all will put the daylight saving plan into effect next Sunday.

POETRY

The Timeless Cross

Thou First and Last, the End and the Beginning!
Ere Earth was made, or time began to be,
Thou tookest pity on Thy creature sinning,
And plantedst in Thy thought the sacred Tree.

Then, when the time had had its ripe fulfilling,
Thou camest down our human dress to wear,
Flesh of our flesh to be, a Victim willing,
The world's sad sin upon the Cross to bear.

No chains of force to Thy rude altar bound Thee,
Only the cords of everlasting love;
And when the powers of darkness gathered round Thee,
Thou wouldst not call Thy legions from above.

O timeless Cross, so darkly set, and gory
With its blood-ransom for a world of sin!
O timeless Cross, set in eternal glory—
The love that made our heaven, and, calls us in!

Sacred Tree, all lit, and ever burning
With holy love, that sin-consuming flame!
The Love that satisfies my heart's deep yearning,
And whispers to me, "Jesus is My Name!"

—Henry Burton, D. D., in British Weekly.

The Dandelions

Upon a showery night and still,
Without a sound of warning,
A troops band surprised the hill,
And held it in the morning.

We were not waked by bugle-notes,
No cheer our dreams invaded,
And yet, at dawn, their yellow coats
On the green slopes paraded.

We careless folk the deed forgot,
Till one day, idly walking,
We marked upon the self-same spot
A crowd of veterans talking.

They shook their trembling heads and [illegible]
With pride and noiseless laughter!
When, well-a-day! they blew away.
And ne'er were heard of after!

Deposits which have been located are of enormous extent, but only a limited area is conclusively proved rich enough in platinum to be profitably exploited.

Pieces of leather believed to be six centuries old, dug up in excavating for the foundations of a new building in London, were still in serviceable condition, and were used by the workmen to repair their shoes. The find was made in a heap about ten yards square of waste and manufactured leather in a layer of black mud which apparently had been the dump of a medieval leather worker, deposited in the fourteenth or fifteenth century. The wet earth had preserved the material.

The ant that lives on wood doesn't have to digest it, according to studies conducted by L. R. Cleve and at Johns Hopkins University. In the ant's abdomen is a great hive of primitive animals belonging to the order of protozoa. These take into themselves the wood particles swallowed by the insect and digest them. Mr. Cleveland killed the protozoa by placing the ants in a temperature of 97 degrees Fahrenheit—7 degrees below the death point by heat of the ant. The ants themselves were not injured by this heating, but nevertheless they died within two or three weeks, even when surrounded with plenty of wood. Heated ants that were fed on humus, wood rotted or digested by fungi thrived like normal ants. Their return to good wood digestion went hand in hand with the return of the parasite menagerie to the food tracts.

HINDENBURG DECLARATION AWAITED BY FINANCIERS

America's Financial Judgment Will Not be Formed Until the New President of Germany Was Made a Declaration of Foreign and Internal Polices—Reaction in Wall Street to the Election News Sent German 7 Per Cent Bonds to a New Low Record—Supporting Orders Later Resulted in Recovery of Quoted Value—Bankers See No Cause For Alarm.

New York, April 27—The election of Field Marshal Von Hinderburg to the presidency of the German republic threw a temporary chill over the financial markets today, which was later from leading bankers and industrialists that the election outcome was not dispelled by reassuring statements likely to have any adverse financial or economic effects.

Negotiations for new loans and credits to German industries, bankers agreed, would be retarded by the establishment of the new government which might even result in the withdrawal of some American funds from Germany, America's financial judgment on Hindenburg's election, however, the bankers indicated, will not be formed until the new president has made a declaration of foreign and internal policies. If these are found satisfactory, it was said there is no reason why the flow of American capital into Germany should not be resumed.

Wall Street's initial reaction to the election news was found in heavy selling of the German 7 per cent. bonds which broke to a new low record, a reactionary movement in the stock market and a check to the recent upward movement in the foreign exchanges, notably sterling and French francs.

For the first time since the German republic loan was sold last fall, the bonds failed to command a premium, breaking through the offering price of 97 to a new low record at 91 5-8. Supporting orders subsequently lifted the price back to 93 1-8, which represented only a fractional loss on the day, selling spread to the Krupp 7 per cent. bonds on the New York curb market, which were driven down 1 3-8 points to 91. Fears that the German political and financial situation would be complicated further by Hindenburg's triumph depressed French bonds one to two points, while French francs and sterling exchange both reacted under European selling.

Bankers generally showed a disposition to await an announcement of Hindenburg's programme before passing judgment on the possible effects of his election. Support of the Dawes plan, it was held, would do much to assure Germany the continued cooperation of American financial interests.

Confident that the election of Hindenburg would not mean Germany's return to militaristic or monarchistic control, Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City bank, said that he saw no basis for pessimistic views regarding a solution of German difficulties. Germany will continue to work out her destinies satisfactorily, regardless of the election outcome, he added.

The views of American industrial leaders were epitomized by E. H. Gary, chairman of the U. S. Steel corporation, who expressed the belief that the election of Von Hindenburg would not affect adversely economic conditions in Germany, the United States or any other country.

"It seems apparent," he said, "that Von Hindenburg will use his utmost endeavors to preserve order and compel the observance of all laws of his country without fear or a disposition to favor. If such conditions result from his election and administration, Germany will make rapid progress in improving the economic conditions of her people and in the payment of all her obligations."

Alvin W. Krech, head of the Equitable Trust company, which has been active in German financing, held that the choice of Von Hindenburg as president had little, if any, political or financial significance.

"The election was limited solely to the presidential office," he said, "and involves no change in the political composition of the reichstag. The line-up of the various parties remains unchanged and the present government continues in power, being responsible only to the parliament."

GERMAN ELECTION MAIN TOPIC IN WASHINGTON

Washington, April 27—The decisive victory of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg in Germany's first election of a president by popular vote was the dominating topic of discussion today throughout Washington official life.

Views expressed as to the significance to be attached to the action of the German people in having conferred the presidency upon their national war hero, ranged from the extreme French attitude that it was the unmasking of militarism in Germany, to the German construction that it was a decisive defeat for communism rather than a victory for the reactionary political faction.

Between these two extremes lay the views of British, Italian, and American observers, with the impression general among them that a month or two must elapse after the inauguration of the president-elect before it will be possible to forecast accurately the effect of his election upon Europe's already complicated political and economic problems.

American opinion with relation to the German election continued for the most part to be closely screened behind the policy of silence that has been observed by Washington officials throughout. No word bearing any resemblance to formal comment was available from any official or even diplomatic quarter. Despite these restrictions, however, it was possible to form accurate impressions as to how the election was viewed in each national circle in Washington.

Treasury officials saw no economic threat in the election result, viewing the choice of Von Hindenburg as representing a reaction and therefore as indicating a tendency toward conservatism among the majority of the German people.

They were inclined to the opinion that there would be no apprehension as to the financial situation. Fear in some quarters that the change would cause important American banking interests to withhold support were discounted on the ground that American investors cared little about the political situation so long as a governmental machine was functioning as well as the German machine was regarded as doing. The reaction on the money market today, particularly as to German bonds, was regarded at the treasury as being a temporary effect, which would be eliminated upon a closer analysis of the election results.

PERFECTING THE APPEAL OF GERALD CHAPMAN

Hartford, April 27—The second step in the perfection of the appeal of Gerald Chapman from a conviction for first degree murder was taken this afternoon when his junior counsel, Nathan O. Freedman, filed with the clerk of the superior court a request of Judge Newell Jennings, trial judge in the case, to make a finding of facts and submitted a draft of the proposed finding to the court. The finding that the judge makes will form the detailed basis of the third and final step in taking the appeal of the condemned man to the supreme court, when it convenes in Hartford at the October term.

The request sets out that the facts named in the proposed draft of finding occurred or were argued in the trial and are material for the presentation of errors of law which he relies upon as grounds of appeal to the supreme court of errors. Forty-five questions of law as set out for review of the judge, which are followed with 115 pages of facts from which the alleged errors of judicial rulings are said to have arisen. The errors assigned relate largely to the admissability of evidence, such as the exhibits of three counterfeiting books, testimony as to other crimes committed by Chapman, at least by inference, testimony and exhibits of revolvers and ammunition, and the arguments of the state's attorneys, Hugh M. Alcorn and his assistant, Reinhart L. Gideon.

60 YEAR OLD WILL FILED FOR PROBATE IN NEW YORK

New York, April 27—A sixty year old will, one of the oldest ever filed here, was introduced in the surrogate's court by heirs of the late Frederick W. Suydam, who was related to some of the oldest families in the United States. Suydam, died at Lakewood, N. J., in February, 1923, after a committee had handled his business affairs for more than fifty years.

The will filed was executed in 1865. It was not found until a court had ordered the estate distributed on the assumption that the deceased has left no will. Although the will only mentions real property valued at $23,000 and personal property estimated as worth $100,000, it is believed the estate is worth considerably more than $1,000,000, having increased in value rapidly under the administration of the committee.

Forty cousins whose names include those of some of the country's most socially prominent families, are named in the will, including the Cuttings, Balls, Derhams, Goelets, Fellowes, Auchincloss, K. Kerochans, Winthrops, Wilmerdings, Livingstons, Whitneys and Warrens. Many f the legatees had died before the testator.

VISITED THE PROPERTY OF TYLER CRUTTENDEN

New Haven, April 27—The property of Tyler Cruttenden, known as Moose Hill inn and situated in Guilford, was visited today by the committee of the superior court of which James E. Wheeler, of this city is chairman. The committee is to adjust the financial damage dispute between Mr. Cruttenden and the state of Connecticut. The state highway department in widening and straightening the main highway in Guilford, cut down 15 old maple trees after Mr. Cruttenden is said to have made objections.

A. R. Booth, a real estate dealer, one of the witnesses heard by the committee today, gave it as his opinion that the land taken from the Cruttenden property is worth at least $300 and that each of the trees cut down is worth $100. Much of the questioning revolved around the value of the trees so far as the landscape was concerned, and also as to their value in drawing patrons to the inn.

Mr. Cruttenden maintained that the trees were worth a great deal more from the ornamental viewpoint.

HOW DRUNKEN MAN MAY BECOME SOBER IN HALF HOUR

Washington, April 27—A drunken person may, if he desires, become sober in about half an hour by the proper exercise of his lungs, Dr. Yandell Henderson of the Sheffield Scientific school at Yale told the National Academy of Science today.

The only thing necessary to eliminate the alcohol from the system, he said, is to induce rapid breathing, which would clear the poison through the lungs.

Dr. Henderson, with Howard W. Haggard, also of the Scheffield school, related experiments on a variety of subjects having to do with the activities of the blood stream, which, they said, had been found to be about twice as large as formerly supposed.

COCKING MAIN RAIDED BY MONTREAL DETECTIVES

Montreal, April 27—Montreal detectives today raided what they termed "the largest cockfighting arena on the North American continent," arrested eight men and seized fifty-seven high priced fighting cocks, some of them valued at $150 each.

The raid was at Ste. Maria Solome, near here. About seventy spectators made their escape from the arena, which is a modern cockpit, surrounded by banked seats to accommodate several hundred persons.

CHILD INSTANTLY KILLED BY A SPEEDING AUTOMOBILE

Norwalk, April 27—Mary Pucciarone, 11 years old, of Connecticut avenue, which is a part of the Boston Post road, was instantly killed tonight when she was struck by a speeding automobile as she was crossing the street in front of her home. The machine, after striking the child, continued on in the direction of Stamford. The girl was picked up by R. E. Tomison, of New Haven, who was driving his truck in the direction of New Haven, and was taken to the Norwalk hospital. Medical Examiner Samuel H. Huntington said that the girl was instantly killed.

The police of nearby cities and towns were notified, but no trace of the car which figured in the accident had been found late tonight. It was said by witnesses to have been a large machine and carried Connecticut license plates.

CLOSING ARGUMENTS IN LAKE COAL CARGO CASES

CRAZED COLORED HOLDUP MAN SHOT BY B. E. TERWILLIGER

(Special to The Bulletin)

Danielson, April 27—A colored holdup man, probably crazed, was shot and killed by B. E. Terwilliger of South Killingly shortly after 8 o'clock, Monday morning, on the Providence pike a little more than a mile east of here, near where a road leads off to the state highway into the Mashentuck district. Nothing was found on the dead man's person to give any clue concerning him and the body lay unidentified at the undertaking rooms of L. E. Kennedy throughout the day.

The dead man is between 30 and 35, of medium height and build. Four gold crowns on upper central teeth are a distinguishing mark.

The desperado carried out a reign of terror during a brief hour in the vicinity of where he met his death.

The first heard of his activities was when William M. Burr, a traveling salesman out of Boston, came speeding into town in his car and reported that a negro had tried to hold him up while he was coming along the state highway. When Burr failed to stop his machine the man had hurled a heavy stone through the windshield, showering Burr with broken glass.

Then came telephone messages for borough and state police. Chief John McFarland had Burr drive him out to where the attempted holdup occurred and State Officers A. W. Williams and Leonard E. Comstock of the First National Bank of Carnegie, which closed their doors this morning.

The Trust company was the first to close, on order from Peter C. Cameron, state secretary of banking. In a statement Mr. Cameron said the "reserve fund of the Carnegie Trust Co. has been below legal requirements for some days."

The First National closed a few minutes after opening this morning, officials stating later that they took action "on their own accord to prevent a run on the bank." Both institutions, of which John T. Bell is president, are located at Carnegie, Pa.

BINGHAM WAS SPEAKER AT U. S. GRANT MEMORIAL

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 27—Senator Hiram Gingham, of Connecticut, tonight at a dinner commemoration of the 103rd anniversary of the birth of General Ulysses S. Grant, said that West Point instructors "have still got their eyes fixed on General Grant and the tactics of his day."

It is unfortunate, he said, that "reverence for the somewhat remote past" makes West Point continue to teach horsemanship but not airplans observation. The army, he stated, should be brought to a fuller realization of the importance of aviation in directing battery fire and in scouting and that the solution of this problem does not lie in separating the aviation service from the army and navy.

SUES MOTHER-IN-LAW FOR $200,000 FOR ALIENATION

Mitchell To Fight For Unified Air Service

Former Assistant Chief of Army Air Service to Continue Efforts "Before the People and Congress."

Washington, April 27—Within a few hours after he had surrendered the stars which for almost five years had marked him a brigadier general, assistant chief of the army air service, Colonel William Mitchell appeared before a group of officers, who had gathered to bid him farewell, and took up anew his fight for a unified air service.

Although he had found it impossible to do anything to promote the air service through the war and navy departments, Colonel Mitchell said he would continue his efforts "before the people and the congress." He made it plain that he would continue his fight regardless whether he was a general or an officer of lower rank, whether he was in Washington or Texas.

When the speaking program ended, all present arose from their seats and stood silent as a testimonial to "our gallant leader and dear friend" as Brig. Gen. James E. Fichet expressed the sentiment of the officers.

Speaking of the unified air service proposal and the attitude of the war and navy departments in opposition to it, Colonel Mitchell declared, "We are basking more in the shadows of the valley of ignorance today than ever before." He outlined his plans for organization of the nation's air power and recommended creation of a force of 2,400 air machines, with adequate personnel and supply facilities.

With such an organization in existence, he said, the coast and borders of the United States would be safely protected. The units of the organization, he thought, should be based on the 14 largest cities, and be prepared at all times to take the field within two weeks' notice.

"Every first class power has such an organization," he declared. "During the war in Europe we were fighting ground armies. In the future, command of the air will dominate. Loss of the air will mean there is no longer need for ground armies. But it has been impossible to do anything to develop air power through the war and navy departments."

ARMED BANDITS MIXED COURTESY WITH CRIME

New York, April 27.—Five armed holdup men mixed courtesy with crime in stealing $12,000 from the offices of the Sheffield Farms company, Long Island City division of the Slawson-Decker Dairy company, Astoria, today.

The men entered the offices and robbed drivers of the company who were turning in their collections to the cashier. To one they returned $5 which he said was his own, and to another they tossed 52 cents for carfare.

When Laura Retthia, the cashier nearly fainted at being confronted with their revolvers, one of the bandits ran to her side and supported her while another brought a glass of water.

The robbers made their escape in an automobile, eluding a posse of employes after a running gun fight.

TO PROBE AFFAIRS OF CARNEGIE TRUST CO.

Pittsburgh, April 27.—State and federal banking officials today began investigating the affairs of the Carnegie Trust company and the First National Bank of Carnegie, which closed their doors this morning.

The Trust company was the first to close, on order from Peter C. Cameron, state secretary of banking. In a statement Mr. Cameron said the "reserve fund of the Carnegie Trust Co. has been below legal requirements for some days."

The First National closed a few minutes after opening this morning, officials stating later that they took action "on their own accord to prevent a run on the bank." Both institutions, of which John T. Bell is president, are located at Carnegie, Pa.
